13th ult., where the Emperor of Austria was staying. Their conference had great significance.

Important news is hourly expected from the Baltic. The English squadron with French troops passed Gotland on the 17th July.

A telegraph from Stockholm states that a heavy cannoning had been heard at intervals in the direction of Bornholm.

Rear-Admiral Martin with 5 ships was watching the Hebrides.

Rear-Admiral Chads was to effect the bombardment of Bornholm as soon as the French troops destined to occupy the island should arrive.

The main force of the allied fleets was at Led Sound, south of the Aland Islands, on the 15th July.

Another letter from Constantinople affirms that the expedition to the Crimea is positively decided upon, and that it will be commanded by Marshal St. Arnaud.

A report was current in London but believed to be premature, that Bismarck had been taken with great loss on both sides.

The most important news, however, is that given in the London Times of the 24th inst., to the effect that the Russian army was in full retreat from Fratschi to Bucharest.

The news from Spain is more favorable, and tranquility has been preserved. Espartaco entered Madrid on the 15th of July and was received with enthusiasm.

A proclamation had been issued by the Queen testifying her confidence in the people and in Espartaco. This manifesto had been well received.

The militia was doing duty at the palace conjointly with the infantry of the line. Detachments of the garrison and of the civil guard had fraternized with the national guard at the Puerto del Sol.

The Queen has retired General O'Donnell, Serrano and Dulce to the coast, and recalls the Generals and other officials, banished by the San Luis Administration.

O'Donnell entered Seville with his forces on the 21st July. On the 24th General Blaser was at Badajoz, and about to surrender his command to General Rosendo.

Queen Christina is allowed to leave the kingdom without violence, but if she hesitates, she is to be removed by force.

There is too much reason to believe that the popular Constitution was by the people of Denmark in 1848 and 1849 has disappeared by a stroke of the pen.

A telegraphic dispatch from Copenhagen announces that on the 19th ult. the King, assuming that autocratic power against which the Diet has frequently protested in advance, issued an edict decreeing a new political organization for the entire monarchy.

A council for the realm is to be formed, and to be composed of fifty notables, who will meet at Copenhagen once in two years, and have a deliberating voice in respect of finance.

somewhat eccentric. Time will show whether my estimate of Austria is correct or not.

We again have a telegraphic dispatch from Vienna, which is not yet confirmed, reporting a new defeat of the Russians attacking Gurguro, and failing to carry the fortifications raised by the Turks, and again as a set-off, a new defeat of the Turks in Asia, near Ardahan, where Gen. Adramloff is said to have taken the Turkish camp.

In all probability it is the same battle of which I have already informed you upon Turkish authority, which described it as a victorious Russian action of which neither of the belligerents has reason to be very proud; which, however, was sufficient to serve as the theme for two conflicting bulletins.

We hear nothing more from Creassia, but since the English officers were declined by Shany, a new attempt has been made to bring the mountaineers under the control of Europe.

A Turkish Pasha was sent by the Sultan to the Caucasus, who is to prepare the Circassians to be offered by foreigners and guided by western diplomacy.

The Russians seem not to have any intention to withdraw from Wallachia. Prince Paskiewitch having recovered from the bruise he had received before Silistria, has been induced once more to take the command of the army, which he had three or four days ago, when his plan of evacuating the Principality was not approved by the Czar.

In Russia there is a considerable excitement fostered by the Czar against Austria and her ingratitude. It would likewise be very strange if a rupture should now take place between the two Emperors, just about the time of the fifth anniversary of the day of Vilagos.

Still, the danger of a rupture between the Kaiser and the Czar is not yet imminent. A new ultimatum is still to be sent to St. Petersburg from Vienna, before Francis Joseph sends his armies into the Principality.

In the meantime Austria has gained one great point. As early as 1850 she endeavored to have her Polish, Italian, Croatian and Hungarian provinces incorporated into the Germanic confederacy, in order that she might have the command of all the military forces of Germany in case of a rising in Hungary and Italy.

The scheme failed at that time, for England and France opposed it. But now, under the cover of the Oriental question, a defensive and offensive treaty has been signed between Austria and Prussia, guaranteeing the German and extra-German possessions of each power to one another, and this treaty has been submitted to the German Diet, and accepted and ratified by all the Germanic Confederation.

That is to say, in 1853, of Austria's endeavors, which were foiled in 1850, has been carried in Frankfurt without any opposition from the French and English diplomacy.

Austria has therefore already won so much by her skillful policy, that without having entirely broken her relations with Russia, she has insured for herself the support of all Germany against Poland, Hungary and Italy.

I know well that such a support is of very questionable value, since a triumphant rising of the people in either of those countries would necessarily be followed by revolutions in Germany; still Austria has realized her ardent desire, and thinks herself safe.

The revolution in Spain has not yet ended. The Queen has submitted to all the conditions imposed by Espartaco; we do not as yet know their substance, but it is believed that the principal points are, the immediate departure of Queen Christina and of Count Arana from Spain, and the convocation of a Constitutional Assembly elected by universal suffrage, which shall determine the future of Spain.

O'Donnell is said to be willing to accept the new order of things. Of Narvaez we hear nothing at all, and this is rather ominous. Besides, Espartaco, as well as Evrardista San Miguel, the new Minister of War, can tell a long tale about promises broken by the father and by the mother of the Queen, and therefore the opinion prevails that even the fate of the Queen is yet settled, and that the Cortez may perhaps declare the throne vacant by her deposition.

The next few months will be agitated in Spain, and a speedy settlement of the spirit aroused by the insurrection—was the case in Portugal, when Salbarrin rose—must be expected. Besides, Queen Christina is rich and will not easily give up the game. She has once before been expelled by the outraged morality of the Spanish nation, but contrived to have Espartaco put down by Narvaez and his friends, who were soon dismissed and exiled by the victorious Camarillo.

The very last telegraphic dispatches announced the crossing of the Danube by the allied Anglo-French army at Turukial; but we are likewise informed that Omer Pasha has received orders not to advance from Gurguro, and to have the retreating Russians unimpeded. Diplomacy continues to stifle the energy of the armies. The Times continues to predict an attack upon the Crimea and Sevastopol, but the public seems to understand already that such is not to be the case, and that the war trumpet in the Mediterranean papers was only sounded in order to get the additional three millions sterling voted without opposition.

The Ministry has again been defeated on two bills, though Lord Palmerston exerted himself strongly to ward off the blow. His star is on the wane. Since he has been at the head of the Home Office, he has been four idle and impractical, and the prestige which surrounded his foreign policy has faded away by the revelations of the press and the unending attacks of Mr. Urquhart. As to Franco, I can assure you that the war is not popular with any class of the nation. France has no need of protecting the overland route to India, and does not like territorial acquisitions in the East. The coat of Algeria has cured the nation of its encroaching spirit.

ONE WEEK LATER FROM EUROPE

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIPS UNION AND AMERICA.

NOTHING NEW FROM TURKEY.

RUMORED CAPTURE OF THE ALAND ISLES.

COUP D'ETAT IN DENMARK.

THE SPANISH REVOLUTION SUCCESSFUL.

THE RISING IN ITALY SUPPRESSED.

Dates: London, Aug. 3; Paris, Aug. 1.

By the arrival yesterday of the U. S. Mail Steamship Union at the port from Havre, via Southampton, August 2, and the Canada Steamship America at Halifax, from Liverpool August 5, for Boston, we have one week's later intelligence from Europe.

The America sailed at 7 o'clock last evening for Boston, where she will be due early on Friday morning. The Washington arrived off Cowes on her way to Bremen on the 19th ult.

The America arrived at Liverpool from Boston and Halifax on the 13th ult. The U. S. Mail steamer Baltic arrived at Liverpool at A. M. on the 13th.

The West India Steamer Toronto arrived at Southampton on the 23rd ult., with $1,740,000 in specie. The news from the Danube continues generally favorable to the allies, but nothing decisive has taken place.

On the morning of the 30th the Russians are stated to have attacked the Turkish and French camp at Gurguro, but were totally defeated with the loss of 2,000 killed, and a large number of prisoners.

The Russians were retreating in forced marches. They had quitted Fratschi, and it was occupied by the Turks. The evacuation of Wallachia was completed, and a proclamation had been issued declaring that all the soldiers who remained behind would be considered deserters.

The Russian troops were being concentrated on the Sereth. Omer Pasha was expected to arrive at Bucharest on the 31st July, and would meet with a brilliant reception.

It is believed that force must be employed to dislodge the Russians from Moldavia. The Austrian army under Prince Liechtenstein is ordered to advance from Pesth to Gallicha—the army in Gallicha moving toward the frontiers.

The Archduke Albrecht has removed his headquarters to Ciomstad, in the south-east corner of Transylvania. The total Austrian force on the frontiers reached 330,000 men under command of Baron Dukers. The frontier have not been crossed, but the preparations for hostilities were on a colossal scale.

Russia makes no warlike demonstration toward the Prussian frontiers. The cholera was increasing in violence at Constantinople. The third French division left Varna on the 27th, for Kistenje and Silistria.

The accounts from Montenegro are unsatisfactory. Prince Daniel was assuming a threatening attitude toward the Turks at Apeta. The allied fleet, with Gens. Carrobert and Brown, had proceeded toward the Crimea coast to reconnoitre.

The Times declares positively that a force of from 80,000 to 100,000 men—British, French and Turkish—will immediately invade the Crimea, and attempt to effect a lodgement on the heights that command Sevastopol. From Asia, the reported defeat of the Turks by the Russians at Kara is confirmed, and the Russians were being besieging Kara.
