POISON IVY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE. Sir: Your crusade against "poison ivy" does not exasperate the evil. In answer to "Countryman" asking for a remedy, I say the only time to attack the vine is in the spring of the year, after the frost is out of the ground, and before vegetation starts.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE. Sir: In your article of yesterday on poison ivy you say there is no certain cure. Allow me to name one that I have never known to fail.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE. Sir: In today's Tribune I notice a letter from a "Countryman" of New-Hampshire on Hudson asking about the treatment of poison vines.
