BODY BORNE FROM HIS HOME TO THE INDIANA CAPITOL.

MILITARY HONORS PAID TO THE DEAD SOLDIER AND STATESMAN BY HIS CITY, COUNTY AND STATE.

Indianapolis, March 16.—Beneath a canopy of black in the rotunda of the Capitol building, the coffin, covered with the Stars and Stripes, surrounded by thousands of blossoms, while over all swung the great battle flag that flew from the warship Indiana in the naval battle of Santiago, the body of ex-President Harrison lay in state for nine hours to-day. In that time fully fifty thousand persons passed by the coffin to take a last look at the dead, and when at 10 o'cleck the Capitol doors were finally closed and the people told that no more could enter several thousand were waiting in line. The body lay in state from 1:10 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock at night.

It was Indiana's day with her dead, and most touchingly was the esteem and honor in which General Harrison was held by his fellow citizens revealed. In front of the Harrison home, along the streets through which the body was carried on the way to and from the State House, in the lines that stretched at times a half mile from the doors of the Capitol building, men, women and children stood for hours waiting their opportunity to pay a tribute of respect. It was an immense throng, but there was no jostling, no disorder, no disturbance of any kind. Weather more perfect could not have been devised; a trifle cool in the earlier part of the day, it grew warmer later in the day and was most pleasant throughout.

TROOPS TO GIVE HONOR.

The hour set for the formation of the parade from the State House to the Harrison home to receive the body and return with it to the State House was 10:30, and promptly at that time the infantry and artillery were drawn up in Washington-st., on the south side of the State House, At 10:45 Brigadier-General W. J. Mc-Kee, commanding the State troops, ordered the advance, and the infantry moved in a long line along Washington-st. on the way to the house.

Shortly before this a string of carriages, containing Governor Durbin and other officials of the State, had started by another route, and numerous other uniformed bodies were meeting in front of the Harrison home. The streets in every direction were full of marching bodies, and the crash of bands was heard almost in every street that afforded access to Delawarest. The parade proper was formed after the arrival at the Harrison home, and, despite the fact that all preliminary arrangements had been most carefully made, there was some confusion and delay before everything was in readiness for the return march to the capital.

A dense throng had gathered around the Harrison home, in Delaware-st., for hours before the parade arrived. Down Delaware-st. much further than the eye could reach the crowd packed the sidewalks to the doors of the houses along each side of the way. For thirteen squares, all the distance to Washington-st., tens of thousands of persons stood for hours, not from idle curiosity or the desire to view an unprecedented spectacle, but from the simple wish to express by their presence the respect and admiration in which General Harrison was held by his fellow citizens of Indianapolis.

Two hours before the police detail and the military at the head of the funeral procession from the Capitol began to appear around the corner of Thirteenth-st. from Pennsylvania-ave. it was made up of women and children, although a considerable proportion consisted of men-men in the lower walks of life, who had stopped work for the day or long enough to show respect by standing with uncovered heads while the body of the honored dead passed on its way to the State House.

By 11 o'clock part of the second division of the funeral procession had formed at Thirteenth and Delaware sts. General Carnahan, the marshal; Harry S. New, Captain J. M. Paver, Captain W. H. Armstrong, Captain W. E. Heywood, Captain James R. Henry, Captain J. H. Porter, Clinton L. Hare and Worth Merritt, mounted and attired in citizens' clothing of plain black, directed the movements of the various organizations as they arrived and took positions to the approach of other divisions

The boys' brigade, soldiers of the future, erect, with even step, were first past the staff. The 70th Regiment, General Harrison's old command, soldiers whose fighting days have gone, came next, and waited for the moment when they should have the place of honor behind the funeral car. George H. Thomas Post, Grand Army of the Republic, many of the members of which had fought with General Harrison in the war, waited in its turn. The Columbia and Marion clubs, with John L. Griffiths and Judge Lawson M. Harvey, led the clubs as they passed

DELAY IN PROCESSION'S MOVING.

Then came an hour's wait. A number of distinguished men took advantage of the interval to find each other in the crowd and exchange greetings and say a few words of honor to the Ellent figure within the nearby home, who had known and worked with some of them in the councils of the nation. The tall figure of Senator Charles W. Fairbanks came up Thirteenthst. With John B. Elam he stood and talked for half an hour. Then they were joined by Judge Woods, and the three greeted Senator Albert J. Beveridge, who came a little later. As the Bar Association of Marion County passed the two Senators bowed gravely to the numerous silent

Inside the house the undertaker had completed his arrangements. The coffin, draped with the banner of the Loyal Legion, had been closed, and was ready for the journey to the Capitol. On it was a large wreath of Scotch heather and orchids, the tribute of General Harrison's daughter, Mrs. Mary Harrison McKee,

The drawing room, to the left of the reception hall, in which the coffin was placed, was a mass of flowers. President McKinley had sent a magnificent design of Golden Gate roses and lilies of the valley from the White House conservatory. The Pittsburg Republican Club honored the dead ex-President with a beautiful wreath of roses. A great star, filling one corner of the room, was from the servants of the house. A large basket of azaleas came from the State officers. The offering of the 70th Regiment and rostrum are covered with a profusion of was its corps badge, a great star, of blue immortelles. A broken column, six feet high, of roses and mixed flowers, with the shield of the United States on its base, was the tribute of the Columbia Club, of Indianapolis. From the University Club, of which General Harrison had been president since its beginning, came a wreath of tulips, carnations and roses. The offering of the Marion Club, of Indiana, was a wreath of white roses and violets, with a sarge vase of American Beauty roses. There were countless smaller offerings. Shortly before the undertaker completed his arrangements for the removal of the coffin, Mrs. Harrison, with little Elizabeth, both attired in deep mourning, came into the apartment to view the face of the husband and father.

Mrs. Harrison remained only a few minutes and then retired to her apartments. After she had left the room and just before the coffin was taken away Russell B. Harrison and his wife, with Mr. and Mrs. McKee, entered the room, and looked again at the face of the dead.

"I am Mrs. Harrison." "You will excuse me," the old man said, "for intruding on your grief, but I wanted to see my old commander once more, just once more. I have tried very hard to come to Indianapolis to see him when ne was alive, and never could. When I heard that he was dead I wanted to give him the old salute for the last time."

And, raising his hand to his forehead in true military fashion, the old man turned away and passed from the room. The incident nearly overnowered Mrs. Harrison, and it was some time before she regained her composure.

At 11:45 o'clock General McKee ordered 200 infantrymen standing at "attention" on both sides of the streets to "present arms," and in the hush which ensued the coffin was carried from the house and placed in the funeral car. Six sergeants from the 2d Regiment of the State Militia, with two sergeants from the Ind-ianapolis Light Artillery, carried the coffin. #### MARCH TO THE CAPITOL.

When the members of the escort committee had reached their carriages, the order for the return march was given, and, headed by the State Guard, marching with reversed arms and in slow time to the music of the dirge played by the band, the parade moved slowly away. At the head of the column rode Brigadier-General McKee and his staff, commanding the first division, composed entirely of State troops. At the right of the line came the 3d Infantry, Colonel George M. Studebaker commanding; then the 2d Infantry, under Colonel Harry B. Smith; then the 1st Infantry led by Colonel George W. the 1st Infantry, led by Colonel George W.

Behind the National Guard came a number of boys' brigades belonging to the different churches of the city, and then the battalion of artillery commanded by Major A. B. Shanz, and comprising batteries A, B and C of the State Guard. General James B. Carnahan, surrounded a numerous staff, comprised the second di-ion, which was composed of the civic so-

Then, surrounded by the members of General Harrison's old regiment—the 70th Indiana Infantry—came the hearse, drawn by four black horses. Over the black cloth covering the coffin were thrown the silken folds of the Stars and Stripes. There was no other decoration about On the bit of each horse was a rosette and streamer of crape, and this was the only mark of mourning the horses bore.

Behind the hearse came carriages containing the State, county and city officials, members of the Board of Trade and the Indianapolis Compared Club.

mercial Club.

Arriving at the State House the escort was drawn up to one side. Then, while the military presented arms and the drums rolled softly, the coffin was borne into the State House, where, surrounded by the guard of honor, with fixed bayonets, it was to lie until night. About 5 o'clock Mrs. Harrison, accompanied by her brother, Lieutenant-Commander Parker, of the United States Navy, was driven to the east entrance of the building. They were escorted immediately to the Governor's office, escorted immediately to the Governor's office, and the order was given to close the door and clear the house. As soon as this was done Mrs. Harrison, her brother and others who accompanied her to the building were escorted about the structure by Governor Durbin. For a few moments the widow stood alone by the side of the coffin. She was quickly joined by the others, however, and the trip about the building was made. The decorations, floral arrangements and the arrangements and the arrangement generally were praised by Mrs. Harrison. She did not remain in the building more than five minutes. Previous to her visit Colonel and Mrs. Russell Harrison, Master William Henry Harrison, Major and Mrs. J. R. Mc-Kee and Benjamin Harrison McKee had called. The crowd was permitted to stream through the building during their visit, and they watched the people with much interest from the balcony.

THE FUNERAL EXERCISES TO-DAY. SIMPLE SERVICES TO BE HELD IN FIRST

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH-PRESIDENT AMONG THE MOURNERS

the military and other display of to-day, by which the State of Indiana paid its last tribute of honor to General Harrison, will be the funeral services to-morrow afternoon at the First Presbyterian Church. The rites will be simple dignified and unostentatious.

The arrangements for the services to-morrow have been practically completed in detail. The church has been richly but simply decorated with drapings of black and white and of the American flag. The entrances have been draped in black. In the interior and by way of relief to the more sombre trappings the altar palms and potted plants. Owing to the limited capacity of the church which will seat only about one thousand, and because of the great demand for seats, the committee on arrangements found it necessary to announce that admission to the church would be to friends of the family by card. The services to-morrow are intended only for the friends and relatives of General Harrison, and this decision was deemed advisable in order to guarantee that the church would not be overrun with persons who had no claim to entrance, so that the friends would be crowded out. Tickets will be issued to individuals and no to societies or organizations, that may wish to attend in a body. The friends will be admitted to the church by the New-York-st. entrance The Pennsylvania-st. entrance will be closed until the funeral party arrives. It will be closed again during the services, to be opened only for the departure of the funeral party at the close.

The services will be conducted by the Rev. M. L. Haines, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and for many years the close friend of the late General, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Samuel J. Niccolls, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, of St. Louis. Dr. Niccolls was selected by Mrs. Harrison to assist Dr. Haines because of the close friendship that had been formed between General Harrison and Dr. Niccolls in the summer vacations, which the Harrison family have spent in the Adirondacks.

Haines will deliver the principal address while Dr. Niccolls will read the scriptural lessons and offer the invocation. The music, which will be simple in its character, will be furnished by the full choir of the church, composed of twenty singers of the city, under the direction of Edward Nell. The hymns sung will be those that were especial favorites of General Harrison. There will be two of them, "Rock of Ages" and "Hark Hark My Soul"

At the conclusion of this service the funeral party will leave the church, going direct to Crown Hill Cemetery. The route selected is north in Pennsylvania to Vermont, west to Meridian, north to Sixteenth, west to Capitolave. and north to Crown Hill. The services at the cemetery will be simple and brief, consisting of a prayer and the recital of the words usually spoken as the body is lowered into the

During the arrival of the friends at the church a guard of the militia will be stationed at the entrances, to assist the squad of police in preventing the crowd from intruding and congesting the space around the entrances. This military guard, however, will have no further part in the funeral service.

THE MEMBERS OF THE FUNERAL PARTY. The funeral party will be composed of Mrs. Harrison and her daughter Elizabeth, Mrs. Caroline B. Stroud, of New-York, Mrs. Harrison's most intimate friend; Mrs. Mary Harrison Mc-Kee, daughter of General Harrison, and her husband, Robert McKee; Russell B. Harrison, son of General Harrison, with his wife and son; John Scott Harrison and Carter B. Harrison brothers of General Harrison; Mrs. Betty H. Governor Durbin was not certain to-day what the President would do after his return from the cemetery, but he did not think that he would have much time to spare as his train will leave here early in the evening. The President will take dinner with the Governor and Mrs. Durbin before he departs.

TRIBUTE BY GENERAL TRACY.

General Benjamin F. Tracy, of New-York, Secretary of the Navy in the administration of General Harrison, arrived to-day to attend the funeral services to-morrow. He said:

I cannot say enough in praise of General Har rison. Our relations were close, and the news of his death was a severe shock to me. I regard him as the most intellectual man with whom it was my fortune to come in contact with. He was profoundly intellectual, and at all times he had a keen appreciation of the right.

he had a keen appreciation of the right.

General Harrison was a man of great courage.

He was a profound student of all great public questions, and after a careful consideration of them he took a stand which he believed to be right regardless of consequences.

I am certain that General Harrison took his position in regard to the Philippines and Porto Rico conscientiously. While personally I differed with him on these questions, I never doubted his sincerity, integrity and even patriotism in the matter. While he was in New-York the last time we had an interview on the subject. He held that we ought not to hold as colonies islands that were so far separated free us.

General Harrison's relations with the members of his Cabinet were always most cordial. Mr. Blaine thought it was his duty to withdraw from the Cabinet, but I never discovered any bitterness on General Harrison's part because of that.

Lieutenant-Governor Robinson and Senators Daniel P. McMullen and F. F. Sovereign, of Lansing, Mich., arrived in the city at noon. They will represent the State of Michigan at the funeral of General Harrison. Senator Sovereign belonged to the 151st Indiana Regiment in the Civil War, and General Harrison was the commander of his brigade. Senator Sovereign drew up the resolutions on General Harrison's death, which were adopted by the Michigan Senate.

John Wanamaker, Postmaster-General in the Harrison administration, arrived this afternoon.

John Wahamaker, Fostmaster-General in the Harrison administration, arrived this afternoon. Later in the evening he viewed the body of Gen-eral Harrison at the State House. After re-turning to his hotel, he said: "I have just viewed the body of General Harrison over at

THE STEAMER CASTANO RUNS SHORT OF COAL AND LOOSENS PROPELLER-GALES ALL THE WAY.

The British tramp steamer Castano, Captain Penwill, which sailed from Liverpool on January 19, via Bermuda March 13, arrived in port last evening after a most tempestuous passage. She was obliged to put into Bermuda three times, once for coal and on two other occasions with her propeller loose. Captain Penwill reported an unusually rough voyage.

From the time of leaving the Mersey the Castano experienced a succession of severe west and westnorthwest gales, which continued without abating up to February 2. On this day the steamer was within 380 miles of Sandy Hook, when the storm increased and blew a hurricane from the westnorthwest which lasted two days. The steamer was unable to make the slightest headway, and drifted away to the southward. When the storm moderated and the steamer again headed to the northward her supply of coal ran short, and Captain Penwill decided to put into Bermuda to replenish his stock.

The steamer reached Bermuda on February 10 and sailed again on February 12. On February 16 the propeller worked loose, and the steamer was obliged to put back to Bermuda to repair the damage. The steamer was unable to get into drydock, and her officers, without other assistance, succeeded in making repairs. She again resumed her voyage on February 26, but on the next day the propeller again worked loose, and the vessel for the third time was compelled to put into Bermuda. This time the steamer's stern was tilted out of water and the propeller securely fastened. Finally on March 13 the Castano resumed her voyage, and reached this port safely after a passage of fifty-five days.

HENRY CLAY RYE WINS DERBY.

WILD PIRATE FINISHES SECOND AND OFFERS TO RACE BORALMA IN SEP-VARRO THIRD AT NEW-ORLEANS-THE MEETING CLOSES.

New-Orleans, March 16.-The $4,000 Crescent City Derby was a horserace from end to end, and though at the finish the victory rested with an outsider the result was very popular. The Morris colt, Choice, was scratched during the morning, and this eliminated an important factor.

Wild Pirate, generally at 6 to 5, and Varro, who was backed from twos to 3 to 2, divided the betting honors. "Tom" Stevens's pair, Picador and Sidwere coupled at fives, and receded to sixes, while Henry Clay Rye's price was as good as 12 to 1 at times. The betting was extremely liberal, and so much money came in on Fessenden's colt that his price was cut to eights, though it eventually went back to tens. Hanswurst was friendless at 30 to 1.

The parade to the post was watched with absorbing interest. At the post the six horses wheeled in a bunch, with all straightened. Fitzgerald, the starter, sprung the barrier instantly, sending them off to a beautiful start. In the first furlong Cochran took Henry Clay Rye to the front, and at the quarter opened up a gap of a length, Varro second and the favorite, Wild Pirate, third and coming fast. Down the halfmile Cochran took his mount back to third place, and for the next quarter there was a hot contest between Wild Pirate and Varro. each leading in turn. Turning into the stretch, Caywood was forced to

SLOAN WINS CALIFORNIA DERBY. COMES UP FROM FIFTH PLACE ON JOE FREY AND FINISHES AHEAD.

San Francisco, March 16.-About seven thousand people were present at the opening of Ingleside today, and fine sport was witnessed. The California Derby, the feature of a good programme, was taken by Joe Frey, the favorite, ridden by Tod Sloan. The Schorr colt beat a good field of three year olds after one of the best contests of the season. A field of six carried colors in the contest, which was valued at $6,757, and Joe Frey was always a favorite at 6 and 7 to 5 and even money, while Canmore was a strong second choice. The field was sent away to a good start, and Articulate went to the front at once. He led until the first stretch, when Joe Frey, who had moved up from fifth position, assumed command. O'Connor, on Brutal, who was interfered with at the start, also made his move, and challenged the start, also made his move, and challenged Sloan. A furious drive resulted in Sloan landing Joe Frey a winner by half a length. Brutal beat Canmore three lengths. The time, 2:074, marked a good performance, as a strong wind was blowing. Tuthill was the favorite for the special event at a mile and a sixteenth, but Advance Guard led all the day and won cleverly. Periwig fell in the steeplechase, but Southerland escaped injury. Mesler beat Mayboy a head. It was announced that racing would be resumed at the Tanforan track on Monday, and it was understood that Mayor Phelan had vetoed the ordinance allowing Ingleside to open.

Harlem Jockey Club, of Chicago, were dropped from the roll of membership in the American Turf Congress. E. S. Lee, the treasurer, in person, agreed to hold the funds of the association subject to the order of the new officers.

The offices were filled as follows: President, May Overton, of the Tennessee Breeders' Association: vice-president, George M. Hendric, of the Hishland Park Club, of Detroit; secretary, F. F. Fowler, of the Queen City Jockey Club; assistant secretary, Roger Sullivan, of the Queen City Jockey Club. Committee on Licenses—Joseph E. Martin, F. Fowler and Walter O. Parmer.

The Delmar Jockey Club, of St. Louis, was admitted to membership.

The license fee for trainers and jockeys was reduced from $25$ to $15.

The Turf Writer Association was unanimously indorsed. A communication from the Owners and Trainers' Mutual Association, as to changes in rules governing racing was received, and on motion it was referred to the president, vice-president and license committee, which are to meet President Scoggan and Vice-President Hayes of the Owners and Trainers' Mutual Association at the earliest convenient date and place to confer and agree in reference to the changes.

The books, papers and offices of the American Turf Congress were taken possession of by the new officers, and they are now in full possession and ready to transact the business of the association.

Lexington, Ky., March 16.-A petition circulated ere to-day and widely signed by breeders and trainers, asks the Western Jockey Club to rescind its action barring horses which race on tracks of the Turf Congress. Similar petitions will be sent all over the country.

REMOVAL OF STOMACH POSTPONED. The operation for the removal of the stomach of John Wickman, the chemist, of No. 171 Linden-st., Brooklyn, which was to have been performed at the German Hospital, Brooklyn, yesterday, has been postponed until to-morrow. As the case is a chronic one of cancer of the stomach, there is no immediate danger, and the longer the operation is delayed the better condition the patient will be in to withstand

No formal announcement of the engage-ment has yet been made, but the facts have been known to some intimate friends of Mrs. Lipsett and Mr. Richards for some time. Mrs. Lipsett is the

HARNESS RACING.

LAWSON CHALLENGES THE ABBOT.

TEMBER FOR $25,000 A SIDE.

Boston, March 16.-In a statement given to the press to-night Thomas W. Lawson expresses regret that the owner of The Abbot refuses to allow his great gelding to race against Charley Herr, Cresceus and Boralma, and takes exception to that man's statement of his reason for his refusal. Mr. Lawson further says:

fusal. Mr. Lawson further says:

I will accept the proposition made by The Abbot's owner. I will race Boralma in the month of September against The Abbot for $25,000 a side, best four heats in seven; or if he insists upon eleven in twenty, as he stated or anything between seven and twenty. I will agree. I will guarantee that a racing association will add its entire net proceeds, which will be given equally to two of Boston's well known and worthy charities, and I will also guarantee that this will also amount to at least $25,000. I further agree to donate any portion of the $25,000 Boralma may win by racing or by forfeiture equally between these two charities. I hope, however, he will accept my first proposition and allow horse lovers to see these four great racers competing under the same conditions which were good enough for them when they were working their way to the top.
