three Commissioners. In that case there would be no economy in reorganization.

BARRED OUT OF OHIO.

The good people of Ohio have just had the satisfaction of seeing an interesting issue decided on sound principles to the honor and advantage of the State. For several weeks the promoters of a pair of heavyweight pugilists had been doing everything in their power to carry out their arrangements for a prize-fight in Cincinnati last night, under the pretense that it was to be a sparring exhibition, and was consequently not forbidden by the letter of the law.

which alone is recognized here, and the increasing number of social scandals in high life and lowly, attest the evil of too easy and therefore inconsiderate and ill advised marriages. A marriage is contracted properly and with promise of good results only when it is contracted "reverently, discreetly, advisedly, soberly."

PROPHECIES OF A CENTURY AGO.

Prophecies of evil, as we have hitherto remarked, are plentiful at the beginning of the new reign in England. They predict all manner of evil for the old Kingdom, because of its big debt, its tyrannical rule over parts of its Empire and the wide dispersion of that Empire about the globe. It is not likely that King Edward has been awake at nights worrying lest these forebodings shall come true.

CARS IN GROUPS.

One feature of local transit which is productive of much annoyance to the public and which seems quite unnecessary is the running of cars and trains in groups, instead of singly at regular intervals. The system, applied to trolley cars, was much practised by the old Nassau company in Brooklyn, along with "cotton cars" and other abominations.

UNIFORMITY IN STREET SIGNS.

The question of signs at street corners is up again before the city government, as well it may be. There are really few more urgent needs than the general, accurate and uniform provision of such signs. We may say, and truly, that it is a minor matter compared with the need of rapid transit, of clean and well paved streets of an adequate water supply and of honest and efficient police.

LEADERSHIP IN A DEMOCRACY.

For some reason or other a discussion has been started in the English papers defining as part of the duty laid on each child "to order myself lowly and reverently to all my betters." Whatever of truth there may be wrapped up in these words and there is a great deal more than modern Demos is willing to admit—the phraseology is undoubtedly archaic, and suggests conditions of social subordination that are no longer possible or desirable.

MATRIMONY AND MORALITY.

The progress of the measure abolishing "common law marriages" in this State is to be regarded with approval. The enactment of it into law will abolish various grave evils, and, we believe, be a long step in the direction of better morals and of making matrimony the "honorable estate" which the welfare of society requires it to be.

my betters," may seem at first only imperfectly to describe this attitude of the people in democratic America, for instance, toward their true leaders and spokesmen. But though in form the words suggest an outward relationship that fortunately no longer exists, in spirit they do describe the trustful reverence that the plain people always manifest toward those who prove their right to leadership. Indeed, it is both pitiful and pathetic to see how the masses sometimes "order themselves lowly and reverently," not to their real "betters," but to those whom they have been wheedled into regarding as such, while all the time they are pluming themselves on their refusal to recognize the superiority of any man.

"Never explain, never retract, and let them howl" was the sardonic way in which Professor Jowett said that all popular outcries should be treated. It is, of course, neither wise nor possible always to meet public criticism in this high-handed manner, for, to speak of nothing else, a man thus criticised is not usually so absolutely right as to justify such a course. There are times, however, when the advice of Professor Jowett ought to be followed, and perhaps the greatest defect in a democracy lies in the fact that many public men in every walk of life are either unable or unwilling thus to treat popular clamor or condemnation. The true representative of the people is not necessarily he who slavishly obeys every popular mandate, but rather he who, even in spite of the people themselves, stands up for what he knows to be for their real interest, and who is willing, if need be, to go down in temporary defeat on such an issue rather than all in consummating an injustice or a wrong.

THE TALK OF THE DAY.

In describing Sir Arthur Sullivan's rapid methods of work, George Grossmith says: "He told me himself at one of the final dress rehearsals of 'Iolanthe' that he had yet to do the overture to the opera—which any one can still see as an elaborate and masterly composition. He sat up till about three o'clock in the morning, leaning his head on his desk, and writing with an assiduity which it is almost impossible to realize."

A SONG OF PRAISE.

Earth seemed a lonely dwelling place: Singing, when sorrow found him, "This world is not a friend to grace." Grace the violets at his feet, Grace in the love of children sweet, Grace where he heard the home-bird beat, Grace in the heavenly singing crown him.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD THAT DISTRICT ATTORNEY PHILIP INTENDS TO BRING TO TRIAL A NUMBER OF CASES IN WHICH HIS PREDECESSORS IN OFFICE HAD PLEADED THE INDICTMENTS.

It is understood that District Attorney Philip intends to bring to trial a number of cases in which his predecessors in office had pleaded the indictments. Under previous administration it was the custom to plead guilty to many offenses with strong political backing, because the indictments were put aside and the cases were not called in the courts. Here is an opportunity for an important change for the better, and the new District Attorney does not appear to be inclined to neglect it.

The Legislatures of several States are considering bills for the imposition of severe penalties for the atrocious crime of kidnapping. In most of the American statute books the punishment is not sufficiently rigorous to alarm criminals who are prone to offenses of that sort. The laws should be amended.

MISS HELEN JOHNSON HAS ORGANIZED A SOCIETY OF YOUNG WOMEN IN BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

Miss Helen Johnson has organized a society of young women in Binghamton, N. Y., the members of which agree not to speak during Lent or go shopping or make a party, or wear any of the things that are set of signs by which they may communicate with each other, and the code is nearly as extensive as that of any of the secret societies. For communication with these outside the charmed circle the members during the forty days of their penance will carry pads and pencils.

MRS. STAFFORD OF MARTHA'S VINEYARD, IS A DAUGHTER-IN-LAW OF LEUTENANT STAFFORD, COMMANDER OF THE UNITED STATES FRIGATE BON HOMME RICHARD.

Mrs. Stafford of Martha's Vineyard, is a daughter-in-law of Lieutenant Stafford, commander of the United States frigate Bon Homme Richard. In a glass case in the parlor she has the remains of the flag that floated at the masthead during the fight with the Serapis. A shot threw it into the sea, and Lieutenant Stafford needed it and nailed it to the masthead, for which deed the flag was presented to him by Congress. The flag was made by the Misses Mary and Sarah Adams, and was the first flag that ever floated over an American man-of-war or was ever saluted by a foreign naval power.

John Xavier Merriman, who is coming to England, says "The King," of London, "is one of the most interesting figures in South African politics. Farmer, surveyor, LL. D., member of Parliament, ex-Cabinet Minister, Bishop's son, he has played his part in every phase of life at the Cape, and played it well. He is not the latter-day of England that some would have us believe. He has been in the main a self-made man, the survivor of the first Ministry of Sir John Lubbock, and he has been the friend of every movement to strengthen imperial unity. He was afraid to fight with his own friends when he thought they were going the wrong way, and he was a member of the Cabinet which first put the constitution of the Empire on a firm basis. He sat in the Cabinet with Mr. Rhodes, too, which is proof of his loyalty to the common flag. But the old party lines were not there."

DUKE OF WESTMINSTER WEDS.

HIS MARRIAGE TO MISS SHELLEIGH WEST TAKES PLACE IN LONDON.

London, Feb. 15.—The Duke of Westminster and Miss Shelleigh West were married at St. Paul's Church, Knightsbridge, this afternoon.

The beautifully decorated edifice was filled to its capacity with distinguished people. The service was fully choral.

Colonel William Cornwallis West gave his daughter away.

The bride wore a gown of soft white satin, with a high collar and a long train. Her veil was a chiffon overdress richly embroidered with silver, with a full court train of ivory velvet, embroidered with sprays of roses. She wore a superb Westminster diamond and pearl ornaments. Pages, in suits copied from Gainsborough's "Blue Boy," bore the train. There were eight bridesmaids, in white satin, with wreaths of white roses and silver leaves on their heads instead of picture hats.

After the ceremony there was a reception at Countess Grosvenor's house. Subsequently the couple started for Eaton Hall, where they will spend their honeymoon. An enthusiastic reception of the bride and bridegroom has been prepared by the tenants. There was a torchlight procession and illuminations.

The newly married couple received over five hundred presents. Among the more notable were Queen Alexandra and the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York.

The Duke of Westminster (Hugh Richard Arthur Grosvenor) was born on March 19, 1859, and is the only son of the late Earl Grosvenor and Lady Sibell Mary Lumley, who married in 1857, George Wyndham, member of Parliament for Dudley and now Chief Secretary for Ireland. He succeeded to the dukedom in 1896, on the death of his grandfather, the first Duke of Westminster. He is descended from Sir Richard Grosvenor, Knight and Member of Parliament for Cheshire, who was created a baronet in 1622.

The present Duke was educated at Eton, and is a lieutenant in the Royal Horse Guards. He served in the South Africa last year as an extra aide-camp to Field Marshal Lord Roberts and was also on the staff of Sir Alfred Milner, the British High Commissioner in South Africa. The Duke owns about thirty thousand acres of land in Cheshire and Flintshire and six hundred acres in London. He is a patron of twelve libraries. His country seat is at Eaton Hall, Cheshire, and Halkin, Flintshire. His London residence is Grosvenor House, No. 33 Grosvenor-st., W. The Grosvenor House Gallery was founded in 1770.

The present heir to the dukedom is the uncle of the holder of the title, Lord Arthur Hugh Grosvenor, who was born in 1869 and who also served in South Africa last year with the Imperial Yeomanry. The Duke's only daughter, the Countess of South Devon, who is the wife of the Earl of Shaftesbury, and Lady Lettice Mary Elizabeth, who is unmarried.

The bride is the youngest daughter of William Cornwallis West, and sister of Lieutenant George Cornwallis West, whose marriage last year to Lady Randolph Churchill (formerly Miss Jennie Jerome, of New-York City) caused a great deal of comment in society circles. The bride's father has been Lord Bessborough since 1872, and is honorary colonel of the 3d Battalion of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers. Mr. Cornwallis West has developed a new seaside place, Milford-on-Sea, on his property in Hampshire, which he has bought about ten thousand acres of land. The bride's elder sister is the wife of the Prince of Wales.

The Duke of Westminster fell in love with Miss West in the lifetime of his grandfather. The latter, with the other members of the Grosvenor family, was bitterly opposed to the match that the young man was shipped off to South Africa. While in the army he met Miss West, who had just returned from the old Duke's estate, and the new royal marriage was arranged. The Duke's grandfather, the holder of the title, had been a claimant to the throne. In his absence, however, he had won the beauty's sonnet but had never been married.

The young Duke, on learning of this state of affairs, returned to England, and in the meantime his father had been killed while fighting the Boers. Captain Wood was an officer of the Shropshire Yeomanry, and his father had been killed. He was wounded and taken to the rear on a litter. A second bullet struck him as he lay on the litter, and he died. He was a handsome man, of good family, and popular in the fashionable society of England, but was almost penniless. The Duke of Westminster, who was then a young man, fell in love with her, especially as she was engaged at the time to the future Duke of Devonshire. He was determined to marry her, and he succeeded in doing so. On this occasion success crowned his efforts, the engagement being announced in the "Times" and "Pall Mall Gazette" party where the young folks were much in each other's company.

SENATOR PLATT MOVES.

GIVES UP THE SUITE SO LONG OCCUPIED BY HIM AND HIS WIFE AND TAKES ANOTHER AT THE FIFTH AVENUE HOTEL.

After continuous occupation for nineteen years of the suite of rooms on the fourth floor of the northeast corner of the Avenue Hotel, Senator Platt has moved to a parlor and bedroom on the Twenty-third-st., side of the hotel. Mrs. Platt's death last week induced the Senator to give up what had become his city home. Republicans who called on Mr. Platt almost mechanically asked to have their cards sent to "two-eighty," as that was the number of the suite occupied by the Platts. It will soon again be available to the Senator. Living anywhere else than in "two-eighty," Mr. Platt is much displeased on account of the death of his wife. He was said to have been in the city for some time at the hotel with him when he is in town. Today Mr. Platt will go to Washington.

CRUSH AT DESCHANEL WEDDING.

STRUGGLING THROUG OF PARISIAN NOTABLES TIES ASSEMBLE AT THE CHURCH.

Paris, Feb. 16.—The religious wedding of M. Paul Deschanel, President of the Chamber of Deputies, and Mile Germaine Bice, who were married on Feb. 15, occurred today before a fashionable assembly in the church of St. Germain des Pres. President Loubet and all the political personages, former diplomats and literary notabilities were present.

There was an extraordinary scene outside the church at noon, the hour fixed for the ceremony. Thousands of invitations had been issued, and the church was not large enough to accommodate all, so the latest arrivals, including the prince and princess, and the Duke of Orleans, found themselves in the midst of a struggling throng of Paris notabilities, elbowing one another in endeavors to obtain an entrance. M. Deschanel, his bride and their parents were kept waiting at the church door for ten minutes before the police could force a passage through the crowd.

General Loubet, the United States Ambassador, General Andre, the Minister of War, M. Victorien Sardou, M. Meunier and Count and Countess de Montebello, were among the guests. General Frotter waved his invitation card and begged to be allowed to pass. The only response was a general shout of "We have cards, too." So General Frotter and other personages, including all the Ministers, except the Minister of the Interior, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, who has not yet recovered, and their wives, had to wait outside until the Prefect of Police, M. Lefevre, had cleared the way.

The throng inside the church absolutely lacked decorum, and had to be prevented from seizing the bride and groom. The spectators hurried and jostled one another in their efforts to secure a glimpse of the bride and groom. Some of the present even climbed into the pulpit.

The ceremony was performed amid the ceaseless chatter of the Parisian notabilities. M. Deschanel was much commended for wearing a black coat, thus breaking through the French tradition the evening dress must be worn at all functions, whatever the time of day.

MISS REHAN'S TOUR.

The admires of Miss Rehan's acting will be pleased to know that her tour with Mr. Kester of "Sweet Nell of Old Drury" has, thus far, been amply successful. Miss Rehan is now in Boston, where she has been cordially welcomed. She is acting at the Museum, and she will remain there till February 23. Two weeks will then be devoted to New-England towns. On March 18 Miss Rehan will appear in Newark, on March 18 in Harlem, and on March 25 in Brooklyn. Mr. Kester's play seems to please the public more than it does the critics. Miss Rehan's acting is full of vitality and potential energy, in the character of Nell Gwyn.

DR. HALE AT THE HARVARD CLUB.

The Harvard Club entertained the Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale, of the class of '33, last night at its house, No. 7 West Forty-fourth-st. Dr. Hale related many reminiscences of his alma mater. He spoke of the many of the class of '33, and of many of his college mates and others who were at Harvard with him and who have since borne honor to the institution.
