

MUSICAL COMMENT.

DOINGS AT THE OPERA CHRISTMAS MUSIC FOR YOUNG PEOPLE— MOZART REDIVIVUS.

It is expected that the return of M. Jean de Reszke this evening will bring that subtle of gladness to the opera season which thus far has been lacking. Artistically, nobody could have asked more than has been offered without appearing to do so. All the performances, down to "Fidelio" on last Friday evening, were brilliant musically, and even the substitution of "Tannhauser" for "Die Walkure" on last Monday occasioned no discord. Mr. de Reszke's subscribers have doubtless heard him become nauseated with the second act. They will hear all the operas in the list before the season is over, and the order in which they hear them is a matter of small moment. The Saturday matinee audience will hear "Die Walkure" before the people of Monday, but the people of Monday, Providence permitting (as the pious folk say in New-England), will hear "Die Walkure" on Monday. Saturday matinee audience, Friday's opera formed a performance as it did in story and music. Frau Terina is profoundly in sympathy with "Fidelio" and particularly well fitted for its principal role, and acquitted herself nobly; but there was a clog upon the performance, from which even she could not release herself. Its blood flowed sluggishly; Mr. Damrosch put vitality only into the "Lohengrin" overture which opened the second act. It was a performance without inspiration. Mr. Dippel's orchestra, though intelligently conceived and presented with complete and unselfish devotion, is not a heroic figure. Mr. Blass, the new Rocco, sang well, but disclosed his limitations as a character actor. There was a newcomer in the cast in the person of Miss Fritz Scheff, a plouffe little personage full of arch whimsical coquettish, neat in song and neat in action, but with a small voice.

Saturday there were repetitions of "La Bohème" in the afternoon and "Roméo et Juliette" in the evening. There being little that can be said in approval of the first opera and absolutely nothing novel about the second, a note on the performance must cover the case. If there were any evidence that "La Traviata" had lost its old vogue because the public has become nauseated with its subject, it would be easy to predict that "La Bohème," which is tenfold more nauseating, would never acquire a vogue. But it is only the musical style of "La Traviata" that the people have wearied of, not its delectable story. "La Bohème" is modern in its musical manner; the people runs wild; when in its musical manner, it is diverting—there is nothing on the stage to encourage somnolence. Besides, it is superbly sung and acted; its pace waxes even the voice and action of Melba, and no one ought to be surprised if it prove to be the first of Mr. Grau's novelties to achieve success. Yet Saturday's audience was small. In the evening Miss Suzanne Adams, a singer of delightful gifts, who is spending day after day in the hearts of many people, sang a record on the operatic stage at the end of the nineteenth century.

Mr. Frank Damrosch gave Christmas music to the patrons of his Young People's Concerts on Saturday, and since a large portion of the programme was given up to the activity section of Handel's "Messiah" and the audience was more than usual, the inference would seem to be that the two performances of the favorite Christmas oratorio by the Oratorio Society had not exhausted the people's desire to hear it. What a singular, and mayhap instructive, experiment it would be to give "The Messiah" at some other time of the year! Besides the choir, which was chiefly, but not exclusively, recruited from the People's Choral Union, he gave the orchestral march from Liszt's "Christus" (a peculiarly empty thing, aside from its programme), his own arrangement of the German Christmas song "Silent Night, Holy Night," and three of Cornelius's Christmas songs for solo voice and piano. Here there was little to comment.

Miss Macintyre was so badly used by the voyage from England that it has been found necessary to change the opera for Wednesday night. Instead of "Mefistofele" "The Flying Dutchman" will be given in German, with Mme. Gaski in the part of Senta.

It seems likely that the first decade of the twentieth century will see a revival of interest in the music of the eighteenth. The programmes of orchestral concerts in Europe and America disclose a steady growing list of archaic pieces. A few years ago one of three of Mozart's symphonies, the "Jupiter," G minor and E flat, could by any chance be found upon the current lists; now it is a common occurrence to see the remark, "for the first time," after a Mozart symphony time in Berlin and Boston. Mr. Sam Franko is illustrating the tendency here, and has found a novelty for his next American symphony concert which is unknown to the historians up to-day. It is a "string quartet" for oboe, clarinet, horn, bassoon and orchestra, which was not even known to Kitchel, unless it be, as Brettkopf and Härtel intimate, the work which Mozart wrote in Paris for the Concerts spirituels, the performance of which was frustrated by the intrigues of his enemies. This was in 1778. Mozart sold the score to Le Gros and kept no copy, and both Jahn and Kitchel counted the work as lost. They would scarcely have been able to identify the work which was revived by the conductor of the Meiningen orchestra a year ago, and the Paris symphony, of which we know only from a letter of Mozart's, if it were not for the fact that the letter indicates that the concert instruments of which he writes were flute, oboe, horn and bassoon, instead of oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon. Other interesting old novelties which Mr. Franko promises are "The Dance of the Hours" by Cherubini and "The Flying Dutchman" by Liszt.

SUNDAY NIGHT AT THE OPERA HOUSE. A considerable holiday outpouring attended the second of the Sunday concerts at the Metropolitan Opera House last night, and as usual went in for the whole show. Encores were as much a matter of course as the numbers on the original programme. A varied offering was given, including by Herr Dippel the new novelties, "The Flying Dutchman" by Liszt and "The Dance of the Hours" by Cherubini, and as its close, "The Flying Dutchman" by Liszt.

ORTHODOX HEBREWS IN SESSION. DR. MENDES TALKS ON DIVORCE—REQUEST FOR JEWISH ARMY AND NAVY CHAPLAINS.

The biennial meeting of the Union of Orthodox Hebrew Congregations was held yesterday at the "Bridge-st." synagogue. The meeting was attended by representatives from ninety-six orthodox congregations in the United States and Canada. The Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes, the president of the Union, occupied the chair, and the Rev. Dr. J. Buchman, Max Cohen, Isadore Hirschfeld and J. Buchhalter acted as secretaries. The union was organized two and a half years ago to advance the religious and moral interests of the Jewish people, and as its close, it was decided to hold a conference in connection with the Geneva Red Cross convention. The letter to Seth Low and another to the President of the United States were in relation to the substitution of another emblem than the Red Cross for Jewish physicians. The resolutions, which were adopted, were in relation to the substitution of another emblem than the Red Cross for Jewish physicians. The resolutions, which were adopted, were in relation to the substitution of another emblem than the Red Cross for Jewish physicians.

The committee on Resolutions made its report through the Rev. Dr. B. Frachman. Some of the resolutions presented by this committee aroused the opposition, and almost all the resolutions were thoroughly discussed. One resolution was that a committee be appointed to confer with the authorities at Washington, and to them to provide chaplains in the Army and Navy.

A FAKE REFORMER—HOW'S THIS FOR A PROPHECY?

Navy to minister to the religious instruction of the Hebrews in those branches of the public service. A resolution providing for special services for the instruction of the young brought forth a storm of opposition, and the resolution was finally referred to the Executive Committee.

The following officers were elected for two years: The Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes, president; the Rev. M. De Sola, of Montreal; L. N. Denbitz, of Louisville; Dr. A. Friedwald, of Baltimore; and Dr. K. H. Baraboo, of New-York, vice-presidents; Jacob Hecht, of New-York, treasurer; Albert Lucas, Max Cohen, Isadore Hirschfeld and J. Buchhalter, all of New-York, secretaries.

TO BECOME A NATIONAL BODY.

FUTURE OF THE SOCIETY FOR PRESERVING HISTORIC PLACES AND OBJECTS—LETTER FROM PRESIDENT HADLEY—THE PALISADES.

The trustees of the Society for the Preservation of Scenic and Historic Places and Objects, which secured the legislation last winter creating the Interstate Palisades Park Commission, adopted the following resolutions at a meeting held on Saturday evening:

Resolved, That this society has learned with great satisfaction and approval, reached by the joint Commission of the States of New-York and New-Jersey, appointed to devise means to preserve the Palisades, and that it sees in the conclusions and recommendations of the Commission a reasonable and practicable means of attaining an object in which this society has taken for many years a deep interest, and to the consummation of which as an organization and through the work of one of its committees it has materially contributed.

Resolved, That the results reached by the joint Commission, aided as it has been by liberal personal contributions, would seem to make the great work of preserving the Palisades for all time practicable by the indicated appropriations, which are insignificant as compared with the magnitude of the interests and value of the objects to be attained thereby.

THE WEATHER REPORT.

YESTERDAY'S RECORD AND TO-DAY'S FORECAST. Wednesday, Dec. 30.—Low pressure with unsettled weather prevails over the southeastern half of the country to-night, and rain has been general over practically the entire area, except New-England, with somewhat higher temperatures. Over the northwestern half reverse conditions obtain, high pressure with cold winds covering that district, with snow over the Middle and Northern slopes and the Central Rocky Mountain region. There has been snow in the Middle and Northern plateaus; elsewhere west of the Rocky Mountains the weather has been fair. Temperatures are much lower over the middle and northern portions of this district, and there were frosts Sunday morning in California.

The cold wave will move steadily eastward and by Tuesday morning will extend through the Gulf States, the Ohio Valley and lake region. It will continue cold Tuesday over this district, and be much colder in the Atlantic States. In the Northwest the temperature will rise slowly after Monday morning. There will be rain Monday in the South Atlantic States, rain or snow in the Middle Atlantic States and New-England, rain, turning into snow in the lower lake region and upper Ohio Valley, and snow in the upper lake region, the middle Mississippi Valley, Eastern Colorado and the northern portion of the Southwestern States. On Tuesday generally fair weather will prevail, except that light local snows are probable over portions of the lake region. On the Atlantic Coast the winds will become fresh westerly.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND TUESDAY.

For New-England, rain or snow to-day. Tuesday, colder and generally fair, except probably snow in extreme northern portion; fresh westerly winds. For Eastern New-York, rain or snow to-day. Tuesday, colder, with fair in southern and probably snow in northern portion, fresh westerly winds. For District of Columbia, Eastern Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, Delaware and Maryland, rain or snow to-day. Tuesday, colder and fair; variable winds, becoming northwesterly to-night. For Virginia, rain and colder in southeast, snow or rain in northern and western portions to-day. Tuesday, fair; colder; winds becoming fresh northwesterly. For cold wave to-night. Tuesday, fair and cold, except snow flurries near the lakes; fresh to brisk westerly winds turning into snow; colder; cold wave to-night. Tuesday, fair and cold; winds becoming fresh to brisk northwesterly.

HIRAM HITCHCOCK DEAD.

PROPRIETOR OF FIFTH AVENUE HOTEL, AND WIDELY KNOWN IN SCIENTIFIC AND BUSINESS CIRCLES.

Hiram Hitchcock, the senior member of the firm of Hitchcock, Darling & Co., of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, died yesterday morning at a quarter before 10 o'clock in his apartments at the hotel. Death resulted from pneumonia, which had developed from a severe cold. Mr. Hitchcock had been ill only nine days. He had caught the cold at the New-England dinner, which was held at the Waldorf the Saturday before Christmas. He had, nevertheless, been around the hotel until last Wednesday, when he complained of pains in his lungs. Dr. Charles E. Quimby, of No. 44 West Thirty-sixth-st., the generally known to the people of this city by his partnership with Alfred B. Darling and Pan Stevens and the establishment of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, at Fifth-avenue and Twenty-third-avenue, died yesterday morning at a quarter before 10 o'clock in his apartments at the hotel. Death resulted from pneumonia, which had developed from a severe cold. Mr. Hitchcock had been ill only nine days. He had caught the cold at the New-England dinner, which was held at the Waldorf the Saturday before Christmas. He had, nevertheless, been around the hotel until last Wednesday, when he complained of pains in his lungs. Dr. Charles E. Quimby, of No. 44 West Thirty-sixth-st., the

Since 1879 Mr. Hitchcock had been associated with many enterprises of a business and financial character and a considerable number of associations and societies. He was one of the prime movers in projecting and erecting the Madison Square Garden, land for which was purchased from the New-York and Harlem Real Estate Company by James A. Woodward, and transferred by him to the Madison Square Garden Company on June 23, 1877. Mr. Hitchcock was president of the company during the construction of the great building and its opening. He later withdrew from the corporation. He was one of the founders of the Garfield National Bank and the Garfield Safe Deposit Bank, at Twenty-third-st. and Sixth-avenue, and was the vice-president of both organizations at the time of his death.

Mr. Hitchcock's interest in Dartmouth College never waned after his return, in 1879, to this city. He made several gifts of money to the institution, and in 1893 he gave the college the Mary Hitchcock Memorial Hospital, built by him in memory of his first wife. The dedicatory services were held on May 22, 1899, and the hospital, which, through his benevolence, has been handsomely renovated in the Colonial style of architecture.

Mr. Hitchcock was extremely devoted to his New-Hampshire home, and took great delight in country life. He found an especial pleasure in his herd of Jerseys, which he boasted had as good blood as flowed in any herd of cattle. He remarried on May 22, 1889, and the arrangements for the wedding, which took place in Hanover were kept so secret that the occasion was not known to the most of his friends until the last hour. His wife, before her marriage, was Emma H. Howell, of Hanover, N. H., and had for more than two years made her home at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. The two were distant cousins.

Among the associations and societies of which Mr. Hitchcock was a member may be mentioned the Association for the Advancement of Science, the New-York Academy of Sciences, the American Geographical Society, the Dartmouth Scientific Association, the New-England Society, the New-York Chamber of Commerce and the University Club.

Mr. Hitchcock came into national prominence as the president of the Nicaragua Canal Association, in which he invested largely and which originally proposed to construct the Nicaragua Canal. It was said by one of Mr. Hitchcock's partners that his death would in no way affect the management of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, which will hereafter be under the joint direction of Elmer A. Darling and Charles N. Vilas.

FUTURE OF THE FIFTH AVENUE.

MR. HITCHCOCK'S DEATH REVIVES RUMORS ABOUT THE HOTEL—MR. VILAS'S STATEMENT. The Fifth Avenue Hotel, of which Mr. Hitchcock was the chief projector, and with which he had been so closely associated ever since its erection, was built in the years of 1885-'89. The site was originally occupied by a hostelry, for here, in 1833, a two-story wooden house, with sloping roof and broad eaves, was erected, which for twenty years was famous as the "Madison Cottage." The old road house was torn down in 1853, and on the site was built a great tent shaped building known as the Hippodrome. It was considered far and away from the business part of the city, and was devoted to circuses and similar entertainments. In 1855 the property was bought by Amos R. Eno and the construction of the hotel was immediately begun. It was opened under the management of Mr. Hitchcock, Mr. Darling and Pan Stevens, on August 1, 1889.

Built of white marble of Corinthian architecture and with accommodations for one thousand guests, the hotel has always been leased by practically the same management. The present lease expires on August 1, 1901. The annual rental is $30,000. The property was sold on April 27 last by the executors of the Eno estate to William F. Eno for $1,250,000. It has been frequently rumored that Eno as the present lease expires Mr. Eno will tear down the hotel and erect a high office building on the site. This report was again revived and circulated last night. Some evidence seemed to be given in also, because Mr. Eno has had plans for such an office building drawn by an architect. In answer to this rumor Mr. Vilas, one of the lessees, said last night: "There is no more reason to think that the hotel is going to be superseded by a skyscraper now than a year ago. Nevertheless, no one can tell what will ensue, no one can tell what the morrow will bring forth, as in the case of the death of our partner."

THE PASSING THROUG.

P. A. O'Farrell, of Spokane, Wash., who was one of the negotiators for the sale of the Le Roi Mine to the London and Globe Finance Corporation, spoke Friday afternoon and GLOBE yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria FINANCIER— as to the methods of Whitaker Wright, the promoter of the Le Roi mine, in securing the success of his "financing" scheme. Mr. O'Farrell said that he is an American, and having failed dismally on this side of the Atlantic, went to London, where within a decade he has achieved a most meteoric career. He floated into prominence and fortune in the flood tide of the boom in West Australian gold mines. The London and Globe Finance Corporation was a promoting concern for manufacturing securities, a promoter of the Le Roi mine, and one of the members of the Board of Directors of that corporation, save Wright himself, had the least grasp of its affairs or of the real nature of its ramifications and ventures. Men like Lord Dufferin and Lord Loch and Lord William Berosford, who were not to be deceived by the show of the mine, and the rich mine in Lake View, in West Australia, which he had secured for $250,000, and the stock soared to $25 a share. An American mining engineer was in charge at the mine, and he reported a bonanza ore shoot which was producing most of the $200,000 a month was growing in size and value. Wright had perfect reliance in this American mining engineer, and as a result he bought all the Lake View stock, and he bought the shares at top prices he was informed that the great bonanza ore shoot was dug out. His confidence in the American mining engineer was so great that he was in collusion with Whitaker Wright's enemies in London. I shall not give you the details of the Le Roi mine, but I think, at the present a guest at the Waldorf. He told me ten days ago that Wright lost a couple of million pounds in Lake View.

"Before the Lake View collapse Whitaker Wright had advanced $100,000 to the Baker Street Railroad scheme. Two years ago he and OPERATIONS bought out the British American BRITISH CORPORATION with a capital of $7,000,000. It was oversubscribed and the COLUMBIA. $500,000. The stock went to a premium. That corporation bought up the Le Roi, Le Roi No. 2, Kootenay, and the Great Western mines in the Kootenay district. The purchase price of everything the British American Corporation bought in Canada was about $1,000,000, and this included a smelter at Northport for treating the ores of the mines they bought. Since the date of purchase the Le Roi mine alone has made $2,000,000 profit. The other mines have been in process of development, and have earned no dividends. But the British American Corporation was but another tail to Whitaker Wright's kite. Instead of operating the British American Corporation through the British American Corporation, Wright manufactured four different corporations:

Table with 3 columns: Name, Number of shares, Value. Includes Le Roi, Le Roi No. 2, Great Western, Kootenay.

"These four companies were floated on the London market, and the stock of Le Roi No. 2 went to $26, Le Roi itself to $3 and the others to a premium. The market value of British American Corporation and its four adjunct corporations, three of which were floated in London, that represented an investment of less than $5,000,000, all made within three years. This was inflation, and not a matter of fact. I see, too, that the accounts of the Le Roi are altogether untrue. During the two years, but Wright held out the smelter in the transfer of the Le Roi, and he sold the smelter for $2,000,000 and the mine $500,000. The $2,500,000 goes to the smelter, wherever Whitaker Wright chooses. The Le Roi mine and smelter cost less than $2,000,000. The Le Roi mine and smelter, which is a most wonderful mine, but by divorcing the smelter from the mine, Whitaker Wright hit upon a plan of absolute robbery. He cooked the part of the profits of this great mine, I am almost glad that this collapse has come, for it will uncover and disclose the real character of the Le Roi. I have been expecting this collapse for a year. Wright's methods in the British Columbia field have revealed to the Le Roi, and he was as unscrupulous an operator as I have ever known."

TWO BURT IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH.

Henry W. Kaufman, a liquor dealer, of No. 218 West Twenty-second-st., and Edward Schmidt, forty-six years old, a broker, of No. 226 West Forty-fifth-st., were slightly injured yesterday afternoon in One-hundred-and-sixty-eighth-st., near Riverside Drive. They were riding in an automobile, operated by James Lyons, of No. 228 East Twenty-eighth-st. When near Riverside Drive, Lyons, in attempting to turn out of the way of an approaching vehicle, ran into a pile of building material. The dashboard of the car was broken and Kaufman and Schmidt sustained cuts and bruises of the hands and arms. The men were taken to St. Luke's Hospital in the ambulance, where they were attended by Dr. Reynolds. They then went to their homes.

TO SELL CHAMBERLIN HOTEL AT AUCTION.

Newport News, Va., Dec. 30 (Special).—The Chamberlin Hotel, at Old Point Comfort, which has been closed for several months pending a suit against the owners, was reopened to-day, newly painted and decorated throughout. The receivers will sell it at public auction on February 2. The hotel cost $1,000,000.

TWO NEW CASES OF SMALLPOX.

Two cases of smallpox were discovered at No. 116 Middle-st., in the Eastern District, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon. They were Bernadette de Nair, forty years old, and Amelia de Nair, seven years old. Both patients were removed to North Brother Island and the houses were fumigated. Vaccinators from the Health Board will to-day inoculate everybody in the neighborhood. Only eight cases have been reported in Brooklyn.
