

THE FEVER IN PHILADELPHIA.

WANDERINGS OF AN INFECTED SAILOR. DRAINING EXHAUSTED THROUGH THE STREETS. SLEEPING IN A SEAMEN'S BOARDING HOUSE.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—A sailor who, it is said, has yellow fever, passed Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in a crowded women's boarding-house in South Front-st. The man is one of the crew of the British vessel "The Rover," which arrived in New-York from Cienfuegos, Cuba, on August 12, and which was quarantined until Saturday. The captain quarantined the sailor on the trip and was buried at sea. On the way to New-York the vessel stopped at the Delaware Breakwater, where its steward being put on shore as requiring medical treatment and being in too bad a condition to proceed any further.

The sailor's name is not known, but it is supposed to be the name of the disease which he contracted. He is a native of Philadelphia and twenty-three years old. He came to Philadelphia because he had friends here. They treated him well when he first got here, but to-day they are regretting the warmth of their reception, and those who had associated with him most intimately are now shunning him as they shun the pestilence.

On Tuesday he felt unwell and feverish, but on Wednesday he was worse, and on Thursday he was so ill that he could not get up. On Friday he was taken to the hospital, where he died on Saturday. The doctor who attended him says that he had never seen a case of yellow fever before. He says that the sailor was in good health when he first got here, but that he became ill on Wednesday. THE FIRE RECORD.

MANY LIVES IN PERIL. A fire broke out at No. 292 Broadway, Williamsburg, at 10:30 o'clock last night, and the lives of several persons were endangered, while two children and a policeman were nearly suffocated by the smoke. The building is of brick, four stories high, with a store underneath, which was occupied by Samuel Segale, jeweler. Shortly before 9 o'clock he closed up his store, and went to bed. He had a lamp burning on a stand near his bed, which was in a blaze. The flames spread rapidly and the smoke, making its way through the crevices in the door and floor, rushed into the hall and out to the street. The escape of the family on the first floor was cut off by the smoke. Officers Graves and Peters responded. Rushing through the smoke they carried two children, aged six and seven, to the street. The fire, which had spread almost unobscured and fell in a faint just as it reached the hall door. A policeman, who had been called by the fire alarm, rushed to the scene and severely injured him. The fire was extinguished with a loss of $500; insured in the Royal Insurance Company, this city, for $600.

STRIKERS REFUSING TO YIELD. CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 20 (Special).—For several weeks a number of striking iron-workers have been asking the leaders to call a special meeting for the purpose of giving the strikers a chance to vote on a new contract. The strikers refused to do so. During the last two weeks the iron trade has received an encouraging impetus. The strikers are not slow to recognize the fact that the Cleveland Rolling Mill Company is anxious to share in this coming prosperity, and they are therefore jubilant over their prospects of success. Accordingly a secret meeting was called, to take place at the Town Hall. A ballot-box was procured, judges and clerks appointed, and the strikers gathered in the hall. One thousand and forty-one votes were cast, and at the end of the day the strikers were victorious. The strikers are now in a position to demand a new contract, and they are confident that they will be successful.

THE MURDERER OF PRELLER.

HISTORY OF BROOKS IN ENGLAND. LIKENESS OF MAXWELL AND BROOKS—A POOR LAWYER IN HYDE-HIS FLIGHT.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The national schoolmaster at Hyde, near Birmingham, who, it has been reported is the father of Maxwell, the murderer of Preller, said to-day he had a son named Hugh Mottram Brooks, who was a solicitor. He resided in the United States and had formerly been attested to a firm in Stockport. Hugh Brooks is doubtless identical with "Maxwell." He was formerly a clerk in the office of Brown and Althorpe, at Stockport. About eighteen months ago he passed an examination and began to practise law at Hyde. He met with little success. In January last he announced that he had an important lawsuit in Dublin, which required a primary visit to London, and he left Hyde, taking with him a tricycle and photograph apparatus belonging to Dr. Seidenstamm, of Hyde, having evidently sold his own effects to pay creditors. Shortly after Preller's departure a curate of Hyde, who had been an intimate friend of Hugh, also left the town, and the two men were seen together in Paris, where they were giving photographic sittings. The description given of Maxwell's stentorian manners and mining work exactly tallies with Hugh's. It is noteworthy that Maxwell sold a tricycle in Boston, and that the number of the watch he sold to a jeweller in London agrees with the number registered in the book of Hugh Brooks. The portrait of Maxwell published in a Washington paper exactly resembles Brooks, and the fact that he had a dark mustache and square chin, with a supercilious air and drawing voice. It is certain that Hugh and Preller became acquainted in England and sailed for America together, and it is equally certain that Hugh was short of funds. The fact that Hugh dated in chemical experiments makes the charge of imposture more probable. He revealed Hyde which were withheld at St. Louis, a couple of days prior to the murder, on containing an Eastern card which was in Preller's former possession. The case has aroused much excitement at Hyde.
