

PREDICT HARDING WILL EVENTUALLY SIGN BONUS BILL

Close Friends Point Out He Never Said Publicly He Would Veto It.

WILL PASS THE SENATE Believed President Will Bow to Congress When He Sees Majority for Measure.

By David Lawrence. (Special Correspondent of The Evening World.)

WASHINGTON, June 13 (Copyright 1922).—The bonus and the tariff are getting intertwined. To make way for the one the progress of the other may be dangerously retarded.

All thought of jamming the bonus through in a few days is being abandoned. Senators who oppose the measure do not wish to filibuster or otherwise delay its passage.

The Senator who is planning to vote against the bonus wants to explain comprehensively all his reasons for so voting. There are at least thirty Senators who will vote against the bonus.

Should the tariff be sidetracked for three or four weeks it will be difficult to get back the momentum already achieved through night sessions in the last month.

As for the debate on the bonus, there is talk of a presidential address to the Senate when the measure reaches the floor of the Senate.

Mr. Harding has let it be known a half dozen times recently that his attitude toward the bonus has not changed since he asked the House to drop the matter if the action was not taken.

They pointed out that Mr. Harding has never said publicly he would veto the measure and that he hasn't said "veto" in so many words to members of Congress.

But Mr. Harding has privately expressed resentment against the idea that he wiggles and waddles and is reported to be getting ready to give a conspicuous example of consistency by signing the Bonus Bill.

So strongly entrenched has the idea become of having the President follow instead of lead Congress that Capitol Hill imagines the President will find some reason for accepting the will of both Houses on the bonus.

COLLINS MAY SIGN NEW CONSTITUTION FOR IRELAND TODAY

Hurriedly Called to London to Iron Out the Final Wrinkles.

LONDON, June 13 (Associated Press).—The equality of both Parliament and press over the postponement of Colonial Secretary Churchill's statement on the Irish situation indicates the belief that practically all difficulties have been removed and the draft of the Irish Constitution has been brought into harmony with the Anglo-Irish Treaty.

Michael Collins's arrival in London to-day was expected to mark the sealing of a final understanding. His presence is necessary in such an event, as he is the head of the Provisional Free State Government.

Doubts raised by the existence of the Collins-De Valera compact, it is said, may not have been finally dissipated, but the agreement does not stand in the way of a settlement.

Upon his arrival, Mr. Collins declined to discuss the situation other than to express the opinion that it was "very hopeful."

COMMONS REFUSES TO REBUKE SHORT FOR TRUE REPRIEVE

Home Secretary Upheld After He Tells Why He Halted Death Sentence.

LONDON, June 13 (Associated Press).—Denials that any favoritism was shown in the case of Major Ronald True, convicted slayer of Gertrude Yates, who was reprieved recently by Home Secretary Short on the ground that the prisoner was mentally unsound, was made by the Home Secretary in a detailed statement in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Mr. Short declared that he had merely been performing his statutory duty to order a court of inquiry into True's mental condition.

An effort was made by Joseph Stanley Holmes, Liberal member for North-East Derbyshire, to obtain leave to move adjournment of the House to debate the subject, but it resulted in failure.

Mr. Holmes's motion was supported by only twenty-eight members, amid cries of "shame!" from the remainder of the House.

HEIR OF DUMAS AID WINS ROYALTY CASE

Collaborator of "The Three Musketeers" Has Rights, Court Rules.

PARIS, June 13 (Associated Press).—Heirs of Auguste Maquet are entitled to half the royalties that he accumulated since 1908 on "The Three Musketeers" and other works written in collaboration with Alexandre Dumas.

The court made in the present suit brought by Mrs. Hoffe, widow of the nephew of Maquet.

Maquet sold his rights in 1846 to Dumas for the sum of 145,000 francs, but Dumas was only able to pay part of the money and Maquet sued to recover. He lost the suit.

The point made in the present suit was that, as the law relating to the duration of literary ownership of authors' heirs was changed from twenty to fifty years not long after the original contract was made between Maquet and Dumas, the rights should be extended an additional thirty years, under 1908, or fifty years from Maquet's death.
