man he could scarcely have been equal to his task. As it was, he simply said, "Tu quoque."

Mr. Reed never appeared to better advantage than in the debate on Monday. Nothing suits him so well as a surprise. His mind and his method are both peculiar but like all great orators who carry men with them or before them, he has to be argued to do his best.

Mr. Wilson at once arose with his motion. On this occasion Mr. Wilson was not blindfolded, a remark which might have seemed that had covered his eyes when he last addressed the House.

MR. GORMAN FORBARES TO APPEAR. Mr. Reed spoke under much excitement. The details of the action of the Democratic caucus on the morning of Monday had come to him, and he was intense with contempt and indignation.

IS IT A GOVERNMENT OF TRUSTS? There is no mistaking this assurance. The people are to be congratulated on Mr. Wilson's candor. For himself, for the President and for the Democratic party he announces that this new tariff is to be regarded as the settlement of the question.

MR. REED'S INTELLECTUAL ISOLATION. Mr. Reed spoke to a crowded and excited House. The attendance of members had not been so large since the tariff bill passed originally. The galleries were packed.

THE DEMOCRATIC BABES IN THE WOODS. Mr. Reed's reply immensely gratified his party. He commiserated with the gentleman from West Virginia who had not saved to his bill so much as his name.

JUDGE TURNER'S BRAVE EFFORT. Mr. Turner, of Georgia, was put forward to reply. Mr. Turner is held up by his Democratic colleagues as a pattern of all that is superior in Democratic statesmanship.
