

Index to Advertisements.

Table with 3 columns: Page, Col., Page. Lists various advertisements and their locations.

Business Notices.

Oh, give me teeth sound, white and neat. Oh, give me hair pure and sweet. Oh, give me eyes healthy and clear.

NEVERMORE

Keep your complexion bright and your teeth white and sweet. Use the famous and preservative SOZODONT.

TRIBUNE TERMS TO MAIL SUBSCRIBERS.

Single Copies 5 Cents. Daily, 7 days a week, 1 year, $6.00. 3 mos., $2.00. 6 mos., $3.50. Foreign, 1 year, $10.00.

BRANCH OFFICES OF THE TRIBUNE.

Advertisements for publication in The Tribune and for regular delivery of the paper may be sent to the following branch offices in New York, at the following rates:

IN OTHER CITIES.

Baltimore: Advertising Agency, 207 Baltimore St. Boston: Advertising Agency, 112 State St.

New-York Daily Tribune.

FOUNDED BY HORACE GREELEY

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1892.

TWENTY-FOUR PAGES

THE NEWS THIS MORNING.

Foreign.—The British Cabinet decided not to occupy and annex Uganda. Cholera reports showed additional cases in many European cities.

Domestic.—Nine members of the Homestead Advisory Board have been arrested on charges of high treason. The new steel steamer Alabama was launched at Baltimore.

City and Suburban.—The Westchester County Fair was brought to a successful close. Insurrectionists protested against the introduction of the electric trolley below the Harlem.

The public debt statement showed a reduction for the month of September of $708,000. Warrants were issued for the arrest of John Conroy and Austin W. Wright in Chicago.

The weather.—Indications for to-day: Fair and cooler. Temperature yesterday: Highest, 76 degrees; lowest, 56; average, 66.

The announcement by the Board of Health yesterday that, owing to the entire absence of cholera from this city since September 19, no more bulletins would be issued, cannot but prove a source of much relief and satisfaction to the people.

The first of the squadron of foreign cruisers which are to participate in our Columbus Naval Celebration reached this port yesterday morning. She is the steel-armed frigate Giovanni Bausan.

Our special London dispatches fully confirm the opinion expressed in these columns yesterday respecting Mr. Redmond's attitude toward Home Rule. His latest utterances on the subject are markedly conservative.

The first days of October may be regarded as the beginning of the new college year, and while Cornell, Harvard and Yale have all opened their doors for the fall term during the last week, the students of Columbia College begin work to-morrow.

The Belfast shipbuilder considers that the size of a profitable liner is a problem the factors of which are the possibilities of the trade. The Great Eastern, which was 100 feet longer than the Teutonic and 25 feet broader in beam, failed because she was too big for her time.

Our special London dispatches fully confirm the opinion expressed in these columns yesterday respecting Mr. Redmond's attitude toward Home Rule. His latest utterances on the subject are markedly conservative.

The first days of October may be regarded as the beginning of the new college year, and while Cornell, Harvard and Yale have all opened their doors for the fall term during the last week, the students of Columbia College begin work to-morrow.

The Belfast shipbuilder considers that the size of a profitable liner is a problem the factors of which are the possibilities of the trade. The Great Eastern, which was 100 feet longer than the Teutonic and 25 feet broader in beam, failed because she was too big for her time.

Our special London dispatches fully confirm the opinion expressed in these columns yesterday respecting Mr. Redmond's attitude toward Home Rule. His latest utterances on the subject are markedly conservative.

The first days of October may be regarded as the beginning of the new college year, and while Cornell, Harvard and Yale have all opened their doors for the fall term during the last week, the students of Columbia College begin work to-morrow.

The Belfast shipbuilder considers that the size of a profitable liner is a problem the factors of which are the possibilities of the trade. The Great Eastern, which was 100 feet longer than the Teutonic and 25 feet broader in beam, failed because she was too big for her time.

having received during the last year over half a million dollars in gifts and bequests.

The Columbian celebration next week promises to be an immense success. Seats along the route of the parades have been arranged to accommodate some 70,000 persons, and nearly every one of them has been sold.

OCTOBER.

After one of the loveliest Septembers ever known in these latitudes, a season without moderate bursts of heat or protracted rains, October has come with its promise of rich autumnal tints, the splendors of forest foliage and of gardens radiant with the brilliant tones of chrysanthemums and dahlias.

Everybody and everything appear to be breaking the record this season. Scarcely a day passes but some achievement to which it has been customary "to point with pride" becomes a back-number.

October is sometimes called a sombre month, but not by any one in close sympathy with Nature's moods. Sharp frosts are required before all the verdant tints of summer can be strained out of the autumnal foliage.

October does not stand for old age with its cynicism when limited to the happenings of this world, or with its serene dignity when inspired by intimations of immortality.

The perfection of life comes after the ardor and impetuosity of youth and the intense, passionate struggle of early manhood.

Now that the colleges and schools have resumed, it is in order to resume the consideration of a question of no little importance touching a phase of educational policy.

He is radically opposed to the length of characterizing it as a "misance." Quoting a remark of Jules Simon: "When I was young we prepared students for life, now we prepare them for examinations."

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

the cheapening of materials and the multiplication of scientific and mechanical appliances. Nevertheless, he is not blind to the chances of foreign competition, and seems to dread it chiefly from the American quarter.

The contracts about to be awarded for the construction of Inman and Red Star steamships in American yards will demonstrate at an early day whether the Belfast shipbuilder's dread of competition from this side is well grounded.

Everybody and everything appear to be breaking the record this season. Scarcely a day passes but some achievement to which it has been customary "to point with pride" becomes a back-number.

October is sometimes called a sombre month, but not by any one in close sympathy with Nature's moods. Sharp frosts are required before all the verdant tints of summer can be strained out of the autumnal foliage.

October does not stand for old age with its cynicism when limited to the happenings of this world, or with its serene dignity when inspired by intimations of immortality.

The perfection of life comes after the ardor and impetuosity of youth and the intense, passionate struggle of early manhood.

Now that the colleges and schools have resumed, it is in order to resume the consideration of a question of no little importance touching a phase of educational policy.

He is radically opposed to the length of characterizing it as a "misance." Quoting a remark of Jules Simon: "When I was young we prepared students for life, now we prepare them for examinations."

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

not the knowledge that he has to pass a written examination as a condition of advancement induce many a boy to apply himself diligently to his studies who, in the absence of such a stimulus, would make no special exertion?

These substantially are some of the questions which the advocates of written examinations may be expected to put to Dr. Hale and those who hold with him. A serious mistake in educational methods is to be regarded as a serious blow aimed at the common weal.

A GREAT STROKE IN AFRICA.

From whatever point of view it may be regarded, the occupation of Emin's old capital by the Congo State is the most important and suggestive news we have had from Africa for many a day.

Everybody and everything appear to be breaking the record this season. Scarcely a day passes but some achievement to which it has been customary "to point with pride" becomes a back-number.

October is sometimes called a sombre month, but not by any one in close sympathy with Nature's moods. Sharp frosts are required before all the verdant tints of summer can be strained out of the autumnal foliage.

October does not stand for old age with its cynicism when limited to the happenings of this world, or with its serene dignity when inspired by intimations of immortality.

The perfection of life comes after the ardor and impetuosity of youth and the intense, passionate struggle of early manhood.

Now that the colleges and schools have resumed, it is in order to resume the consideration of a question of no little importance touching a phase of educational policy.

He is radically opposed to the length of characterizing it as a "misance." Quoting a remark of Jules Simon: "When I was young we prepared students for life, now we prepare them for examinations."

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

in nearly every diocese, and the indications are that in a few years it will have a vigorous chapter in every important parish of the Church. Its practical character is well brought out by the discussions of the present convention, which relate not to questions of theology and churchmanship, but to such matters as the evangelization of traveling men, railroad men and men employed on cattle ships, and the proper religious training of boys.

With such a spirit as that displayed by this brotherhood abroad among the laity of the Church, its continued and rapid growth cannot be a matter of dispute. And it is pretty certain that the general convention, which is to meet, will, in its deliberations, reflect the many impulses in the direction of practical and effective work which are now making themselves felt in the Church through this and many other parochial agencies.

A great mass-meeting will be held at Cooper Union Tuesday evening next, October 4, at which Messrs. Hiseock, United States Senator from this State, and C. A. Boustelle, Congressman from Maine, will address the people of this city.

Everybody and everything appear to be breaking the record this season. Scarcely a day passes but some achievement to which it has been customary "to point with pride" becomes a back-number.

October is sometimes called a sombre month, but not by any one in close sympathy with Nature's moods. Sharp frosts are required before all the verdant tints of summer can be strained out of the autumnal foliage.

October does not stand for old age with its cynicism when limited to the happenings of this world, or with its serene dignity when inspired by intimations of immortality.

The perfection of life comes after the ardor and impetuosity of youth and the intense, passionate struggle of early manhood.

Now that the colleges and schools have resumed, it is in order to resume the consideration of a question of no little importance touching a phase of educational policy.

He is radically opposed to the length of characterizing it as a "misance." Quoting a remark of Jules Simon: "When I was young we prepared students for life, now we prepare them for examinations."

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

his, except General Grant's, have been a failure, according to "The Boston News."

The question of electing an assistant for Bishop Coxie in Western New-York was again considered in the recent diocesan convention, but was decided in the negative, the great objection being lack of means properly to provide an extra salary.

Everybody and everything appear to be breaking the record this season. Scarcely a day passes but some achievement to which it has been customary "to point with pride" becomes a back-number.

October is sometimes called a sombre month, but not by any one in close sympathy with Nature's moods. Sharp frosts are required before all the verdant tints of summer can be strained out of the autumnal foliage.

October does not stand for old age with its cynicism when limited to the happenings of this world, or with its serene dignity when inspired by intimations of immortality.

The perfection of life comes after the ardor and impetuosity of youth and the intense, passionate struggle of early manhood.

Now that the colleges and schools have resumed, it is in order to resume the consideration of a question of no little importance touching a phase of educational policy.

He is radically opposed to the length of characterizing it as a "misance." Quoting a remark of Jules Simon: "When I was young we prepared students for life, now we prepare them for examinations."

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

THE TALK OF THE DAY.

A very amusing trial developed out of a suit for repudiation of a dog brought by Dr. E. T. Brady against a man, in Justice Shannon's Court, in Kansas City, Mo., recently. Both parties claim the ownership of the dog.

Everybody and everything appear to be breaking the record this season. Scarcely a day passes but some achievement to which it has been customary "to point with pride" becomes a back-number.

October is sometimes called a sombre month, but not by any one in close sympathy with Nature's moods. Sharp frosts are required before all the verdant tints of summer can be strained out of the autumnal foliage.

October does not stand for old age with its cynicism when limited to the happenings of this world, or with its serene dignity when inspired by intimations of immortality.

The perfection of life comes after the ardor and impetuosity of youth and the intense, passionate struggle of early manhood.

Now that the colleges and schools have resumed, it is in order to resume the consideration of a question of no little importance touching a phase of educational policy.

He is radically opposed to the length of characterizing it as a "misance." Quoting a remark of Jules Simon: "When I was young we prepared students for life, now we prepare them for examinations."

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

Before concluding, Dr. Hale invites half a dozen teachers to let "The Commonwealth" know what they think about it.

The Springfield Union is greatly pleased with Dr. Hale's article, saying that he is "everlastingly right" on written examinations.

Do we really want the Hancock School, for instance, to be the precise counterpart of the Dwight School, or the Dwight School to be the precise counterpart of the Dudley School?

PERSONAL.

Eugene Field, in "The Chicago News Record," remarks that W. S. Gilbert is the only librettist whose name has been commonly used first in a partnership with the musical composer.

Everybody and everything appear to be breaking the record this season. Scarcely a day passes but some achievement to which it has been customary "to point with pride" becomes a back-number.

October is sometimes called a sombre month, but not by any one in close sympathy with Nature's moods. Sharp frosts are required before all the verdant tints of summer can be strained out of the autumnal foliage.

October does not stand for old age with its cynicism when limited to the happenings of this world, or with its serene dignity when inspired by intimations of immortality.

The perfection of life comes after the ardor and impetuosity of youth and the intense, passionate struggle of early manhood.