WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1902. THE NEWS THIS MORNING.

FOREIGN—A great combination to fight the United States Steel Corporation is said to have been formed in London.

DOMESTIC—Two more anthracite mines were reopened, and two were closed by strike; a serious collision between strikers and troops seems probable.

CITY—Stocks were dull and firm. President and Mrs. Roosevelt left Oyster Bay to witness target practice on the Mayflower at Gardiner's Bay.

THE CUBAN LOAN.

The proposed Cuban loan, to which both houses of the Cuban Congress are committed, suggests several interesting questions.

That leads to the second query, whether the United States will sanction the loan. There can be no doubt that this country, through the Platt amendment to the Cuban constitution, has the right to interpose its veto upon any rash financial schemes of the young republic.

We have said there is nothing else left for Cuba. Yet, of course, there must be something else. If the loan is not sanctioned, but is vetoed, she will have to get along without it.

her people relapse toward barbarism, and by withholding aid from her industrialists, and thus incurring danger of widespread ruin and consequent anarchy. We do not say all these things will happen if the loan is not made.

THE PROBLEM OF THE FRIARS.

Archbishop Ireland, in his sermon delivered last Sunday in the Cathedral of the City of St. Paul on the subject of the friars, showed a grasp of the question so thorough and tolerant, so high minded and patriotic, as must have put to blush the half informed and hot headed critics of an administration who in assailing it fancy they are rendering a service to the Roman Catholic Church.

Leaving out of consideration for the moment the question as to who these critics are, or what the motives for the intemperate language employed by them, what is the burden of their complaints? In nine cases out of ten it is the charge brought indiscriminately against the friars—so, at least, they say—of gross and flagrant immorality. We can readily understand why, as Catholics, they should resent such a charge against members of the four orders still holding interests in the Philippines.

What, then, is the secret of Filipino hostility to the friars? In the first place, it is economic; in the second, it is political. As the possessors of most, if not all, of the really valuable estates in the islands, the orders aroused native cupid-ity. Without discussing the methods by which these properties were acquired, it can be stated broadly that the situation is one where those who have not confront with hungry maws those who have. It presents the irreconcilable differences between landlord and tenant in a country where the farmer sees his rent increase in proportion to the amount of labor and the extent of the improvements he puts into the land.

What, then, is the secret of Filipino hostility to the friars? In the first place, it is economic; in the second, it is political. As the possessors of most, if not all, of the really valuable estates in the islands, the orders aroused native cupid-ity. Without discussing the methods by which these properties were acquired, it can be stated broadly that the situation is one where those who have not confront with hungry maws those who have.

The political hatred aroused by the friars is due to the twofold character of their work in the islands. They were agents of the Spanish Government no less than soldiers of the Church. There was not a single department of governmental activity into which they did not enter or which they did not control.

The practical question confronting us is not whether the bitter feeling toward the friars is justified or not, but whether it exists. It is mere twaddle to say that all the civilization to be found in the Philippines to-day is due to the friars. For the sake of argument we may admit that it is so due; but after that, shall we ignore altogether this bias or prejudice, deep seated in an ignorant people, and in brushing it aside wreck a successful solution of the task we have set ourselves? The highest dignitaries of the Catholic Church fortunately see the question in its proper light, and their wisdom and breadth of view may be depended upon as valuable and we might almost say, indispensable aids in working out this problem of our Far Eastern possessions. We trust that before long the impetuous critics of the government and self-appointed champions of the Church will be able to see the question in a similar light.

NOT THE FALTERING KIND.

Some heartless breeder of discord has been brutal enough to break in on Senator E. W. Carmack's blissful campaign reveries. This unwelcome intruder awakened the Tennessee rainbow chaser long enough from his musings to force on his attention certain rude and threatening noises in the world without to which he has hitherto serenely closed his ears.

Mr. Carmack, we are not surprised to hear, received this news with incredulity and indignation. "I don't believe any Democrat ever said that," he replied, with just severity. Then, after waiting Mr. Hay out of the party in an eight word sentence, he thus rebuked those of our party leaders who are inclined to turn back faintly heartily from the "imperialistic" furrow:

Such a statement involves the charge that the Democrats in both houses of Congress during the recent session were simply making a sham fight over a false issue. If the people could be made to believe that, I do not see how they could be expected to have confidence in the sincerity of the Democratic party on the question of trusts, of tariff or anything else. I do not know of anything so well calculated to cover any political party with ridicule and contempt as for it to turn tail at the first sign of a sham issue.

It is reassuring to know that the manager of the Democratic Congress Committee's literary bureau will never lend a hand to reverse the party ploughshare. He will continue to circulate his "anti-imperialistic" literature, no matter how many packages are returned as undeliverable. He will be loyal to the issue which he and his Democratic colleagues on the Senate Philippines Committee saddled on the party for use this year, though the political heavens fall—"though," as he is again reported as saying in Washington, "not a single Democrat is elected to the LVIIIth Congress."

Clearly the faltering Carmack is still the rising hope of Lopez, Atkinson and all the stern, unbending Anti-Imperialist Leaguers. There will be no back tracking so long as he can control the franking and addressing of Democratic campaign tracts, so long as the Hon. Gamaliel Bradford fills his Lake George with cheer and counsel, and the Lake George manifesto makers continue to furnish him such airy stuff as his political dreams are made of. Mr. Hay, Mr. Livingston, "Judge" Griggs and the other hesitating Democratic statesmen, who would like to run away from the "imperialistic" issue, have missed the key to Mr. Carmack's character. He is no base utilitarian. He has the courage both of his convictions and of his opportunities, and does not care how soon the world discovers that his statesmanship is neither of the faltering nor of the faltering kind.

SEEKING CHILD LABOR.

The determination of the great corporation which controls the manufacture of cotton duck to close the mills at New-Hartford, Conn., and move the plant to some Southern State should awake the philanthropists of the South to renewed efforts to secure restriction of child labor in their States. The New-Hartford mills are among the best known in the cotton duck business, and employ about seven hundred persons.

Electricity has been amazingly active in many ways in this part of the world this summer, and it has been a season of such frequent and boisterous tempests that the doctors have been busy in allaying the fears of the timid and the nervous. But the thunderstorm is a baby's rattle in comparison with the trolley in the raising of the death rate. Thunderbolts count their victims by units, trolleys by scores.

THE TALK OF THE DAY.

An Arab, named Aissa Ben Kouider, native of Algeria, has made his way to Paris to complain to the President of the French Republic of an overthrift father-in-law. Last year he bought a wife for 75 francs from her father, who is a sheep owner in the Province of Algeria. After six months of wedded life Aissa Ben Kouider was bidden, with his wife, to a feast in his father-in-law's tents. He went to the place of rendezvous, but his wife's father was over he had to leave Madame Aissa Ben Kouider behind. Her father claimed her, stating that she was too young to have a husband, and that she would have to remain with him for some years longer. Aissa Ben Kouider had no objection, and resolved to begin legal proceedings against his father-in-law, who he states, had already sold the girl once, and who now takes her away for the purpose of raising money out of a third husband. The law suit came in due course of time, but nothing was done for the husband, who was deprived of his wife.

"The Kingman Leader-Courier" tells of an early day county surveyor in Kingman County, Kansas, who had a little trouble with his neighbor and had used him in a little. His method of measuring land was to tie his ankles together with a cord, and to step on a line to allow him to step one-fifth of a rod each time, and thus hobbled he would strike out, counting his steps until he had made a rod. He would then cover the distance. "The cord or string used by him in fastening 'was his neighbor's." The Leader-Courier says that the man who had the land was traveling through the grass of a morning when the sun had dried the ground and he stretched nearly a foot, and so his steps were longer of a morning than they were of an evening. When the sun had dried the ground he stretched and shortened it. Consequently the man having his land surveyed in the morning would have much more land than he would have in the afternoon. These old surveys and corners then established cause and effect even to this day.—(Kansas City Journal.)

R. D. Farley, the Anglican missionary at York Factory, Hudson's Bay, has written to "The Manitoba Free Press" to deny the story of Andre's murder by the Esquimaux. He had been quoted as an authority for it by a Winnipeg paper. He says in the defence of the Esquimaux: "Any one who knew anything about the Esquimaux north of Fort Churchill could see the impossibility of such a story being true. The Esquimaux may be heathens, indeed, but they are not vicious or bloodthirsty, and any white man dropping in their midst would be cared for and taken to the nearest Hudson's Bay post. From time to time white men have travelled without escort among the Esquimaux of the north, and they have always found them a peaceable and obliging people. As regards the 'fake' story of the fate of Andre, some clever Esquimaux may have conceived the idea of obtaining a little tobacco by inventing the story as told by 'The Telegram' reporter. The natives in different parts of the Dominion, and each turned out to be merely an invention of some Indian or Esquimaux fitted with a lively imagination and having less regard for the truth than for the gain." Spelled a Deed of Herodism.—"Uncle," said one of the boys, "tell me how you charged with your horse up the San Juan hill at the head of your party." "Well," said the battle scarred veteran, "I mounted the big animal, drew my sword from its scabbard and charged up the hill. I was so sure I sank the eggers deep in the quivering flanks of my gallant steed that I forgot to look back at my gallant steed. He galloped, breathlessly. 'Go on, uncle, tell me the rest of it.' 'Johnny,' said the boy, 'with a pensive sigh. 'The horse balked.' (Chicago Tribune.)

South can be silenced by that plea, or that the lawmakers of the South are ready to sell their own flesh and blood—for the cotton mill operatives are almost exclusively native whites. The cotton manufacturing industry there is bound to grow, without any such concession to the greed of outside mill owners. Even if the temptation should be temporarily formidable, the result must be strengthened efforts to touch the consciences of the now indifferent and save the children from the fate which threatens them. Child labor, which might perhaps have been comparatively harmless here and there under exceptional conditions, becomes absolutely intolerable when it is made a matter of systematic exploitation and a source of calculated gain to rapacious employers.

TO SWIM OR NOT TO SWIM.

Captain Webb, a swimmer by whose side Leander would rank as one of the water babies so charmingly described by Kingsley, crossed the English Channel in one of the most astonishing feats of athletic endurance in the history of the race. He lost his life later in a foolhardy and ill starved adventure in the Niagara rapids. Webb was against him at Niagara or he would have succeeded. He conquered the channel between England and France. Is it worth while for lesser men to essay that arduous task in these days?

In certain conditions of the tides and winds and temperature of the water, the British Channel can be overcome by a true Berserker of an incomparable swimmer. Webb proved that; and the fact needs no new demonstration. What, then, is to be gained by trying it over again? The swiftest of human swimmers is a mere snail in the water in comparison with the most sluggish of fishes. Swimming records are distressful things, because they are so painfully slow when compared with the flights of human runners on land.

When humanity takes wings and soars in the skies the contests against Father Time above the surface of the earth may well be analyzed and set over against the speed exploits of the agile devourers of space upon land. There were no prizes in the Olympian games for swimming. Nevertheless, it ought not to be forgotten that old Olympia was not a seaside resort when Pindar sang his odes.

Police captains in whose districts rioting takes place and is not promptly stamped out should be sent to Coventry at top speed.

Senator Stewart is predicting that the Republicans will carry Nevada this fall. After the reversal two years ago in Utah, Washington, Wyoming and South Dakota, it does not seem unreasonable to expect one more Western silver State to slip back this year to its long established and natural political moorings.

Tracy is still in hot pursuit of the sheriffs, and Devery is moving on the enemy's works.

In some parts of the country fatal accidents on trolley lines have been caused by the misunderstanding of telephone orders. Is it advisable for railroad corporations anywhere to use the telephone rather than the telegraph in sending train orders? Is one method as safe as the other?

Senator James K. Jones, of Arkansas, though defeated for re-election in his own State, is still able to make a stir now and then in national politics. In Milwaukee the other day he created a modest sensation by telling a reporter that if the people of Wisconsin wanted to be well represented at Washington they would make no mistake in returning Mr. Spooner. "I should be glad to see a Democrat chosen," Mr. Jones added, "but this is hardly possible, and if a Republican must go to Washington I want to see Spooner elected, and would do anything in my power to bring about this result."

Peter Power is getting to be almost as shadowy and elusive a character as the man who struck the unsuspecting Patterson.

PEOPLE IN THE PUBLIC EYE.

Wu-Ting-fang's chief purpose throughout his stay in the United States was to give his Americans
