

Business Notices.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.—There will be some difference of opinion as to the result of the election next Fall...

EVANS' EXTENSIVE CLOTHING WAREHOUSE, No. 22 and 24 Fulton St. New York.

WILDER'S PATENT SALAMANDER SAFES, Secured by the celebrated Dr. H. B. Wilder...

HERBING'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES.—The best collection of safes with H. B. Herbing's Patent Lock...

JET ORNAMENTS.—New patterns of Bracelets, Par-Bris, Pins, Necklaces, Brooches, Earrings, &c.

PUTTING THE EVOLUCION.—A new Musical Instrument, combining the advantages of the Organ, Melodion...

BE PREPARED.—The fervent heat of Summer is making its appearance, and, as usual, several complaints are becoming prevalent...

CHOLERA, DYSENTERY, COLIC, CROUP, VOMITING, &c. are immediately cured by Dr. FORTY'S celebrated VENTRIAN LINIMENT.

GROVER & BAKER'S FAMILY SEWING MACHINES.—Would you lessen the labor, increase the interest, and improve the health of your family...

RUPTURE.—Only PRIZE MEDAL awarded to MARSH & CO. by the Industrial Exhibition of 1854...

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—The healing and cooling effect of this balsamic OINTMENT upon the skin...

CHRISTOPHER'S HAIR-DYE, WIGS AND TOUPES.—and pronounced above all competitors.

WIGS.—HAIR-DYE.—WIGS.—BATCHLOR'S WIGS and TOUPES have improved peculiar to their houses.

POSTAGE STAMPS (3 cents and 10 cents) FOR SALE at this Office.

TAKING VOTES FOR PRESIDENT.—We do not approve of amateur voting for President on street corners, rail-cars, &c.

FOR JOHN C. FREMONT.....121 For Millard Fillmore.....184 For James Buchanan.....93

TRYING TO RAISE A BREWERY.—A grand attempt was made by the Empire Club last evening to get up a mass meeting in the Park for the purpose of ratifying the nominations of Buchanan and Breckinridge.

About an hour before sunset a band appeared and commenced the exercises with playing Hall Columbia and other national airs.

THE SPEAKERS.—The speakers on the "main question" but their remarks were similar in character to those the gentlemen have given utterance to before on the same subject.

THE SPEAKERS.—The speakers on the "main question" but their remarks were similar in character to those the gentlemen have given utterance to before on the same subject.

THE SPEAKERS.—The speakers on the "main question" but their remarks were similar in character to those the gentlemen have given utterance to before on the same subject.

New-York Daily Tribune

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9, 1856.

The Wrecks of Kansas Officially Reported. REPORT OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE OF INVESTIGATION...

Governer Seward's Speech on the Immature State of Kansas. The Great Speech of Governor Seward on the Immature State of Kansas...

Sumner's Speech. Now ready, the Hon. CHAS. SUMNER'S Speech in the Senate on Kansas Affairs—32 pages.

The Hon. Schuyler Colfax's Speech. The Speech of the HON. SCHUYLER COLFAX of Indiana, in the House of Representatives...

Life of Col. Fremont. An original and authentic Biography of the People's candidate for President is now in course of preparation...

A few more advertisements will be received for THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE of this week if handed in early to day.

The Senate yesterday destroyed the House bill to admit Kansas, substituting its own so-called Pacification bill instead...

The House concurred with the Senate in passing the three River and Harbor bills over the President's Veto by a decided vote.

The United States District Court for the District of Columbia—Judge Crawford, we believe, presiding—has fixed the cost of surprising, assaulting and beating a Senator of the United States...

The following correspondence between Col. FLEMING and the Committee of the Philadelphia Convention instructed to apprise him of his nomination as the People's Candidate for President...

PHILADELPHIA, June 19, 1856. SIR: A Convention of Delegates, assembled at Philadelphia on the 17th, 18th and 19th days of June, 1856...

The undersigned were directed by the Convention to communicate to you the fact of your nomination, and to request you in their name, and as they believe, in the name of a large majority of the people of the country, to accept it.

H. S. LANE, President of the Convention, JAMES C. ASHLEY, Secretary, ANTHONY BLEEKER, JOSEPH HORNLOWER, E. R. HOAR, THADDEUS STEVENS, JOHN C. BINGHAM, JOHN W. FULLER, C. C. CLEVELAND, CYRUS ALDRICH.

Col. Fremont's Reply. NEW-YORK, July 8, 1856. GENTLEMEN: You call me to a high responsibility by placing me in the van of a great movement of the People of the United States...

In the letter to me, you appear to lay great stress upon the fact that the Republican party has seen fit to pursue, and that it has not met the American party half way in the great work of uniting the whole North against the corrupt policy of the present Administration...

Now the vital error in this is its assumption that the Philadelphia Convention was exclusively "Republican," representing none but "the Republican party."

The Anti-Nebraska "Americans" having been early and earnestly invited to be represented in the Convention on terms of perfect equality with the Anti-Nebraska "Democrats" and "Repubwould be to sacrifice the peace and character of the Country, when all its interests might be more certainly secured and its objects attained by just and healing councils involving a loss of reputation.

Nothing is clearer in the history of our institutions than the design of the nation in asserting its own independence and freedom, to avoid giving countenance to the Extension of Slavery.

It would be out of place here to pledge myself to any particular policy that has been suggested to terminate the sectional controversy engendered by political animosities, operating on a powerful class bandied together by a common interest.

The great general region of the middle latitudes left to the emigrants of the Northern States for homes cannot be too soon disarmed of its pernicious force.

If the People intrust to me the administration of the Government, the laws of Congress in relation to the Territories shall be faithfully executed.

The letter on current politics of our fellow-citizen GEORGE LAW to the Hon. Gustavus Adolphus Serregey of Buffalo strikes us as one of the most straightforward, cogent, common-sense documents that the present crisis has produced.

The change in public feeling which has made such a conjunction as we have described above possible, has been so gradual in its approach that men do not observe generally how very old it is.

On one point, however, we think Mr. Law has not justly apprehended and thoroughly weighed the facts; and we respectfully ask him to reconsider it.

In the letter to me, you appear to lay great stress upon the fact that the Republican party has seen fit to pursue, and that it has not met the American party half way in the great work of uniting the whole North against the corrupt policy of the present Administration...

Now the vital error in this is its assumption that the Philadelphia Convention was exclusively "Republican," representing none but "the Republican party."

The Anti-Nebraska "Americans" having been early and earnestly invited to be represented in the Convention on terms of perfect equality with the Anti-Nebraska "Democrats" and "Repubicans," it was deemed superfluous to treat as strangers, allies or guests, those who had the same rights and privileges in the body of the Convention with the rest of us.

Solomon was mistaken. There are new things under the sun—or at least under the candle-light. For example, the present Lord Mayor of London, Adelman Salomons, is a Jew—ne of the House of Israel, and perhaps, one of the Tribe of David.

It is an opinion very prevalent among Americans, and one that is most actively promulgated wherever any filibustering electioneering capital is to be manufactured, that Mexico, with the whole of the Spanish-American colonies, is destined to be appropriated by, or annexed to, the United States.

This party, headed in the northern provinces by Carvajal, and having its headquarters on the Texas frontier, was twice bold enough to invade Mexico and array itself against Santa Anna.

The last evidence brought to prove that Col. Fremont is or was a Catholic is a person known as Alderman Fulmer of the Sixteenth Ward of ment all it desires, in its own particular sphere. This state of things cannot, however, be of long duration, for so soon as the new Constitution is adopted they will be compelled by the force of public opinion to combine, for the Mexican people at large look for their national security only to an intimate connection of the provinces, though they support their partial independence from each other, so long as no danger threatens from the outside.

Although but little harmony prevailed among these provinces during their last struggle against Santa Anna and the military chiefs, the greater is the argument in favor of the capacity of the leaders and the confidence of the people in them.

It is not for the interest of the United States to adopt eight millions of people so different in language, in religion and in prejudices, for the attempt to Americanize so great an amount of foreign blood would be futile.

The present misunderstanding between England and the United States should be adjusted in a manner worthy of two countries which are, each in its special way, the leaders of civilization in the world.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

ment all it desires, in its own particular sphere. This state of things cannot, however, be of long duration, for so soon as the new Constitution is adopted they will be compelled by the force of public opinion to combine, for the Mexican people at large look for their national security only to an intimate connection of the provinces, though they support their partial independence from each other, so long as no danger threatens from the outside.

Although but little harmony prevailed among these provinces during their last struggle against Santa Anna and the military chiefs, the greater is the argument in favor of the capacity of the leaders and the confidence of the people in them.

It is not for the interest of the United States to adopt eight millions of people so different in language, in religion and in prejudices, for the attempt to Americanize so great an amount of foreign blood would be futile.

The present misunderstanding between England and the United States should be adjusted in a manner worthy of two countries which are, each in its special way, the leaders of civilization in the world.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

ment all it desires, in its own particular sphere. This state of things cannot, however, be of long duration, for so soon as the new Constitution is adopted they will be compelled by the force of public opinion to combine, for the Mexican people at large look for their national security only to an intimate connection of the provinces, though they support their partial independence from each other, so long as no danger threatens from the outside.

Although but little harmony prevailed among these provinces during their last struggle against Santa Anna and the military chiefs, the greater is the argument in favor of the capacity of the leaders and the confidence of the people in them.

It is not for the interest of the United States to adopt eight millions of people so different in language, in religion and in prejudices, for the attempt to Americanize so great an amount of foreign blood would be futile.

The present misunderstanding between England and the United States should be adjusted in a manner worthy of two countries which are, each in its special way, the leaders of civilization in the world.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.

The man whom we ought to select as our member of this amicable tribunal should be, not a sovereign, but one eminent on account of his learning, and whose studies and pursuits in life have made his mind familiar with international law, and qualified him in a special manner to elucidate and explain its different shades of meaning.