WHO ARE ENEMIES OF PROTECTION?

Correspondence between the Whig Congressional Convention, for the 16th District, and BALLSTON SPA, Oct. 1, 1842. Hon. A. L. Linn: The Whig Congressional Convention for the XVIth District, held this day at Galway Corners, unanimously nominated you as the Candidate to represent said District in the twenty-eighth Congress; and a resolu-tion was passed directing the Chairman of the Convention to inform you of your nomination, and request your acceptance of the same.

Your obedient servant, LEBBEUS BOOTH, Chairman.

SCHENECZADY, Oct. 4, 1842. DEAR SIR: I have this day received your let-ter, as Chairman of the Whig Congressional Convention for the 16th District, informing me of my nomination as a candidate for Congress, and requesting my acceptance. I cannot do justice to my own feelings, without embracing the occasion to convey to the respectable Convention, whose organ you are, and the intelligent and patriotic people they represent, my heart-felt acknowledgements for this expression of confidence and favor. And when I remember, that on the part of the people of the Counties of Saratoga and Schenectady, this is a renewal of kindness, to which the people of Fulton and Hamilton, (among whom I am comparatively a stranger,) have most generously contributed, I can find no language with which to express the debt of gratitude which I shall ever owe them .-You. Sir, whose confidence and kindness it has long been my happiness to enjoy, will do me the justice to say, that the nomination which is so unanimously tendered, was not only unsought, but until within a few days, unexpected by me. In a large District, yielding to no other in the number of its men of distinguished talent, and ardent and patriotic attachment to the cause we espouse, I had reason to hope that some other than myself would have been selected. This renders the distinction you proffer doubly valuable, and claims my acceptance.

Short and humble as has been my public career, my political opinions are too well known to need revision. The principles and measures contended for in 1840, and which so signalized that glorious conflict, have lost none of their value with me. The delays and defeats they have undergone, have never, for one moment, discouraged or disheartened, but on the contrary, the very treachery they have suffered, has fortified the efforts of friends and exposed and disarmed the opposition of enemies. As adversity comes to a good man to chasten, and purify, and strengthen, so the protracted discussions which these measures have elicited, and the severe trials through which they have been doomed to pass, at the hands of open enemies and perfidious friends, have proved and tested their value, have more and more commended them to the confidence of the country, and will soon insure their final and lasting success. Industrious and faithful as has been the major ity in the present Congress, and much as it has accomplished in reducing the expenditures and reforming the abuses of government, it need not and ought not to be disguised, that most of the great questions which have agitated the country for several years past, remain unsettled; all the issues, with few exceptions, so successfully determined in 1840, have been either wholly postponed or imperfectly executed, and are again presented to the people for re-trial. With the history and causes of the defeat of these measures the people are well acquainted. The protracted sufferings which they are still enduring, as the fruits of a deranged currency, an unsettled system of revenue, and the want of the protection and beneficence of tration of every interest in the country, point to causes easily discoverable by men of ordinary in-telligence. They will be found in the unfortunate coincidence of the measures of the party, having at one and the same time the numerical strength in the State, and the power for every practical eivil purpose, lodged in the treacherous bosom of John Tyler, in the General Government. It was, I repeat it, an unfortunate coincidence for the people, that the majority at Albany and the minority at Washington, should have been able alike to postpone and undo, and by its affirmative action at one place, and its negative at the other, to have accomplished ends alike disastrous to the country. The administration of John Tyler has shed blight and mildew every where, but by this unlucky combination of circumstances, it has rained hail-stones upon the great State of New-York, and visited a greater degree of suffering upon her people, than upon any other. It was a matron Queen of England who said, that "the greatness of a Prince consisted in the riches and the Tax-layers at Albany. Their greatness (it any) consists in the poverty and distress of the

The great question of the Currency still remains unsettled. We exhibit the strange spectacle of a large and extensive commercial country, in which the great extremes meet in trade, as they do in all the sympathies of a common ancestry, common interests and hopes, yet having no medium of exchange, no national circulating medium. All the efforts of the present Congress, to this end, have proved abortive. In the fulfilment of our pledges to the people, we have passed two bills, either of which would have restored a sound and uniform currency, with many of its attendant benefits, yet this indispensable measure is withheld. How little is to be expreted for this measure, during the present administration, I need not foretell. Having no predilection for a Bank of the United States, except so far as an institution properly bearing such a title, is indispensable, my well-settled convictions, that prosperity can never abide with us, without the interference of the Government in the regulation of the currency and exchanges, will force upon me the duty to lend my humble efforts in aid of any measure, whatever be its name, which will accomplish so desirable an end. Hence I voted for the "Fiscal Corporation." finical as was its name, and imperfect as were many of its provisions. You know its fate. It perished, like its predecessor, by the hand of the Executive. Mr. Tyler, who approved and baptised, strangled it with inhuman cruelty, just as it was crossing the porch of life. I need scarcely add, that my opinions on the subject of national finance are unchanged. The occurrences of every day confirm me in an uncompromising hostility to every system, which like the odious Sub-Treasury, will invest the Executive Department of the Government with the control of the wealth of the nation, and subvert the liberties of

In regard to the engressing and interesting subject of the Tariff, I feel bound to say a few words. This measure so vitally affects every interest and every man, from the capitalist to the daily laborer. that even many of its former opponents, those who a few months ago were the open advocates of Free Trade, and under whose policy the Government, as well as the industrial classes, bad been borne to the verge of bankruptcy, are new driven by the force of circumstances, if not to withhold, at least to disguise and mystify their opposition to it. Some, in their zeal to share the credit of the odium of their fierce opposition to it, entirely overlook the history of the measure. They are seized with a sudden affection for a measure, against which they have been pledged as a party since 1833, and which their Representatives in Congress, as well as their newspapers, with few exceptions, opposed up to the very day of its passage. And to appear consistent, they manifest a corresponding disapproval of the course of those who, ever the open and frank friends of a Tariff, earnestly sought to take it out of the arena of party politics, and to give it permanency and rest. I would do no injustice to our adversaries. A few of them, I know, have chosen to understand this subject for themselves, and have become the sincere friends of the Protective System, and intend to separate from those who have so long struggled against it. But there are those who not only decline to become the open supporters of the measure, but who in the secret virulence of their opposition to it, and to those who are its friends, vainly endeavor to obscure the subject, and to classify with themselves, those who were in fact the most active agents in its adoption. I have seen the venerable and patriotic John Quincy Adams, who, I will venture to say, has written and spoken more in favor of a Protective Tariff than any other man living, accused of being its foe. And while writing this, a friend has called my attention to an article appearing in one of the opposition papers in this District, in which my name is announced as the anti-Tariff candidate for Congress, while every sentiment which I have ever uttered, and every vote which I have ever given on the subject, will prove me the fast and unflinching friend of a Tariff, insuring stability and security to domestic industry, and discriminating for that purpose. Accordingly in every shape in which the Tariff bills of the last session were presented, my vote will be found recorded in their favor. On a single occasion after Mr. Tyler had vetoed the bill, which had received my earnest efforts and vote, and when it was proposed, in obedience to the commands of the President, that we should strike out the Distribution clause, I was constrained, in defence of my constitutional rights as a representative of the people, and from did Mr. Fillmore and several others, through whose labors alone was the measure matured and finally adopted. The motives which influenced myself as well as others in opposing the bill at this stage of it, are known by all who have correct intelligence on the subject. Our votes against the bill in this shape were considered at Washington, as indeed they were, ultra Tariff votes. On the one hand, we knew from past experience, that no revenue system could be permanently maintained which looked to the fluctuating receipts from the Land sales for its supplies-that so long as the wants of the Government were to be supplied from the avails of the lands, the Tariff, as heretefore, would be a mere incident, dependent upon these receipts, and subject to constant vacillation, and not become, as it should, a measure independent of all others, cardinal, indispensable, and a reliable shield, behind which, in every emergency, the in-dustry of the country cyuld seek and find a sure defence. That my vote therefore on this occasion, should be repreved by the opponents of the Protective system, is not strange; but that it should be displeasing to those who profess friendship to the measure, can only be accounted for in their

a sincere desire to secure to the country a permanent Protective Tariff, to cast my vote against the proposition. So also on the same occasion did

Mr. Adams-and on another but similar occasion

lack of information, or in the hypocrisy of their professions. On the other hand, I did not feel at liberty, as your representative, to yield the principle of Distribution at such a crisis, and certainly I was not willing to legislate it away at the bid of the Executive at any time. Among the measures which in 1840 were expressly promised by the Whig party were, a Sound and Uniform Currency, a Protective Tariff, Distribution among the States of the avails of the Public Domain, and the total overthrow of the system of Executive dictation government, will long keep the subject uppermost and usurpation of the powers of the Government, in their minds—the ruin and distress now visited which until then had alarmingly prevailed. To these, at all events. I. as your representative, was fully pledged. In addition to my desire to redeem this pledge to the letter, I felt that each of these measures was indispensable to the restoration of the prostrate interests of the country, and its deliverance from the dangers which surrounded it. The measures of the currency had been twice smothered under the faithless exercise of the Executive Veto. The hostility of the Executive to a Protective Tariff, had led him to aim a shaft even at his own favorite measure of Distribution, and finally to resist by his Veto the Tariff bill it self. What did the President, who at that period had engrossed the whole legislative power of the government, require Congress to do? Why simply to obey his dictation-to surrender its legislative power and discretion-to yield up the principle of Distribution and to pass a Tariff bill which would meet present emergencies, and yet leave the question of Protection to Home Industry upon the wide and boisterous sea of party pol-

Had I conceived that in my representative capacity, I was the mere register of Executive edicts a mere automaton without personal honor or official power and responsibility, my course would have been plain; but feeling the proud conscious-ness that I was the Representative of sixty thousand intelligent and patriotic Freemen, I dared not, until every reasonable effort was exhausted and hope of success gone, vote for the measure .-But after I had asserted the rights of the people. as their Representative, by my resistance to these attempts to control the legislative independence of Congress, and to destroy an important feature of the bill, I did not feel at liberty any longer to withhold my assent, and accordingly voted for the Tariff bill which is now the law of the land. I freely confess I would not then have yielded, had I not seen the credit of the country sinking, at home and abroad, its great interests prostrated for want of public aid and protection, and widespread ruin overshadowing the land, without the hope of the adoption of any other means of relief. Be this as it may, I am quite sure that, if the Free Trade friends of a Protective Tariff will not credit me for this vote, every candid and enlightened citizen will do me the justice to concede, that if I erred, it was in an over-zeal for the true interests of a Protective Tariff.

My sentiments on the subject of the Tariff are too well understood, even to suffer from misrepre sentation; and while I have been gratified with the approval of my course, which the true friends of the measure have extended, I have been amused at the displeasure which its opponents have feigned. I trust, therefore, I shall not be considered as acting on the defensive. Every vote I have given while your Representative, has been notoriously on the side of the great principles which triumphed in 1840, and while I rejoice that we have been able to snatch even one of them from the treacherous embrace of the Executive and a factious minority, I for one shall ever regret that it was at the expense of two others of great, if not of equal value. The intrinsic value, however, of the Tariff, as adopted, will more than justify every effort which we shall put forth to sustain and preserve it, while the great price it has cost the country, in the long and tedious suffering endured for ten years past, in the loss to the States of the avails of the Public Lands, and in the humiliating submission to Executive dictation, will nerve every friend of Domestic Industry to the contest, and call forth the unwasted energies of the patriotic party to whom alone it looks for defence.

So long as it shall be my honor to represent you, the great measures to which I have hastily adverted, shall receive my earnest efforts. I despair of the success of no one of them. The scourge inflicted upon the country in the unexpected elevation of John Tyler, will soon be removed by the expiration of his constitutional term. The name of one who has never been suspected of the Tarisi bill of the last session, and to escape faithlessness, and who has long been the champion of these measures, is already inscribed on our banner. A large majority of the people are conshall crown his long life of devotion to his country, by perfecting in his own person, the very policy which already owes so much to him, and thus fill up the measure of his own and his country's happiness and glory.

Suffer me again. Sir to express to the Conventional of the shall be shall move those complaints, not by constantly paysising, but by strengthening the system. No greater mistake can be made than to suppose that Dyspepsia, or any other disease arising from debility, can be cured by a frequent forced action on the bowels, by purgative medicines. When this complaint exists, the system is already too weak, and every additional dose tends to make it more so. The Cordial, on the contrary, acting as a tonic, strengthens the digestive organs, and assists them to perform their functions as nature designed. Hence it is found to be efficacious also in those diseases peculiar to females, which arise more frequently from weakness than from any other cause. The Cordial likewise is a certain cure for the Nervous Headache, and affords relief in almost all affections of the nervous system. It is an excellent preventive of costiveness and low spirits. The aged and infirm of both sexes, and persons of sedentary habits, prone to costiveness, have experienced great benefit from it. It speedily promotes strength in all cases of general debility, restores a good and healthy appetite, gives tone and vigor to the whole system, and is highly beneficial as a tonic in convalegence from tevers and other acute discarders.

DR. RUSH'S LEGACY.—That celebrated physician, Dr. Benjamin Rush, could not have left a more valuable legacy to mankind than his invaluable HEALTH PILL. It is indeed a blessing to the afflicted, giving relief in all the usual cases of sudden illness or lingering disease with which humanity is distressed or the innctions of life are destroyed. It is now conceded by the most eminent of the medical faculty, that the stomach is the seat or fountain of all disease; that it is, as it were, the centre from which proceed all the evils produced by foreign or irritating causes, and which thence spread to every part of the animal system.

arises from some defect there. Chronic Hepatitis the most frequent form of the disease in this country, is slow in its progressive strength. The organ of attack will be for years suffering under its undermining influence, and yet no real disease will indicate to the patient the alarming state under which he is laboring; any transient indisposition he imputes to a different cause, never suspecting that the liver being affected is the latent source of these disturbed sensations; thus misled, it is not in his power to take the necessary precaution to guard against this insidious enemy to his repose. The symptoms of this disease are often slight and left for a considerable time, such as fulness after meals, accompanied by oppression, a feeling of vacuity at the pit of the stomach, The proper method of cure, therefore, is to attack the citadel in which the disease introoches itself; and no combination of medical agents has yet been discovered so efficacious for this purpose as the preparation of the late Dr. Rush, and which, from the universal success attending their regions are received for early half a centry. administration, during a practice of nearly half a century administration in "Infallible Health Pill." Their great virwere styled his "Infallible Health Pill." They great vir were styled his "Infamore Health Fill." There great vic-ture is, that they arrest disease in its first approach. They are presentives as well as remedies; and we will venture to say that it taken by persons when they are first affected with symptoms of illness, many a case, that is either serious or fatal, might be avoided.

Let the afflicted without hesitation avail themselves of this invaluable learney, and they will have reason to bless the other parts of the system.

From these views, then, there can be no doubt that the disorders of the liver are of the first importance, and every effort used to remedy them should be conducted on rational principles, and by timely and efficient attention and the use of the most proper medicines, many very serious consequences may be prevented, which too often are entailed on the aonstitution by procrastination.

As a remedy peculiarly adapted to the cure of liver affections, Dr. Starkweather's Hepatic Elixir has proved to be the most potent and efficacions, and every day's experience confirms more positively this assertion. It is candidly believed that no preparation has ever been before the public that has met with such unexampled approbasion from distinguished sources, disinterested judges, and grateful patients as this medicine, and a greater amount of suffering has been mitigated and more cures permanently effected by it than any other medicine extant.

So confident is the proprietor of its curative properties in every case, that when the medicine is used according to his directions and the patient is not satisfied or convinced, after DARR'S LIFE PILLS .- The immense PARR'S LIFE PILLS.—The immense increase of the sale of these Pills for the short time they have been intraduced into this country, is truly astonishing, and a convincing proof of the conquering power of this fine herbal medicine in remedying disease. At this season of the year, when the system is relaxed by the heat of summer, a course of this invaluable medicine will clear of the sour and bad humors which heat invar ably generates. The liver, which generally gets sluggish, will be put into healthy action, and thus be able to perform the functions allotted to it, the body altogether will be reinvigorated, and prepared to undergo whatever change the winter may bring on. In billious complaints, heavy colds and inflammations, they afford a speedy relief, and to the female constitutions they are principally applicable, as many who have tried them can certify. In fact, every one who has used tions, they afford a speedy relief, and to the female constitutions they are principally applicable, as many who have tried them can certify. In fact, every one who has used Part's Life Pills seems to be instilled with new life, for their fine, tonic properties invariably restore the stomach to a healthy longing for food, sound sleep, and all the concomitants attendant on good health. The extent to which they are used in Europe, among all classes of society, is beyond conception, for more than $0,000 boxes are there sold weekly, showing that all who use them appreciate their worth.
