MR. CLAY'S SPEECH

At the Lexington Mass Meeting, 13th inst.

Reported for the Pallad, North American, &c. &c. RECEIVED BY EXPRESS.

After the organization of the meeting, Mr. CLAY rose and addressed it substantially as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen, The day is dark and gloomy, unsettled and uncertain, like the condition of our country...

The day is dark and gloomy, unsettled and uncertain, like the condition of our country...

I have come here with no purpose to attempt to make a long speech, or any ambitious oratorical display...

It may be argued that the President and Senate possess the power, without any express limitation...

I am bringing to you new and speculative theories, the statute-book of the United States is full of examples...

Thus the War, which was produced by Congress, and a bill was prepared to raise 50,000 volunteers... from that of the most part of the Federal party during the War of 1812... The War of 1812 was a war of national defence...

A declaration of War is the highest and most solemn exercise of sovereignty... The Convention which framed the Constitution had been often and greatly ascertained...

The Constitution provides that Congress shall have power to make rules concerning captures on land and water...

complished by overwhelming force and the complete existence of fatal dissensions in the bosom of Poland... The first after overrunning a large portion of the world to subvert a premature and ignominious death...

The power of the United States is competent to do what Mexico is unable to do... It would be necessary to occupy all its strongholds, to disarm its inhabitants, and to keep them in constant fear...
