

Amusements. ACADEMY—The Soudan. BIJOU THEATRE—The Nibel.

Index to Advertisements. Page. Col. Advertisements 12 6

Business Notices. TRIBUTE TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS. Daily, 7 days a week...

New-York Daily Tribune

FOUNDED BY HORACE GREELEY THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1891.

TWELVE PAGES.

THE NEWS THIS MORNING.

Foreign.—The British Trades-Union Congress adopted a resolution in favor of making the proposed international eight-hour law permissive in certain cases.

Domestic.—The Republican State Convention, at Rochester, nominated a full State ticket as follows: For Governor, J. Sloat Fasset, of Chemung.

City and Suburban.—Three men were instantly killed by the explosion of a locomotive at Oyster Bay, L. I.

Experiments just made at the naval ordnance proving-ground demonstrated that the United States now has a first-class article of smokeless powder.

The indications yesterday were that a verdict on the Park Place disaster would be reached by the coroner's jury to-day.

Judge Cooley's resignation from the Interstate Commerce Commission is an occasion for national regret.

Chief Engineer Fley has made an interesting report to the Aqueduct Commissioners on the subject of the contamination of the city's water supply.

Mr. Fasset's nomination for Governor has a peculiar value which at this time can scarcely be too highly estimated.

report is a suggestive and valuable contribution to the discussion of a question whose importance makes necessary legislation that will insure to this community a water supply that can be relied on as pure and wholesome.

THE REPUBLICAN TICKET.

Mr. Fasset's nomination for Governor has a peculiar value which at this time can scarcely be too highly estimated.

With great propriety and force the convention appeals to the people against "Democratic maladministration in the State, and personal despotism in the Executive office."

Respecting the temperance question, the platform favors local option for counties, cities and towns, with restriction by taxation where the people by option permit the traffic in liquor.

This is the platform of a great party, proud of its convictions, proud of its magnificent work in government, and inspired with the hope that its beliefs will meet with the approval of the people of the Empire State.

JULES GREVY.

"One of the most respected and least popular of public men in France" was an English writer's description of Jules Grevy at the time when he was put forward by Gambetta as the nominal leader of the Republican party after the death of Thiers.

The Republicans of New-York will spring to the support of Mr. Fasset with a hearty satisfaction that will tell its own story in the ballot-boxes.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

The highest praise that can be given to a platform is that it states concisely, faithfully and impressively the true aims of the party.

The Republican party has embodied in the Tariff and Administrative acts its wishes regarding protection of industry, reciprocity with other American nations, and removal of unnecessary burdens.

The platform would have been untrue to the wishes of Republican voters if it had not spoken frankly on the silver question in harmony with President Harrison's recent admirable utterances.

aply quoting the President's declaration that "every dollar issued, whether paper or coin, should be as good as every other dollar."

On other National questions the platform is equally explicit and frank. It holds that all citizens should be protected to the fullest extent in the right of suffrage, and that all trusts should be suppressed, and combinations to raise artificially the price of necessities of life—a suggestion worth the notice of Farmers' Alliances in cotton-growing and wheat-growing States.

With great propriety and force the convention appeals to the people against "Democratic maladministration in the State, and personal despotism in the Executive office."

Respecting the temperance question, the platform favors local option for counties, cities and towns, with restriction by taxation where the people by option permit the traffic in liquor.

This is the platform of a great party, proud of its convictions, proud of its magnificent work in government, and inspired with the hope that its beliefs will meet with the approval of the people of the Empire State.

JULES GREVY.

"One of the most respected and least popular of public men in France" was an English writer's description of Jules Grevy at the time when he was put forward by Gambetta as the nominal leader of the Republican party after the death of Thiers.

The Republicans of New-York will spring to the support of Mr. Fasset with a hearty satisfaction that will tell its own story in the ballot-boxes.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

The highest praise that can be given to a platform is that it states concisely, faithfully and impressively the true aims of the party.

The Republican party has embodied in the Tariff and Administrative acts its wishes regarding protection of industry, reciprocity with other American nations, and removal of unnecessary burdens.

The platform would have been untrue to the wishes of Republican voters if it had not spoken frankly on the silver question in harmony with President Harrison's recent admirable utterances.

the Third Republic. At a critical point in its history he was called to the head of the State, and there his cool brain, steady nerves and cautious judgment were of incalculable value to France.

JONES VERSUS CLEVELAND.

Lieutenant-Governor Jones is a terrible person. His open letter to ex-President Cleveland, which some newspapers style a solemn warning, is either that or a funnier joke than Mark Twain ever perpetrated.

It is the opinion of Mr. Jones that ex-President Cleveland is blameworthy, because he suffers his friends to advise the nomination for Governor of the genial and wealthy Wall Street broker, Mr. Flower.

JULES GREVY.

"One of the most respected and least popular of public men in France" was an English writer's description of Jules Grevy at the time when he was put forward by Gambetta as the nominal leader of the Republican party after the death of Thiers.

The letter of Mr. Jones has its serious side, because it shows that among the Democrats there is certain to be no small opposition to the class of men represented by Mr. Flower and by Mr. Cleveland himself.

MAYOR CHAPIN'S FUTURE.

Mayor Chapin having returned to Brooklyn after an absence of several weeks, the question of his political future naturally attracts more or less attention.

The only possible ray of hope that lights up Mr. Chapin's future is a third term in his present office. But can the Democracy of Brooklyn afford to run him again? Third terms are not popular on the other side of the East River.

cannot in any event be a pleasing one for him. For ten years he has been an officeholder continuously. He has large ambitions. At present the likelihood of his attaining them is meagre in the extreme.

Mr. Fasset's speech to the convention in accepting the Republican nomination for Governor has the true ring. There is no doubt that he will enter forthwith upon an aggressive campaign.

An evil which increases every year is the practice among city officials of absenting themselves for slight causes from meetings of the boards or commissions of which they are members.

THE FIGHT ALREADY BEGUN BETWEEN FASSETT AND HILL'S UNKNOWN.

The fight has already begun between Fasset and Hill's Unknown.

Who is to be the "determinator who shall designate the future" of Lieutenant-Governor Jones? Does echo answer: "Jones?"

Postmaster-General Wanmaker is greatly pleased with the success of the free-delivery system in the small towns in which it has been introduced.

A good convention, a good platform, a good ticket, and a good time coming—that is the gist and meaning of yesterday's proceedings at Rochester.

The desperate efforts of Democratic organs to find discord in the Rochester convention have been less amusing than their persistence in proclaiming their failure.

PERSONAL.

John Penn, who has just been elected to the British Parliament, is a descendant of the great William Penn.

The Rev. W. H. Milburn, the blind preacher, and ex-Chaplain of the House of Representatives, is soon to publish a book entitled "The Valley of the Mississippi: Its Explorers, Pioneers, Preachers and People."

Mr. Thomas, the United States Minister to Sweden, has written a book about Sweden and Norway. It will be published soon.

General William H. F. Lee, the Congressman, is a son of General R. E. Lee. He is an indifferently speaker, and is rather slow and ponderous in his movements.

The house which Benedict Arnold occupied when a young man in New-Haven is still standing. He was a compounder of drugs, and the sign which swung before his little shop is preserved by the New-Haven Historical Society.

Leopold Steglitz, son of Edward Steglitz, of this city, was graduated a few weeks ago, with the highest honors, from the medical department of the University of Heidelberg.

Colonel Charles Mitchell, who was Adjutant-General on General Lee's staff, tells an interesting story of General Wise and the surrender at Appomattox.

It was "Melon Day" at Rocky Ford, Col., one day last week, and 10,000 luscious melons which had been provided for the free consumption of the public and his wife speedily became a heap of useless rinds.

It was "Melon Day" at Rocky Ford, Col., one day last week, and 10,000 luscious melons which had been provided for the free consumption of the public and his wife speedily became a heap of useless rinds.

It was "Melon Day" at Rocky Ford, Col., one day last week, and 10,000 luscious melons which had been provided for the free consumption of the public and his wife speedily became a heap of useless rinds.

It was "Melon Day" at Rocky Ford, Col., one day last week, and 10,000 luscious melons which had been provided for the free consumption of the public and his wife speedily became a heap of useless rinds.

It was "Melon Day" at Rocky Ford, Col., one day last week, and 10,000 luscious melons which had been provided for the free consumption of the public and his wife speedily became a heap of useless rinds.

It was "Melon Day" at Rocky Ford, Col., one day last week, and 10,000 luscious melons which had been provided for the free consumption of the public and his wife speedily became a heap of useless rinds.

It was "Melon Day" at Rocky Ford, Col., one day last week, and 10,000 luscious melons which had been provided for the free consumption of the public and his wife speedily became a heap of useless rinds.

It was "Melon Day" at Rocky Ford, Col., one day last week, and 10,000 luscious melons which had been provided for the free consumption of the public and his wife speedily became a heap of useless rinds.

It was "Melon Day" at Rocky Ford, Col., one day last week, and 10,000 luscious melons which had been provided for the free consumption of the public and his wife speedily became a heap of useless rinds.

shade of Hancock reproach him for his present efforts to suppress the Louisiana Lottery, and thus throw the veterans Early and Beauregard out of employment—(Boston Saturday Gazette).

In that excellent "colored" journal, "The Appeal," of Chicago, there is a column entitled "Seeking for the Lost," consisting of notices which have many pathetic suggestions. Here are three samples of them:

Washington Sumner—I wish to find my father and mother. Father's name was Washington Sumner. He lived in Mississippi and was the property of Judge Perkins. Address Alonzo Henry, Cutbert, Ga.

Hannah Silliman—I desire to find my daughter, Hannah Silliman. She belonged to New Orleans, in Fairchild County, Ga. Her father's name was John Silliman. Address Wm. Bass, Methodist Episcopal Church, New-York.

Fanny Roanman—I wish to find my mother, Fanny Roanman. She formerly lived near Lexington, Va. I was sold from her when I was five years old, and now I'm forty. Address Mrs. Roanman, No. 504 South Street, Albany, Mo.

The experiments in Hellamton don't seem to succeed as well in real life as they do in Mr. Hellam's book. For instance, the Decatur Co-operative Homekeeping Club has just collapsed. The club consisted of ten or twelve families, who rented a dining-room, hired a housekeeper to take charge of the servants and paid the expenses of furnishing board to the members of the club.

A Dull Paper.—Editor "Daily Starler"—Anything stand for a dull paper? "Daily Starler"—Anything stand for a dull paper? "Daily Starler"—Anything stand for a dull paper?

That's been done too often. No new names left. "Well, go up and add dispatch saying that Explores Starler has run away with his wife."

Colonel Watterston, after a summer spent in the North, remarks in the Louisville Courier-Journal: "White coats and white cuffs are good so far as they go, but isn't a man rather incomplete without something white at the bottom of his pantaloons?" Can it be that the gallant Colonel is going to introduce the fashion of trimming the bottoms of "pantaloons" with lace?

Bright Prospects.—"Doctor, how am I coming?" Do you think there is any hope?" "I said a very sick man to Dr. Hilsler."

Your character is the best in the world. The statistics show that one person in ten reverts," replied the doctor.

"Oh, yes, there is. You are the only one that I have treated, and the other nine are still in bed, waiting to be cured."—Texas Sifter.

A fair recently held in Racine, Wis., was a financial failure because no intoxicating liquors were allowed to be sold on the grounds. Or rather it may be that the 1,700 people who petitioned against the liquor failed to attend. That is, they were very forward in signing petitions, but not so forward when money is to be paid out. Their allowing this temperance fair to fall because it was a temperance fair will do much to weaken the cause of temperance in and about Racine.

Russell Sage has sixty-four coins, ranging from pennies, which form the majority of the collection. The silver dollars, which he has five, are the only ones that could not be bought for a thousand times their face value, much as the good man likes to boast of his collection.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.

He found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city, and he has found them in the streets of the city.