

ROOSEVELT'S CAMPAIGN.

HE HAS SPOKEN FROM TEN TO TWENTY TIMES A DAY FOR A MONTH— BECOMING WEARIED.

Rock Island, Ill., Oct. 5.—Governor Roosevelt, who spoke in this city and Davenport, Iowa, to-night, thus closing another day of hard campaigning, is beginning to feel the effects of the arduous work undertaken by him at the request of the Republican campaign managers.

He has now been on this journey for more than thirty days, and though strong beyond the powers of most men to endure, he is beginning to show signs of distress and a falling voice. He has been worked unmercifully by the State committees of the different States through which he has passed.

Beyond this he has had to endure unlimited handshaking, interviews without number, and much pulling and hauling by the eager and inquisitive mobs which have swarmed around him in all the cities of any considerable size which he has visited.

Some relief is not afforded his physical powers, though brave, and his courage undaunted, he may be unable to last to the end of the campaign.

It has been suggested that all his Eastern engagements be postponed for one week. This matter will be determined by the National Committee on the arrival of Governor Roosevelt in Chicago on Saturday night.

The trip through the State of Iowa with Senator Davenport, Governor Shaw and General Curtis Guild, Jr., to-day has been a very satisfactory one, large meetings being held at all points where stops were made.

Two immense meetings were addressed by Governor Roosevelt this evening, in Davenport and Rock Island. The train arrived at Davenport at 8 o'clock this evening, some 1,500 people being on hand to greet him.

Davenport, Iowa, Oct. 5.—The second stop in Iowa to-day was made at Waterloo, on the Burlington, Cedar Rapids and Northern Railway. Great preparation had been made for the visit of Governor Roosevelt, and an immense crowd was assembled in the park adjacent to the station to listen to the speaking.

The meeting was addressed first by Governor Roosevelt, next by Governor Shaw of Iowa, and next by Judge Curtis Guild, followed by several candidates on the State Republican ticket. The day was beautiful, and the demonstration magnificent. Governor Roosevelt here said in part:

I appeal to you on two points. In the first place, from the point of your material wellbeing, I appeal to the wage worker, to the farmer, to the manufacturer and to the railroad man to stand with us to preserve the conditions under which this Nation has advanced for the last forty years. I say I appeal to you, not to the State of Iowa, but to the whole Nation, and the rest of us follow. Iowa possesses that combination of honesty, courage and common sense which makes us follow and makes us safe in turning to her in any crisis. I ask only that you be true to yourselves and point out to the rest of us the way to follow.

What about the trusts? asked a voice. The speaker replied: There is to be an essay written by Mr. Croker on that subject, and then if you would like further literature on trusts we will get Chairman Jones of the Cotton Bale Trust, Committee to write one on the Cotton Bale Trust.

They ask us to give up our property for the sake of the Philippines. I would like to see the man who would fight this election through on that one issue of the Philippines. In fact, I would be thankful to any man who would fight this election through on any issue of the Philippines. The only thing I wish they would do is to fix their paramount issue and keep it there for about two weeks. I appeal to you, the men of Iowa, to you who want to do the great work, the men who proved their trust by their deeds, the men who have proved their trust by their deeds, the men who have proved their trust by their deeds.

LIE FASSED IN GAYNOR CASE.

LIVELY TILTS AT THE CROSS-EXAMINATION OF MR. WESTCOTT.

The cross-examination of Robert F. Westcott, father-in-law of the convicted Captain Oberlin M. Carter, in the proceedings for the removal of J. F. E. M. and W. T. Gaynor and B. D. Greene to the jurisdiction of the Georgia Federal Court, was resumed yesterday before Commissioner Shields.

The defendants are under indictment in Georgia for conspiracy in the alleged frauds in connection with the Southern Harbor Improvement works, of which Carter had charge. Mr. Westcott's direct examination was conducted by Marion Erwin, United States Attorney for the Southern District of Georgia. L. Laflin Kellogg appeared for the defense.

Yesterday Mr. Kellogg examined the witness on the testimony given before the United States Court of Inquiry prior to the court martial of Captain Carter. The evidence given by several persons there was in direct contradiction to the testimony given by Mr. Westcott in the present proceedings, and Mr. Kellogg asked him about the discrepancy.

Mr. Westcott insisted that those witnesses were mistaken, and that their statements were untrue. One of them was Mr. Westcott's son, Robert F. Westcott, and others were Reed & Flagg, his stock brokers, and Robert E. Taylor. Mr. Reed is now dead.

Mr. Kellogg was asking Mr. Westcott to describe a clerk at the Shoreham Hotel, in Washington, when he went there in response to a dispatch from Carter in September, 1897, and Mr. Erwin objected. "We have wasted too much time already," he said. "The cross-examination of this witness already fills more than five hundred typewritten pages."

Mr. Kellogg tried to interrupt, and District Attorney Erwin exclaimed: "You can't draw my voice, sir." "I don't want to," retorted Mr. Kellogg. "It's all you've got. We have annihilated your witness and shown that he can't remember anything but the things the Government has instructed him to remember."

Commissioner Shields ruled that Mr. Erwin had the floor and sustained his objection to Mr. Kellogg's pressing for a description of the hotel clerk. Mr. Westcott could not tell when he cancelled the power of attorney held by Carter. It was after his interview with Carter in Washington. The witness remembered Abram J. Rose, Carter's counsel, and B. D. Greene asking him to testify at the Court of Inquiry.

"Did you refuse?" asked Mr. Kellogg. "I did not." "Did you go?" "No. My testimony would have convicted Carter. That's why I didn't go." "How about convicting yourself?" "There was no fear of that."

"Had you made your arrangements with the Government then?" "No, and I haven't any agreement now." Mr. Westcott said B. D. Greene declared that he (Westcott) was a partner in the firm and ought to testify to that fact. Commissioner Shields called Greene back to the stand in the presence of three witnesses, among whom was Mr. Rose. Mr. Kellogg asked him directly if he had not advanced money to the Greene-Gaynor firm, if he had not bid for contracts for them and if he had not received moneys from the firm. To all of the questions Mr. Westcott returned an affirmative answer, qualifying each with the statement, "I did it for Carter."

Mr. Kellogg asked the witness how he came to testify, and Mr. Westcott's reply appeared to contradict his evidence on his direct examination. Mr. Westcott tried to explain, and Mr. Kellogg interrupted him. "You're afraid to let me explain!" shouted the witness. "You're afraid to let me explain!" "You are guilty, stepped in guilt, and you quibble to get out of telling the truth," retorted counsel. "You are guilty, stepped in guilt, and you quibble to get out of telling the truth," retorted counsel.

Counsel and witness glared at each other across the narrow table until Commissioner Shields told the witness to answer and the lawyer to take up another subject. Replying to District Attorney Erwin, Mr. Westcott said he had written to him asking him to let Greene have what money he wanted. Mr. Kellogg objected to the question and answer and said that even if Mr. Westcott had turned State's evidence it was no reason why he should be allowed to give his own testimony.

"What's that?" shouted Mr. Westcott. "You turned State's evidence," replied the lawyer. "You are registered in the name of the State." "It's a pretty serious thing to say a man has turned State's evidence," put in Mr. Erwin. "Well, it is true. Mr. Westcott's behavior all through has been disgraceful," retorted Mr. Kellogg. "You lie!" roared the witness, jumping to his feet. "You know you lie. You know you are saying that which is not true."

Mr. Erwin declared the redirect examination over. The hearing will be resumed on Monday at 11 a. m. As Mr. Westcott was leaving the courtroom with District Attorney Erwin and a couple of Government accountants, he turned to Mr. Kellogg and said, "I'm awfully sorry I've had to fight you. You're a good fighter, and I love a good fighter. Mr. Kellogg looked disgusted, but he did not say anything.

Through the mistake of employees in the Court of General Sessions James Gazielles, thirty-two years old, a French bartender, whose home is given as No. 123 West Twenty-sixth-st., has been kept in prison in the Tombs prison since July 17, although no charge of crime was made against him. He was released yesterday by Judge Newburger, in Part I of General Sessions. The Judge explained to the prisoner how he came to be detained.

Gazielles was a bartender in a saloon at No. 123 West Twenty-sixth-st., run by Marion Mandagon. On July 17 Special Excise Agents Erie A. Collier and Henry George went to the place and found two drinks of whiskey, for which they paid. They then arrested Gazielles, alleging that the license of the place had been revoked. The prisoner was the next day arraigned in the Jefferson Market Police Court and held for trial in bail of $1,000. He was unable to furnish bail and was put in the Tombs prison. On July 21 he was taken to the Tombs.

In the mean time the papers in the case against Gazielles had gone to the District Attorney's office and had been presented to the July Grand Jury. On July 17 the papers were examined by the Grand Jury. That body found no evidence against Gazielles sufficient for an indictment, and the charges against him were dropped. The Grand Jury's effect being made to the Court on that day, or four days before the prisoner was brought to the Tombs.

The fact that the case had already been dismissed by the Grand Jury escaped the notice of the chief clerk, Clerk Carroll's office, and Gazielles was locked up. There he remained until recently, all the time wondering when he would be released. When the Grand Jury's verdict was made known, the prisoner did not have any attention from the courts. He went to the Tombs prison, where he was kept in a cell.

FORTUNE MISER'S TRUNK.

BAGS OF GOLD, BANK ACCOUNTS, STOCKS AND BONDS LEFT BY SCOTCH GARDENER.

James Howie, seventy years old, died in the New-Rochelle Hospital yesterday from old age and exhaustion. Although Howie is said to have been worth nearly $100,000, he practically starved himself to death. He had bonds and mortgages on property in New-Rochelle, Pelham and this city, and shares in the New-Haven Railroad Company, yet he lived on 10 cents a day and paid only $1 a week for his room. He had a fear that he would die in the poorhouse. Although the old man's friends suspected that he had money, the extent of his wealth was not known until his trunk was broken open yesterday after his death, and the gold and treasure were exposed.

Howie, who was a Scotchman, was for fifty years gardener for Dr. Bolton, the clergyman and the historian, at the old Bolton Priory, in Pelham. He laid the foundation for his wealth by strict economy and profitable investments. He bought three hundred shares of New-Haven Railroad stock when that line was being built, and disposed of it at a big profit. The old gardener left the Bolton family a few years ago, when the priory was sold to the Countess de Talleyrand. He was unmarried, and for five years he had been living at the New-Rochelle Tavern, an institution for self-supporting men of small means. The people at the tavern thought that Howie was an extremely poor man. His clothing was shabby. For breakfast he usually ate one egg and drank a cup of coffee, and for luncheon he had soup and potatoes. His evening meal, taken in his room, consisted of one apple and a glass of water. On Sundays Howie would sometimes treat himself to a fifteen-cent dinner.

Of late the old man had little to say to his fellow boarders. He spent most of his time in his room. On Wednesday, when the janitor went to the room to make the bed he found Howie ill. Miss Anne Bolton, one of the surviving members of his former employer's family, visited the old man and, finding that he was in a dying condition, had him removed to the hospital. Before his death Howie told one of the hospital attendants to have Miss Bolton place his estate in the hands of her lawyer.

He added that he had made a will, and that it would be found in his trunk at the tavern. Miss Bolton engaged City Judge Van Zelm, who has been her attorney for a number of years. Miss Bolton was greatly surprised when Judge Van Zelm broke open the old leather trunk of the old man and took out eight bags of gold coin containing $200 each. The other contents of the trunk were a bag of foreign coins, mostly gold; several savings bank books, showing deposits of $17,000, with no interest drawn in thirty years; a memorandum of sixty shares of New-Haven Railroad stock, half a dozen bonds and mortgages, a gold watch and banknotes.

There were two wills in the trunk. One of them was dated in 1893, and in it the dead man bequeathed all of his property to his three nieces and nephews in Chicago. In another will, dated 1898, he gives his property to his sister in Scotland during her life, and afterward to the relatives in Chicago. The sister is Mrs. Mary Scott, Scotchland. A call message sent to her yesterday by Judge Van Zelm will be the first intimation she will have of the fortune she has fallen heir to. The gold in Howie's trunk had been wrapped up in bags made of cast iron, and then wrapped in newspapers. Judge Van Zelm estimates that the old man's hoard amounts to $800,000 or $1,000,000. On the advice of Miss Bolton, Judge Van Zelm had the property removed to his office and locked in his safe pending the arrival of the heirs.
