

Amusements Co-Night.

BOBO OPERA HOUSE—8 1/2—'The Sorcerer.'
BOOTH'S THEATRE—8 1/2—'Odette.'
CROCKER HALL—8—Concert.

Index to Advertisements.

ADVERTISEMENTS—34 Page—6th column.
AMUSEMENTS—8th Page—5th column.
BANKING HOUSES—7th Page—1st column.

Business Notices.

'ALDERNEY BRAND' CONDENSED MILK.
BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TRIBUNE.
WASHINGTON—No. 1,322 F-st.
NEW-YORK—No. 26 Bedford-st., Strand.

New-York Daily Tribune.

FOUNDED BY HORACE GREELEY.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 4, 1883.

THE NEWS THIS MORNING.

FOREIGN.—The funeral of M. Gambetta has been postponed until Saturday.
DOMESTIC.—The Senate Finance Committee have nearly completed their tariff bill.

WEST ROCK QUARRY, near New-Haven.
CITY AND SUBURBAN.—French citizens decided yesterday to hold a demonstration in regard to the death of Gambetta.

THE WEATHER.—Tribune local observations indicate clear and fair weather with lower temperatures.

One of the objects of the Bright Star Pleasure Club, just incorporated, is the 'improvement of the mental condition of its members.'

Mr. Kelly is not satisfied with the generalship displayed in handling the Tammany forces at Albany.

The new Penal Code has been liberally construed again. Twelve jurymen in the Court of General Sessions have declared that a person who tries to kill himself is not guilty of a crime.

Gambetta's abilities as a statesman and his devotion to his country excite so much admiration that we read with regret of further official examination into the cause of his death.

Opponents of the use of spirits and tobacco in any form, as well as students of political economy, will find food for argument in the statistics laid before the Senate by the Secretary of the Treasury.

England and the Vatican. Diplomatic relations between Great Britain and the Vatican are speedily to be resumed.

Unquestionably this favor has been accorded to the Pope as a practical return for the services rendered to Mr. Gladstone's Government by the Irish bishops in the course of the land agitation.

The new Legislatures in many States were formally opened yesterday. In most cases nothing was done beyond mere organization, but in Connecticut action was taken which will be likely to cause much comment.

The behavior of the Representatives at Washington since the holidays has not been encouraging. They waste their time, and lay themselves open to the suspicion that they are not in earnest in their efforts to pass the measures so energetically demanded by their constituents.

It seems strange that in these enlightened days any one should oppose the removal of the dead from a burying-ground in the centre of the city to a suburban cemetery.

THE EDUCATIONAL POLICY OF THE STATE. In view of the fact that the Legislature will shortly be called upon to select a Superintendent of Public Instruction, it is profitable to inquire whether the educational policy of the State ought to be changed in any important particular.

MONEY AND BUSINESS. Last week was one of comparative inactivity in business circles, as is usual between the holidays.

WHY GAMBETTA DIED. It is stated by the surgeons who performed the autopsy upon Gambetta that his death was caused by perityphlitis, which is defined by Niemeyer as inflammation of the connective tissue which attaches the ascending colon—the large intestine—to the iliac fœces.

A special memorial service was held in Boston on Sunday evening as a tribute of respect to the late Rev. Dr. Chandler Robbins in the church of which he was the minister for more than forty years.

Sir Tanton Sykes, who has just been received into the Roman Catholic Church in England, intends to build a superb cathedral in Westminster.

The late Hon. Charles Russell, of Boston, voted at the State elections for sixty-nine consecutive years. Last week he joined in the Christmas festival with his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, and died a few days later without having had his faculties for an hour impaired by his ninety years of life.

The name of Gambetta has been one to conjure with, even upon the variety stage. For some time past the managers of a Paris theatre have employed to sing a young woman calling herself Claire Gambetta, and claiming to be a cousin of the great Opportunist.

The Rev. Brookes Hereford, of Boston, doesn't like to be interrupted when he is busy writing a sermon, and so the other day, finding himself somewhat behindhand with his preparation for the coming Sunday, he retired to his study, giving explicit orders that he was not to be disturbed by visitors, no matter who might call.

The Rev. Brookes Hereford, of Boston, doesn't like to be interrupted when he is busy writing a sermon, and so the other day, finding himself somewhat behindhand with his preparation for the coming Sunday, he retired to his study, giving explicit orders that he was not to be disturbed by visitors, no matter who might call.

It is worth remembering that James A. Garfield fought for eighty days against the effects of a terrible wound, struggling bravely on while a subtle though it is small at Philadelphia. The enormous gain at Pittsburg has been largely due to the development of the gigantic speculation in oil. On the other hand, the apparent gain at Chicago would probably have been much larger had not a separate clearing-house for grain lessened the influence of grain speculation upon the bank exchanges.

FREE TRADE OPPOSITION. Mr. J. S. Moore has been widely known for ten years or more as one of the ablest, if not the ablest, opponent of the Protective system in this country.

Mr. Moore did not, however, propose changes which, if adopted, would have broken the back of the Protective system. Nor were these so concealed that the Commission did not detect their tendency.

Mr. Moore did not, however, propose changes which, if adopted, would have broken the back of the Protective system. Nor were these so concealed that the Commission did not detect their tendency.

Burglars should read the papers. Had the one who jumped through a plate-glass window Monday night heard of Miss Gilbert, he would have remained and might have left by the front door carrying a red turkey.

Who is responsible for the double shooting at the Hester-st. grocery on Tuesday? The proprietor of the den had refused a license; nevertheless his place remains open and he defies the law, although a police station is close at hand.

With nineteen State Legislatures now in session and six more to convene next week the business of making new laws and patching up old ones ought not to be a dull one this winter.

The course pursued by Mr. Balkeley in declaring emphatically that he would not countenance any attempt to overturn the evident wish of the people of Connecticut by taking advantage of the illegality of his reelection as a member of the State Assembly is worthy of commendation.

The few Democratic papers that want to see the party split, the promises it made during the campaign are sadly overlooked. Their efforts to stem the tide and keep back the hungry Democratic horde are painfully strained.

Senator Ransom, of North Carolina, whose term expires on the 4th of March, has some enemies in the ranks of his own party who are anxious to pass his defeat. They hope by making a combination with the colored and independent members of the Legislature to control the Senatorial election.

The prospect of strengthening the temperance laws in Massachusetts during the coming session of the Legislature is believed to be weaker by many than that of the passage of a law which would prevent directly or indirectly the sale of liquor.

Through the machine succeeded in organizing the State Senate of Pennsylvania, it was compelled to put forward an unexceptionable man as its candidate for president of that body.

It is one of the peculiar things of current politics that, while it is admitted that Mr. Blaine is politically dead, and constantly asking the country if it is not, still he is not known to be a candidate for the Presidency.

THE OLD REPUBLICAN FERVOR INVOKED. It is time the old Republican fervor was aroused, so that no more of the Democratic iniquities of which the people of this country are victims are practiced in the name of the Republic.

THE SAME BOURBONS STILL. The vote on the passage of Mr. Pendleton's Civil Service Reform bill in the Senate shows what has been accomplished by the Democratic party.

STILL TRYING TO JUMP ON BLAINE. It is one of the peculiar things of current politics that, while it is admitted that Mr. Blaine is politically dead, and constantly asking the country if it is not, still he is not known to be a candidate for the Presidency.

poison was stealing into his blood, until pyramis and exhaustion claimed their victory. This most heroic endurance was due to a constitution unimpaired by any excesses, to a physique developed by society, plain living and temperance in all things, and aided by a matchless will.

It is no longer the "Passion Play," but an "Oratorio," and the lawyer hired to obtain a license says the Cardinal would approve it, although the Cardinal, in THE TRIBUNE of December 18, distinctly set forth his opposition.

The opening session of the Cabinet in the new-year was devoted almost exclusively to the consideration of foreign affairs. The Administration apparently suspecting that there might be room for improvement in that respect upon its achievements in 1882.

Mr. Moore does not, however, propose changes which, if adopted, would have broken the back of the Protective system. Nor were these so concealed that the Commission did not detect their tendency.

Burglars should read the papers. Had the one who jumped through a plate-glass window Monday night heard of Miss Gilbert, he would have remained and might have left by the front door carrying a red turkey.

Who is responsible for the double shooting at the Hester-st. grocery on Tuesday? The proprietor of the den had refused a license; nevertheless his place remains open and he defies the law, although a police station is close at hand.

With nineteen State Legislatures now in session and six more to convene next week the business of making new laws and patching up old ones ought not to be a dull one this winter.

The course pursued by Mr. Balkeley in declaring emphatically that he would not countenance any attempt to overturn the evident wish of the people of Connecticut by taking advantage of the illegality of his reelection as a member of the State Assembly is worthy of commendation.

The few Democratic papers that want to see the party split, the promises it made during the campaign are sadly overlooked. Their efforts to stem the tide and keep back the hungry Democratic horde are painfully strained.

Senator Ransom, of North Carolina, whose term expires on the 4th of March, has some enemies in the ranks of his own party who are anxious to pass his defeat. They hope by making a combination with the colored and independent members of the Legislature to control the Senatorial election.

The prospect of strengthening the temperance laws in Massachusetts during the coming session of the Legislature is believed to be weaker by many than that of the passage of a law which would prevent directly or indirectly the sale of liquor.

Through the machine succeeded in organizing the State Senate of Pennsylvania, it was compelled to put forward an unexceptionable man as its candidate for president of that body.

It is one of the peculiar things of current politics that, while it is admitted that Mr. Blaine is politically dead, and constantly asking the country if it is not, still he is not known to be a candidate for the Presidency.

THE OLD REPUBLICAN FERVOR INVOKED. It is time the old Republican fervor was aroused, so that no more of the Democratic iniquities of which the people of this country are victims are practiced in the name of the Republic.

THE SAME BOURBONS STILL. The vote on the passage of Mr. Pendleton's Civil Service Reform bill in the Senate shows what has been accomplished by the Democratic party.

STILL TRYING TO JUMP ON BLAINE. It is one of the peculiar things of current politics that, while it is admitted that Mr. Blaine is politically dead, and constantly asking the country if it is not, still he is not known to be a candidate for the Presidency.

the Pope as a practical return for the services rendered to Mr. Gladstone's Government by the Irish bishops in the course of the land agitation. Those services were of inestimable value, for the main body of the clergy were disposed to sympathize with the cause of tenantry from which they themselves were recruited, and would have openly advocated the popular cause if the higher ecclesiastics had not interposed their authority.

Mr. J. S. Moore has been widely known for ten years or more as one of the ablest, if not the ablest, opponent of the Protective system in this country. He has furnished the brains for more Free Trade writings, speeches and bills than any other man in the United States, and has never been suspected of being ashamed of his convictions.

Mr. Moore does not, however, propose changes which, if adopted, would have broken the back of the Protective system. Nor were these so concealed that the Commission did not detect their tendency.

Burglars should read the papers. Had the one who jumped through a plate-glass window Monday night heard of Miss Gilbert, he would have remained and might have left by the front door carrying a red turkey.

Who is responsible for the double shooting at the Hester-st. grocery on Tuesday? The proprietor of the den had refused a license; nevertheless his place remains open and he defies the law, although a police station is close at hand.

With nineteen State Legislatures now in session and six more to convene next week the business of making new laws and patching up old ones ought not to be a dull one this winter.

The course pursued by Mr. Balkeley in declaring emphatically that he would not countenance any attempt to overturn the evident wish of the people of Connecticut by taking advantage of the illegality of his reelection as a member of the State Assembly is worthy of commendation.

The few Democratic papers that want to see the party split, the promises it made during the campaign are sadly overlooked. Their efforts to stem the tide and keep back the hungry Democratic horde are painfully strained.

Senator Ransom, of North Carolina, whose term expires on the 4th of March, has some enemies in the ranks of his own party who are anxious to pass his defeat. They hope by making a combination with the colored and independent members of the Legislature to control the Senatorial election.

The prospect of strengthening the temperance laws in Massachusetts during the coming session of the Legislature is believed to be weaker by many than that of the passage of a law which would prevent directly or indirectly the sale of liquor.

Through the machine succeeded in organizing the State Senate of Pennsylvania, it was compelled to put forward an unexceptionable man as its candidate for president of that body.

It is one of the peculiar things of current politics that, while it is admitted that Mr. Blaine is politically dead, and constantly asking the country if it is not, still he is not known to be a candidate for the Presidency.

THE OLD REPUBLICAN FERVOR INVOKED. It is time the old Republican fervor was aroused, so that no more of the Democratic iniquities of which the people of this country are victims are practiced in the name of the Republic.

THE SAME BOURBONS STILL. The vote on the passage of Mr. Pendleton's Civil Service Reform bill in the Senate shows what has been accomplished by the Democratic party.

STILL TRYING TO JUMP ON BLAINE. It is one of the peculiar things of current politics that, while it is admitted that Mr. Blaine is politically dead, and constantly asking the country if it is not, still he is not known to be a candidate for the Presidency.

STILL TRYING TO JUMP ON BLAINE. It is one of the peculiar things of current politics that, while it is admitted that Mr. Blaine is politically dead, and constantly asking the country if it is not, still he is not known to be a candidate for the Presidency.

handed it to his wife. She took it down to the victor and she, in turn, went away rejoicing. But when, in the night, she was found dead, up Mr. Herford's text, she read: "The Lord is my strength and my shield, and he has made my feet like the feet of a stag, and he has set me on the rock of the mountains."

A raid was made on the millmen of Dieppe the other day and in the case belonging to one of them the public analyst found a minute quantity of arsenic fully enough. The dayman of course was accused and did not think to offer the obvious explanation that the cow had swallowed the arsenic while she was drinking.

The announcement of a novel show in a tent near Hot Springs, Ark. drew a crowd. The first thing on the programme was a wrestling match between a negro and a bear. It was a close and bloody contest, and the audience was with delight when at last the exhausted negro succeeded in dragging the bear behind the scenes. In response to deafening applause he presently appeared again upon the stage, holding a large bag in his hands. The spectators gazed at him in silent curiosity. He drew a knife from his pocket, leaned over, slit the bag from top to bottom, and out upon the audience flew a swarm of wild snappers of a disgusting sort for the exit followed, and the negro had all the fun to himself; but why he took that means of clearing the tent nobody could say.

In a volume on the "Great Shops of Paris," M. Pierre Giffard gives some interesting information about that fashionable disease known as kleptomania. He says that no fewer than 4,000 women are annually caught stealing from Paris counters, and the number of titled ladies seized with kleptomania while examining the fashions is almost incredible.

A good story of the old Arkansas stage line from Fayetteville to Alma, now supplanted by the railroad, is told by a correspondent of The New-Orleans Times-Democrat. His fellow-passengers on a certain night were a mid-western college professor and a plan, both of whom were well known to the professor. At one point in the road the professor's hat blew off and over the precipice, but caught on a bush ten feet below. The professor was terribly distressed, and offered $25 for its recovery. When the driver, who let himself down by one of his reins, had returned the hat and received his reward, the professor explained that bills amounting to $1,100 were sewed under the lining. The stage rumbled on, and everything seemed favorable for a quick trip, when suddenly the professor's hat came out from behind a tree. He searched the passengers, but found so little to reward him for his trouble that he got mad and swore he would take their clothes and send them on naked to the next station. His revolver was an unanswerable argument, and they were about to strip, when the passenger in the back seat called out: "Look in the lining of that fellow's hat, and you will find some money." The poor professor's $1,100 was soon in the pocket of the robber, who forthwith decamped. The stage went on, but such was the rage of the driver and other passengers at his pilferage that he of the effered shirt had to walk. The next day he appeared at the hotel in Alma, took the professor aside, and made him accept of $2,000, saying that he had appeared like a dirty scoundrel, but the fact was he had $10,000 under his coat in his boots, and most inebriately had lost it if he had not been so careful. He was a rich broker and had done his rough costume to avoid trouble in the mountains.

POLITICAL NEWS. With nineteen State Legislatures now in session and six more to convene next week the business of making new laws and patching up old ones ought not to be a dull one this winter.

The course pursued by Mr. Balkeley in declaring emphatically that he would not countenance any attempt to overturn the evident wish of the people of Connecticut by taking advantage of the illegality of his reelection as a member of the State Assembly is worthy of commendation.

The few Democratic papers that want to see the party split, the promises it made during the campaign are sadly overlooked. Their efforts to stem the tide and keep back the hungry Democratic horde are painfully strained.

Senator Ransom, of North Carolina, whose term expires on the 4th of March, has some enemies in the ranks of his own party who are anxious to pass his defeat. They hope by making a combination with the colored and independent members of the Legislature to control the Senatorial election.

The prospect of strengthening the temperance laws in Massachusetts during the coming session of the Legislature is believed to be weaker by many than that of the passage of a law which would prevent directly or indirectly the sale of liquor.

Through the machine succeeded in organizing the State Senate of Pennsylvania, it was compelled to put forward an unexceptionable man as its candidate for president of that body.

It is one of the peculiar things of current politics that, while it is admitted that Mr. Blaine is politically dead, and constantly asking the country if it is not, still he is not known to be a candidate for the Presidency.

THE OLD REPUBLICAN FERVOR INVOKED. It is time the old Republican fervor was aroused, so that no more of the Democratic iniquities of which the people of this country are victims are practiced in the name of the Republic.

THE SAME BOURBONS STILL. The vote on the passage of Mr. Pendleton's Civil Service Reform bill in the Senate shows what has been accomplished by the Democratic party.

STILL TRYING TO JUMP ON BLAINE. It is one of the peculiar things of current politics that, while it is admitted that Mr. Blaine is politically dead, and constantly asking the country if it is not, still he is not known to be a candidate for the Presidency.

STILL TRYING TO JUMP ON BLAINE. It is one of the peculiar things of current politics that, while it is admitted that Mr. Blaine is politically dead, and constantly asking the country if it is not, still he is not known to be a candidate for the Presidency.

Table with 6 columns: Boston, Phila., Chi., Cincinnati, Balt., Pitts. (1882, 1881, 1880, 1879, 1878, 1877) and 6 rows of data.