

RICE'S VALET CONFESSES.

In and Mr. Rice was sitting again by the window. He tried to persuade him to go to bed. He refused at first. I carried and put him into bed. Then I left. Mr. Rice said that Patrick said that he would assist me as soon as he could do so without being seen—that was before I put him to bed.

LAWYER BROUGHT THE PAPERS.

He told me that if Mr. Patrick did not come the next morning he would notify the authorities, and this was his last warning. I telephoned to Mr. Patrick about 6 o'clock. Mr. Patrick said that he would be at the house about 7 o'clock. He came about 7 o'clock, and had a package of papers and set in a chair by the bed, talking to Mr. Rice. Mr. Patrick said: "Why do you wish the papers?" I do not remember Mr. Rice's answer. The old man then told Mr. Patrick that he was very nervous and did not wish to be troubled.

Mr. Patrick said something—I do not know whether it was "Jimminy" or what—and then asked me for a bottle and a sponge. I gave them to him. He then asked me to get the papers from the desk. I went to the desk and opened in and saw Mr. Rice lying on his back. The towel was away from a cone shape and was over his whole face. I went to the desk and saw that Mr. Rice was dead. I opened the door just enough to see what was going on, and just as soon as I saw the position of things I went and laid down on my bed and went to sleep.

JONES PLOTTED AT PATRICK.

After Mr. Osborne had made public the confession of Jones, he said to the newspaper men who were in his office: "The reason which Jones gave for making this confession was the feeling that he was in a prison. He was not in a prison, but he felt that he was. He was not in a prison, but he felt that he was. He was not in a prison, but he felt that he was."

GATHERED UP HIS BELONGINGS.

After Mr. Rice was laid out by Mr. Potter, the undertaker's assistant, Mr. Patrick then gathered up all the letters. I was with him. He gathered as much of the papers as he could get. He had the money that was in his trunk, and Mr. Patrick selected from the papers we had collected. He said: "I want to get all the papers and take the valuable papers away."

MISTAKE ON ONE CHECK.

About ten minutes after Mr. Wallace telephoned me and told me that there was a check presented there, drawn to the order of Albert T. Patrick. I reached the room of Mr. Rice at 8:30 p. m., and found that the old man had apparently been dead twenty minutes. There were no signs that ether or chloroform had been used, nor did the doctor find any indication of having died from unnatural causes.

JONES'S EFFORT AT SUICIDE.

It created great excitement among keepers and prisoners. The news that Jones, the valet of William M. Rice, had attempted to commit suicide yesterday morning spread from cell to cell in the Tombs like an alarm of fire.

AMONG KEEPERS AND PRISONERS.

The news that Jones, the valet of William M. Rice, had attempted to commit suicide yesterday morning spread from cell to cell in the Tombs like an alarm of fire. The prisoner had been brought back to his cell from his last examination before the District Attorney about 8 o'clock the night before.

ORDERED TO KEEP OUT DETECTIVES.

Some time between 4 and 6 o'clock I went to dinner and came back. Mr. Patrick remained till 5 o'clock. He went away, saying he would be back the next morning. I do not remember exactly, and that some detectives were about, and if they came to the house, not to let them in. Mr. Patrick telephoned this to me.

"LOOK OUT FOR THE WORST."

Mr. Patrick called at the house about 2 o'clock, and having revived his patient, ordered him to be carried to the ambulance. At the hospital Jones was placed in the prison ward, in charge of Dr. Anderson, and under the guard of a policeman and two keepers.

ACCOUNT OF A PRISONER.

The story of Jones's attempt upon his life is graphically told by William Kern, whose cell commanded a view of the one occupied by the valet. Kern said: "It was about 4 o'clock when I was awakened from a sound sleep by the calling of keepers and the light of the electric light in the corridor. I did not sleep much, because I didn't know what was coming next. Up to this time I was in the dark as to the general situation. I knew the checks were not right."

HOUSE BLAMES GARDINER.

House lawyer condemns working third degree—District Attorney's office.

TORNEY TALKS.

Conflicting reasons are advanced for the action of Charles F. Jones, the valet of the late William Marsh Rice, in cutting his throat in the Tombs prison. Frederick B. House, the lawyer for Patrick and Jones, lays the whole responsibility to the District Attorney.

MR. GARDINER LAUGHS.

District Attorney Gardiner laughed heartily when he heard that Mr. House had said: "Why, it is as plain as the nose on your face." He continued that Jones cut his throat because Patrick told him that Jones told him last night and the night before that Patrick had called him and told him he had better kill himself.

JONES IN DESPAIR.

"I was there about 12:40-12:50 to 1:15 o'clock this afternoon, in Bellevue Hospital, and I found Jones quite comfortable. The matter seemed to be plying on his mind. He sobbed and cried and wrung his hands, and said: 'My God! My God! To think what I have done to my best friend, and only friend I had, Mr. Rice. Only think that I was in that other room and knew that he was being killed and that I did not know it!'"

DIDN'T KNOW OF THE CONFESSION.

Mr. House was asked if he knew that the alleged confession by Jones had been made Tuesday night, and he replied: "No, that is now to me. When I saw Jones yesterday morning about 9 o'clock, he told me that about 8:30 the previous evening a message had been brought to him that his counsel wished to see him, and Jones said, 'I thought it was strange that you would want to see me at that hour, or could see me, but I went down past the counsel room into a large room, which I thought was the Warden's office. There I found Mr. Osborne, Captain McClusky, Captain Baker, Mr. Byrne, Mr. Miller and two unknown men.'"

KILLED IN TRENCH TRENCH.

MOTORMAN DRIVES AHEAD IN A CROWD. ED STREET AND STRIKES TWO MEN.

John Moran, thirty years old, single, a laborer, living at No. 268 West Sixtieth-st., while working in a trench at Fifty-third-st. and Eighth-avenue, yesterday afternoon, was struck by a west-bound Columbus-ave. car and killed. Patrick Moran, twenty-one years old, of No. 301 West Twenty-first-st., a fellow laborer, was struck by the same car and seriously injured. A third man, name unknown, escaped injury by ducking his head.

A FOSSIL MAN.

An Italian shoemaker, Salvatore Porso, twenty-five years old, of North-st., near the northeast corner of Fifty-third-st. and Eighth-avenue, he yelled to the men, and then made an effort to help Moran, but before he could do so he was struck by the car and hurled to the eastbound track. The car struck Moran at the base of the skull, throwing him under the front wheels. Kemp seemed dazed and powerless. The conductor ordered the car to stop at West Forty-seventh-st., had the driver of the car to stop at West Forty-seventh-st., had the driver of the car to stop at West Forty-seventh-st., had the driver of the car to stop at West Forty-seventh-st.

AN ALMOST PERFECT SPECIMEN FOUND IN NEVADA.

From the Boston Herald. Out of the West came an overland train; out of the train came a man; into a duff and over the hills to South Boulder, Colorado, he came. He was a freight elevator to the third floor, on a hand truck to a corner under a skylight; the passenger was a man in a duff and over the hills to South Boulder, Colorado, he came.
