

The title and estate of the Bank was devised by the State of New York, and other States would soon be following its glorious example.

A. J. Wynkoop, of Chemung, said that he wished to see a national system of mechanics, in which every variety of mechanic and agricultural art could be thoroughly acquired; where opportunities would be afforded to every poor boy and every young man to receive an education in books, not only in every branch of mechanical arts, but in the practical and useful arts, such as carpentry, working and thinking men, and useful citizens.

Mr. Augustus Pagano said that he had long felt a deep interest in this subject. Such an institution as the People's College would afford the means of educating the mechanic and the artisan. In all nations, said the speaker, we find that in proportion to the extent of the manufacturing system, the magnificent achievements of capital in building its temples and palaces, in an exact ratio to these great works are the servility and the poverty of the people. And the consequence of this was that they were merely taught to labor, with no higher idea of a higher destiny in this world or the next.

Mr. R. D. Anderson, Benjamin Price, and Thomas P. Newhall, respectively made a few appropriate remarks after which a Committee was appointed to call future meetings for the purposes of presenting the matter of this Association before the public. The Committee appointed consists of the following gentlemen: R. D. Anderson, Hon. Francis Pickens, Hon. John Nelson, and Wm. P. Foster. The meeting was adjourned, it being past 10 o'clock.

The minutes, on motion of Alderman Oakley were not read. Alderman Ward called the attention of the Board to the fact of the death of Hon. William Rufus King, President of the United States. He made an appropriate speech in relation to the death of the distinguished statesman, in which he alluded to his services and popularity. He also referred to the loss of so many distinguished statesmen, during the past few years. In closing he offered the following preamble and resolutions, which were, after a short discussion, adopted, and remarks by Alderman Barr, followed.

Resolved, That the Board of Health, in view of the death of Hon. William Rufus King, President of the United States, do hereby resolve to have a public meeting to be held at the City Hall, on Friday, the 21st inst., at 10 o'clock, for the purpose of considering the propriety of asking an increase to the present prices of wages. The meeting was organized by choosing Mr. Frazer President.
