

TROPICAL JUNE WEATHER

WARMEST DAY RECORDED FOR THE 22D SINCE 1858.

Not since 1858 has there been so hot a June 22 as was yesterday. In that year the thermometer registered 91 degrees.

Down in the streets, where the heat radiates from the buildings and the pavements, men were walking with their coats over their arms, fanning themselves with their hats.

The shirt waist man was conspicuously absent. The advocates of this style of dress were either unprovided with the new garment or did not think the weather would be so warm when they left their homes.

Water counters did a rushing business. Men did places where a stronger liquid was dispensed. Women and men passed in and out of the drug stores downtown in streams, and the clerks were kept moving fast.

The weather prophet was non-committal when he was asked about the future. A cool spell, he would say nothing except that the week would be warmer than last week, but his manner indicated that tropical temperature will be kept moving fast.

Lightning wrecks a home. One killed, three seriously injured at East Woodstock.

Webster, Mass., June 22.—Lightning played havoc at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Rusean, in East Woodstock, on Sunday evening.

Killed by lightning in Ohio. Columbus, Ohio, June 22.—Severe storms prevailed in portions of Ohio to-day.

Eight killed by Nebraska tornado. Naper, Neb., June 22.—A revised list of the dead in Thursday's tornado brings the total up to eight.

John Bull—if this thing keeps on this way people will take him for me.

High Tide in Exports from the United States in the Fiscal Year 1901 will probably reach the highest point ever recorded in a single year $1,500,000,000.

SELECTIONS FROM THE MAIL.

MR. COLER TAKEN TO TASK. The writer says he has not lived up to his promises.

THE WRITER SAYS HE HAS NOT LIVED UP TO HIS PROMISES. To the Editor of the Tribune.

Sir: Controller Coler's apology for Tammany abuses and extravagance, reprinted from "The Independent" in this morning's Tribune, inspired me to take down a box of newspaper clippings marked "Coler" and look over some of the speeches, interviews and articles which brought him such popularity during his "reform" period.

On Wednesday, August 2, 1899, The Tribune quoted the Controller as saying: "There are too many departments, too many bureaus, too many officers."

What have they seen? Two years of steadily increasing extravagant expenditure of public money, without a recorded protesting vote from the Controller, for it must be remembered that no party can be expected to do more than the appropriations approved by the Board of Estimate, of which he is a member.

In the matter of cutting the expenses of "charity," he has, however, been heartily successful. That the 12 a month nurses knock the life out of the patients is perhaps aside from the subject, but there are many who can trace the connection of parsimony to the charities and the abuses in the hospitals.

To the Editor of the Tribune. Sir: We read with interest the letter signed L. O. Smith in last Sunday's Tribune regarding the lack of banking facilities between this country and South America.

We are agents for the British Bank of South America Limited, which has branches in the important cities of Brazil and the Argentine Republic, and we are always prepared to buy or sell drafts or to make collections. This business is constantly growing with the enlarged intercourse between these countries and the United States.

STAGE AFFAIRS IN GENERAL.

A play based on the great novel of "Lorna Doone" was produced in Chicago on June 23, under the management of Mr. H. L. Hamlin. The dramatist is Miss Mildred Dowling. The piece is comprised in five acts, and it implicates about forty persons.

Almost all the theatres in New-York are closed. The Herald Square Theatre still offers the farce of "The Brixton Burglary," in which may be viewed a ludicrous spectacle of cross purposes, confusion, and comic perplexity.

At the breaking out of the Civil War, Mr. Robinson was called, as were generally the young men of the country. He went out in Sickles' brigade as orderly to Colonel Graham, and afterward as a private.

James E. Taylor, the well known artist and illustrator, died yesterday at his home in No. 1469 Lexington-ave.

When Mr. Taylor severed his connection with Frank Leslie, in 1883, he devoted his time to illustrating for various magazines and painting water colors. He painted the grand review for General Sherman while the latter was Secretary of War, and it hung in the general's private room in the White House.

OBITUARY.

JULIUS A. ROBINSON. Julius A. Robinson died at the St. Nicholas Hotel yesterday. He was born in Philadelphia in 1846. George Simpson, his maternal great-grandfather, was one of the chief officers of the first national bank incorporated under the power of the Continental Congress, and known as the Bank of North America, at Philadelphia, and when the constitution was adopted and the first bank of the United States in that city was chartered by the government he became its cashier, and his financial ability early attracted the attention of Stephen Girard, who in starting a bank in Philadelphia considered his first necessary step to obtain the services of George Simpson, to whom he gave the control of the bank.

At the breaking out of the Civil War, Mr. Robinson was called, as were generally the young men of the country. He went out in Sickles' brigade as orderly to Colonel Graham, and afterward as a private.

When Mr. Taylor severed his connection with Frank Leslie, in 1883, he devoted his time to illustrating for various magazines and painting water colors. SPERRY—On June 22, Emaline Sperry, widow of Lewis Sperry, died at her home in New York.

"You do not have any flowers in your public parks as we do in England," said Alfred Davies, Member of Parliament from Carlisle, at the Fifth of London Avenue Hotel the other day. "In Hyde Park, for instance, the flowers are as abundant and as rich in color and variety as in a rich man's garden. I believe that the people of your country are more particular about their parks and their flowers than we are in England."
