

MRS. BLAINE'S NEW SCHOOL

COLONEL PARKER TELLS SOMETHING OF ITS PLAN.

THE PROSPECTUS INCLUDES TWO BRANCHES—ONE WILL BE FREE AND LOCATED IN THE CROWDED DOWNTOWN DISTRICT.

Educators all over the country are deeply interested in the informally framed prospectus for Mrs. Emmons Blaine's College of Pedagogy, Chicago, as given out by Colonel Parker, who has resigned from the Normal School to take charge of the new institution.

Its principal points are that there will be two schools, professional and academic, and that a branch of the latter will be located in some one of the crowded districts and be free.

The chief strength of the institution, declares Colonel Parker, will be in its faculty. It will be composed of educated, trained, expert teachers, who will form of themselves a compact body organized for the purpose of studying continually the problems presented by modern education.

Under the one organization two schools will be maintained, the professional school and the academic school. Special courses dealing with the treatment and education of young children will be established. All the departments will provide graduate courses, offering opportunities for higher study in particular lines.

The academic school, established for the education of children through all grades, including kindergarten, primary, grammar, high school and a junior college course of two years, will have in the hands of a Board of Trustees not yet announced.

As yet no appointments to the faculty have been made. The general management will be in the hands of a Board of Trustees not yet announced. The professional school is founded like Teachers College, of New-York City, to meet the demand for thoroughly trained teachers who are capable of doing work far above that ordinarily done.

WOMEN BUTLERS NOW.

LIVERIED MAIDS REPLACE MALE SERVANTS IN SOME HOMES.

Several smart houses in New-York have instituted liveried women butlers owing to so much trouble with male servants.

The scheme of putting women into liveried uniforms in England among some titled housekeepers is a recent one.

The butler's liver consists of a black coat and skirt of French fawn cloth and a strap of black silk ribbon.

The footman wears brown, blue or green cloth, and a white waistcoat. The butler's uniform is more faithful and respectful than men; they are cleaner, more conscientious and less expensive.

PRETTY DRESSINGS TO WEAR.

Several old-fashioned materials are coming back into style, such as challis, nun's veiling and Irish linen. The designs in challis this year are most artistic.
