

Business Notices.

PROPOSITION FOR THE AVOIDANCE OF ALL FUTURE DIPLOMATIC CONFLICTS... [Text continues with details of a diplomatic proposal]

CONGRESS OF FASHION—OPENING OF THE SEASON... [Text continues with details of a fashion congress]

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES... [Text continues with details of Singer's sewing machines]

PIANOS AND MELODEONS from eight different manufacturers... [Text continues with details of pianos and melodeons]

WILDER'S PATENT SALAMANDER SAFE... [Text continues with details of a patent safe]

THE CATARRH DOCTOR... [Text continues with details of a medical treatment]

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS... [Text continues with details of Holloway's pills]

MUTTER'S EOLIPSON—a new Musical Instrument... [Text continues with details of a musical instrument]

JET BRACELETS AND ORNAMENTS—Just received from Europe... [Text continues with details of jewelry]

10,000 cures have been made this month of Diphtheria... [Text continues with details of a medical cure]

POSTAGE STAMPS (3 cents and 10 cents) FOR SALE at this Office.

New-York Daily Tribune

MONDAY, AUGUST 25, 1856.

If the Rev. Parker Butler is in this vicinity we should be greatly obliged by his sending us his address to this office.

TO CORRESPONDENTS. No notice can be taken of anonymous communications... [Text continues with instructions for correspondents]

A limited number of advertisements are taken in THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE at the rate of one dollar a line... [Text continues with details of advertising rates]

Gov. A. H. REIDER has consented to speak in this city at a meeting of the friends of Free Kansas... [Text continues with details of a political meeting]

We give this morning a mass of letters, newspaper accounts and dispatches concerning the fresh outbreak in Kansas... [Text continues with details of news from Kansas]

The latest dispatch from St. Louis states that the story of the Free-State men of Kansas having captured Leecompton... [Text continues with details of news from St. Louis]

The steamer North American arrived at Quebec yesterday morning, with Liverpool dates to the 13th inst... [Text continues with details of a ship arrival] no change; broadstuffs were considerably firmer at improving prices. Consols, 95 to 95 1/2.

We ask every Republican to read to his neighbors and those he may meet the Proviso inserted in the Army Appropriation bill... [Text continues with a call to action for Republicans]

It will be seen that the President is now restrained by this Proviso from upholding and enforcing the Constitution and all the laws of the United States... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

Practically, the President will employ the Army just as he sees fit to do, whether the bill passes with or without the Proviso... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

We fear the bare majority so gallantly presented by the friends of Free Kansas in the House cannot be maintained through the week now opening... [Text continues with a critique of the House's actions]

We do not wonder that President Pierce should have called Congress together again to compel it to vote the necessary supplies for the Army... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

As the business of the country grew, and men were more and more absorbed in developing its material resources and adding to their wealth and comforts... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions] thousand to flight. Having first, by force and fraud, created their bogus Legislature in Kansas, and given Pierce and his fellow-conspirators the pretense of a de facto Government... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

Now if things had gone as these conspirators intended, and as they may yet get if the rising spirit of the North does not defeat them... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

We trust that the House will be firm and unyielding on this point, let what will come. Nothing so bad can come as the perversion of the military arm of the nation from the defense to the destruction of its liberties... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

Our Washington correspondent "Index" appears in our columns to-day as a champion of the new Congressional Compensation Act... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

Although the Free States of this Union have from the beginning been superior to the Slave States in numbers, wealth, industry, education, intelligence and talent... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

How has it happened that the wealthy and educated men, the natural political leaders of the North, have thus suffered themselves to be foiled and beaten—and that, too, by the help of Northern votes... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

influence and control over our national affairs which they possessed in the time of Washington... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

The slaveholders, on the contrary, under the lead of Jefferson, early put themselves forward as the special and enthusiastic champions of the principles of Democracy... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

Such is the whole secret of that slaveholding predominance fastened upon the country, maintained for half a century or more... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

The Republican party can very well spare all of this sort of men; and whether they go over to the slaveholders direct, like Mr. Choate... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

Our Washington correspondent "Index" appears in our columns to-day as a champion of the new Congressional Compensation Act... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

"Index" urges that Members of Congress have hitherto been inadequately paid... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

There is no reason why living should be higher in Washington than at Albany or Saratoga Springs... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

Washington has inflated its prices of real estate and increased the cost of living there... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

So much for the gist of our correspondent's piece: let us now call attention to our position which he leaves uncontroverted... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

1. We maintain that the present Members of Congress, having seen fit to accept that position without complaint of the compensation or notice that they should try to increase it... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

2. We hold that, if the pay were to be increased at all, then and thereafter, the present unequal, exorbitant and slippery mileage should be reformed, reduced and equalized... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

3. We insist that a bill which changes the compensation from so much per day to so much per year should have deducted at least as much from a Member's pay for each day's unnecessary absence as he receives for each day's actual service... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

4. Finally, while we do not object to the change from a daily to an annual compensation, we insist that $3,000 instead of $6,000 per term would be quite enough... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

5. We hold that the next act of Congress should be reduced and straightened, and the fine for willful non-attendance should be raised to at least $25 per day... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

6. We hold that the next act of Congress should be reduced and straightened, and the fine for willful non-attendance should be raised to at least $25 per day... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

7. We hold that the next act of Congress should be reduced and straightened, and the fine for willful non-attendance should be raised to at least $25 per day... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

additional outlays, without any addition of pay... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

So far as the "absence" clause of the Act is concerned, which THE TRIBUNE discards with a little ceremony as utterly worthless in practice... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

This law is an experiment, so far as its influence on legislation is concerned... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

It is no sort of argument that other men may be found who will gladly serve the country at $25 a day, and vote against an increase of pay... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

In order to exclude designing and corrupt men from Congress, and to break up the disgraceful combinations in legislation which have become common here... [Text continues with a critique of the President's actions]

THE LATEST NEWS, RECEIVED BY MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24, 1856.

As soon as the Senate adhered yesterday to its determination on the Army Appropriation bill, the House proceeded to the consideration of business on the Speaker's table... [Text continues with details of legislative proceedings]

On Mr. Cobb's motion to recede from the proviso, there were 97 Yeas and 100 Nays... [Text continues with details of legislative proceedings]

Mr. Campbell reported an effort to ask for a new conference, but Mr. Grow objected, and the House was brought to a test on the motion of Mr. Washburn of Maine... [Text continues with details of legislative proceedings]

This last indication, with some others, disavows the expectations recently entertained... [Text continues with details of legislative proceedings]

If the proviso is defeated, as is likely, it will probably be accomplished by the indirectness of those desiring it not caring to face the direct responsibility... [Text continues with details of legislative proceedings]