

NEWS OF TWO CAPITALS. AFFAIRS IN LONDON.

Settlement of Morocco Question—Matters Dragging in Balkan.

Special to The New-York Tribune from French Cable. (Copyright, 1903, by The Tribune Association.) London, Sept. 26.—The uncertainties of diplomacy and Cabinet making create a general depression and send down console, already terribly depreciated owing to the pressure of unguessed millions of investment securities. The most startling news is "The Daily Mail's" disclosure of the secret bargain between France and England involving the protectorate of Morocco and the readjustment of the interests of the Mediterranean powers in Northern Africa. There will probably be official denials from the various capitals, but there are inherent probabilities that the reconciliation of France and England is founded upon something more substantial than the exchange of amenities and compliments between the King and President Loubet. The withdrawal of the French claims to Egypt and the acceptance of British control over the Suez Canal would be cheaply obtained by the recognition of the French protectorate over Morocco, and there would be easy expedients for securing the acquiescence of Spain and Italy by timely concessions. The German Emperor, however, is not likely to allow the re-arrangement of the forces of North Africa to go into effect without his consent, and hence the reported settlement of the Morocco question by Anglo-French agreement needs direct official corroboration.

Meanwhile, there is no improvement in the Macedonian situation. The mixed commission proposed by the Sultan might be useful if the processes of repressing disorders in the Christian population by massacre and rapine were suspended, but the opening of negotiations between Constantinople and Sofia is tainted with suspicion. It resembles the intrigue between Constantinople and Belgrade for the regulation of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Before the Russo-Turkish War Austria and Russia coerced Belgrade, then under penalty of invasion and suspension of the diplomatic intrigues were followed by Serbia's disastrous campaign against Turkey and Russia's invasion of the Balkan. Analogous results may be involved by the Sultan's diplomatic negotiations at Sofia. France and Italy have been waiting for the British Foreign Office to take the initiative and compel the powers to demand the appointment of a Christian Governor and the conversion of Macedonia into an autonomous State.

Mr. Balfour's letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury is a belated confession that the British Government is without influence at Constantinople and without a sense of responsibility for the events in Southeastern Europe. "Where Beaconsfield and Bismarck insisted upon handing back Macedonia to the Turk, he has nothing to offer except counsel of despair. Russia and Austria must be depended upon to secure the pacification of Macedonia by the scheme of reforms which has already failed. Mr. Balfour does not object to the popular agitation which has been begun at the City Temple and taken up in Manchester and elsewhere, but it is evident that nothing will come from it as long as British diplomacy is a reed shaken by the wind. Meanwhile, events are dragging hopelessly in the Balkan, and Germany controls the situation by a secret arrangement with Austria. Nobody can forecast when the Russian troops will occupy Bulgaria and march into Constantinople, nor when the scheme of partition will be carried out by the Austrian seizure of Salonica, but neither event is likely to occur without the establishment of a sovereignty with Germany and the vast extension of the trade of the Fatherland in the Orient.

Mr. Balfour's government is so thoroughly demoralized that not even the timely support of Rochester in the bye-election reinvigorates it, when the Duke of Devonshire can remain in a protectionist Cabinet after Mr. Balfour's chilling manifesto and the publication of the double barreled retaliation, preferential tariff resolution, drafted for the Unionist conference at Sheffield. The protectionists themselves are at a loss to conjecture the grounds for Mr. Balfour's expectations that he can draw a powerful outsider like Lord Milner into the government. The King has abundant resources of tact, and he may succeed in persuading Lord Milner to succeed Mr. Chamberlain and in forcing Mr. Brodick to abandon the War Office. The King, without doubt, has vetoed half-measures, and intervened so strongly in the process of Cabinet reconstruction that the constitutional question may be raised; but he has the nation behind him in demanding a genuine reform of the military administration. The prolongation of the Cabinet crisis has impaired the falling influence of the government, lowered console and demoralized the financial condition of the city.

The mysteries of Cabinet making, when the Prime Minister is the King's journeyman apprentice, have not been more closely kept than the secrets of the new plays. Not a single hint has been received respecting the nature or plot of Mr. Pinero's new drama, "Letty," at the Duke of York's Theatre, and Mr. Barrie's "Little Mary," at Wyndham's Theatre, piqued and baffled the curiosity of the first night audience until five minutes before the final fall of the curtain. While the programme announced as an uncomfortable play kept everybody in an uproar of merriment through the prologue and two acts, and justified the description merely by sending the spectators home with a sense of mortification at being made the victims of a practical joke, and feeling that Mr. Barrie had been laughing at them in his sleeve. The comedy, which turns upon a fantastic name for the stomach and enforces the hygienic idea that the British aristocracy eats too much, and should adopt the medical formula, "One day, one meal," cannot be considered drama at all, but by its whimsical humor, delicacy, irony and softness of touch it commands the admiration of the puzzled but delighted playgoers. One critic discovers underneath the quibbling title a symbolic theme of wider import, and describes the play as a fantasia on instinctive motherliness. Mr. Barrie's comedy defies criticism or analysis, and is another tour de force in topology, known like "The Admirable Crichton." Its success on the opening night was unequivocal. John Barre acted, with incisive method and subtle art, the part of a middle aged earl. Eric Lewis contrived a finished character sketch of a medical specialist, and Gerard du Maurier was delightful as the earl's impetuous son in love with an actress. But Nina Boucicault carried off the honors of the evening as a little girl mothering the orphan children, and subsequently carrying out her Irish grandfather's mission for the salvation of the British aristocracy.

Haddon Chambers's new play, "Golden Silence," at the Garrick Theatre, has been generally criticized as an unconvincing piece of ARREST IN VERDUE CASE. POINTED OUT BY HANSEN.

Prisoner Said To Be Instigator of Attack—Hansen Cleared.

A decided sensation was created in the Verdue murder mystery last night by the arrest of Joseph Martin, a travelling salesman, of No. 311 West Fifty-fifth-st., on a charge of homicide. He was arrested after the prisoner Hansen had pointed him out to the detectives working on the case. Hansen alleges that he was the chief instigator of the attack. Captain Handy says that Martin admits having "called down" Hansen for his alleged familiarity with the children in the neighborhood, but denies that he took part in the assault. Martin's father says his son was at home from about 6:30 until 8 o'clock on Friday evening. The assault, according to the police records, took place at 7:30 o'clock. Martin, who dresses well, and comes from a respectable family, broke down and cried bitterly as he was led back to a cell. His father declared that the arrest was an outrage.

Martin's arrest was brought about by Detective Sergeants Boyle, Vailley, Carey and Charlton. Hansen gave a good description of the young salesman, and the detectives watched the block until they picked him out. Martin was standing in front of his house with another man when Detective Boyle passed by with Hansen. The latter exclaimed, when he saw Martin: "There's the man who struck me. He was the leader of the crowd." Boyle at once placed Martin under arrest. The other detectives who were on the block gathered about, and the new prisoner in the case was taken to the station. The young man's father accompanied him. He was taken into Captain Handy's office, where the captain and the detectives questioned him for half an hour. Then his pedigree was taken, and he was charged with homicide. His father was next taken into the captain's room and questioned. Captain Handy said after the arrest and incarceration of Martin: "Hansen accuses Martin of being the chief instigator in the assault. We have held him on this statement and his own confession that he 'called down' Hansen an hour before the assault took place. We questioned him closely, and although he admitted having spoken harshly to Hansen, he denies having assaulted him. He says he heard the stories about the two men giving pennies to children in the neighborhood, and thought it his duty to warn them that they must stop the practice. He says this was about 6:15 o'clock the evening of the assault. He says he then returned to the house and remained indoors until after 8 o'clock. Mr. Martin, No. 357 West Fifty-fifth-st., says he was sitting on the stoop and witnessed the assault. Although he could not identify any of the assailants, he followed Hansen down toward Eighth-ave., and that when they neared the corner one of them started to go into the house. The other man said to him: 'Don't get the house now.' Hansen then turned toward the corner. Martin's father, who is a very respectable man, says he is willing to make an affidavit that his son was in the house from 6:30 until 8 o'clock, and is alleged to have taken place at 7:30 o'clock.

Captain Handy said that Martin denied knowing any of the men who assaulted Verdue. The police believe that the other men concerned in it do not live in Fifty-fifth-st., but were members of a gang that stood about Fifty-fifth-st. and Eighth-ave. nightly. Yesterday the detectives working on the case were inclined to discredit the identification made by the Hamilton woman, on the ground that she had frequently seen Hansen in company with the murdered man in the last week, and would naturally, as the only one with whose face and figure she was familiar and the only person present whose face showed signs of recent injury, select him from the line of men. Early last night the police definitely indicated that they had eliminated Hansen as a factor in the assault. From papers found in the dead man's pockets, the case on which Verdue and Hansen had been employed at Fifty-fifth-st. concerned the finding of evidence sufficient for divorce from a well known woman living in the block. Yesterday, the woman was aware of their presence, and at her instigation the children living in nearby houses, to whom the detectives were in the habit of giving pennies, were led to believe the men were kidnappers or worse.

The statement of Mrs. Verdue, the dead man's widow, that her husband was somewhat unpopular with the local detectives, and that he had been employed rather as a spotter and inspector than as a detective was considered by others as significant, in the light of Hansen's confused account of himself at the time of his arrest. According to Francis H. Boland, the son of John Boland, one of the partners in the detective agency, Hansen is a perfectly innocent man. Mr. Ahrens, manager of the store where Hansen went after the affair, yesterday said to a Tribune reporter: "When Hansen was at the telephone a short stout man, dressed in a black suit with a black derby hat, came in and immediately began reviling the man at the telephone, saying that he ought not to allow such a man in the store. He then left the store."

A conference was held at the West Forty-seventh-st. station yesterday afternoon. Those present were Deputy Assistant District Attorney Kenneth A. Coroner Goldenkranz, Captain Handy, Detective Sergeant Arthur Carey, and the detectives of the West Forty-seventh-st. station who are working on the case. Mr. Walsh was telephoned to, and Captain Handy talked with him some time over the wire. Captain Handy then announced that he expected to make an arrest at the corner of 57th-st. and that the man was under surveillance, and he thought he may be the man who committed the murder. Coroner Goldenkranz said that he was satisfied the Hansen was innocent. He said that he had received reports in every detail from letters and papers found in his possession. The police have learned that the man who assaulted Verdue was tall and dark, and was wearing a coat of this description. He did not agree with that made by the Hamilton woman.

Mr. Verdue lived at No. 141 Montague-st., with his wife, who was Miss Paula May Loebe, formerly of No. 25 Hart-st. in Brooklyn. He held a place as consulting engineer with the Holland Submarine Boat Company. At different times he was an expert reporter for several of the New-York papers. His relatives say that about six months ago, after acting as agent for the Duss Band, which played last summer at the Madison Square Garden, he was engaged as a reporter for the work of the Mooney & Boland agency. Mr. Verdue was accustomed to return from his work to Brooklyn every evening to take dinner with his wife. He had promised to call at 6:30 o'clock at the Hart-st. home on Friday afternoon, to escort Mrs. Verdue to their own apartments in Montague-st. Mrs. Verdue waited until 11 o'clock, and then went home. A messenger arrived at 11 o'clock summoning her to the hospital. Accompanied by a brother, she went there, but her husband did not recognize her, and did not come with her. Mrs. Verdue's home at Hart-st., yesterday, it was said that they understood from Mr. Verdue that he was not going to watch the detectives of the agency, and report in case they did not attend to business. Mr. Verdue had declared he would not do so, and was simply watching the detectives as a favor to his personal friend, Mr. Mumford, who was connected with the agency.

SPEYERS LOCKED OUT. PLAN SECOND MEETING. GUARDS AT EVERY DOOR. A NIXON-JEROME TALK.

Lawyer Denied Access to Plants of Lake Superior Company.

(BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.) Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 26.—James Bicknell, a lawyer of Toronto, representative of Speyer & Co., attempted to take possession of the plants of the Consolidated Lake Superior Company to-day, and was refused by Assistant Manager Coyne, entrance to any of the buildings. Mr. Coyne was acting under instructions from President Shields. The interview between Mr. Bicknell and Mr. Coyne was of the most stormy character, and would have ended with the forcible ejection of Mr. Bicknell had he not retired peacefully.

Later Mr. Bicknell reappeared, accompanied by the chief of police, and again demanded possession of the plant, and was again refused. His appeal to the officer only elicited the response that the Police Department of Sault Ste. Marie was not in the employ of Speyer & Co. Mr. Bicknell then attempted to force his way into several of the plants, but was repulsed by the men on guard. To-night every door and window is locked and barred, and guards pace beats within and without to prevent an entrance by the agents of Speyer & Co. It is impossible to get by the gates, who are there in some cases, forty yards from the buildings guarded. Before Mr. Bicknell's arrival Mr. Coyne had sent a circular through all the offices of the company ordering the heads of departments to keep everything under lock and key and to deny the authority of the Speyer representative. They were ordered not to let the Speyer people see any books or papers. All passes for visiting the works have been withdrawn, and the offices are kept locked during business hours as far as is practicable.

There was no trouble last night among the workmen who arrived from the North. They were directed to be ready on their arrival because the company did not have anybody at the train to meet them, as they said had been promised before they left the woods. A mass meeting of the workmen was held in Barnes Hall, and Mayor Palmer addressed the men. He urged the men to take the employment offered in other camps, leaving their Lake Superior time checks with responsible persons to collect. He told the men that the company would provide food and shelter for those who needed it, and as a result, a large number of them slept in the car barns last night.

No information could be obtained yesterday at the office of Speyer & Co. regarding the dispatch from Sault Ste. Marie to the effect that the heads of departments of the Consolidated Lake Superior Company had been ordered to refuse representatives of the Speyer syndicate access to the books. Neither would the firm make a statement on the new plan of reorganization approved by the Lake Superior directors on Friday in Philadelphia. So far as could be learned, the sale of the assets of the company to cover the Speyer loan of $3,000,000 will not be postponed, but will be held on October 1, as advertised.

If F. H. Clogue, former president of the company, was in the financial district, he covered his eyes with his hands when he saw the Philadelphia on Friday, and is reported to be making efforts to secure English capital to rehabilitate the company.

WILL VISIT THE "FRACK." Philadelphia, Sept. 26.—B. F. Krookenthal, jr., president of the Thomas Iron Company, of Easton, Penn., who was yesterday appointed receiver for the "Frack" property, which is owned by the Consolidated Lake Superior Company, will next week visit the plant of the concern at Sault Ste. Marie.

TO RUN THE SUBWAY BEFORE APRIL. The Interborough People to Buy Power from the Metropolitan Company.

Rapid Transit in New-York by way of the subway road is assured months earlier than was expected, through an agreement entered into between the Interborough system and the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. Some months ago John B. McDonald said the subway would be in operation before the end of the coming spring. Then when the strikes interrupted the construction of the Interborough's powerhouse he retracted that prophecy. Now the Interborough people have closed a deal that makes them practically independent of the powerhouse and its voltage. The Metropolitan Company has contracted for a price not made public, to sell to the Interborough Company all its surplus power. That power, the electrical experts of the company operating the subway have reported to August Belmont as sufficient to operate almost the entire subway system, and certainly sufficient to operate the system east and west between One-hundred-and-fourth-st. and the City Hall. According to the report made to the Rapid Transit Commission, more than 90 per cent of the road between these points on both spur is practically completed. Mr. McDonald told Mr. Belmont, it is said, that with the power assured trains can be run on the subway before next April.

GROUT HINTS HELL ACCEPT

MURPHY'S PLAN TO HAVE CONTROLLER AND FORNES ON MCLELLAN TICKET BLOW AT M'LAUGHLIN.

Brooklyn Boss Thinks It Is a Bluff and Laughs—Some Fusionists Think It Would Help, Others Hurt.

Controller Grout intimated that he would accept an indorsement on the Tammany ticket headed by McClellan. McLaughlin and the Kings County Democrats were laughing at what they called Charles F. Murphy's bluff in having printed an inspired statement that Tammany would indorse Controller Grout and Charles V. Fornes. The Brooklyn boss and his followers were arranging a mayoralty ticket of their own, which they are determined to offer at the convention in opposition to the McClellan ticket. The announcement by John C. Sheehan that the Greater New-York Democracy would withdraw from support of fusion and have a mayoralty ticket of its own, headed by W. H. Ziegler, the backer of Arctic expeditions, was received with amusement.

WITHOUT CONDITIONS. MCLELLAN BUTTON OUT.

Grout Would Do Nothing to Harm Fusion Cause. Faithful Murphy Men Are Wearing It.

Controller Grout has been asked to accept the nomination for Controller on the Tammany ticket. The nomination has been offered to him unconditionally by a representative from Charles F. Murphy. He will accept, and next Thursday night at the Democratic convention George B. McClellan, for Mayor; Edward M. Grout, for Controller, and Charles V. Fornes, for President of the Board of Aldermen will be the ticket placed in nomination by Tammany Hall. That is the message that was brought to Brooklyn last night by a well known Democrat, who formerly was in Willoughby Street, but has been fighting the machine along party lines for some years. He is in close touch with the Tammany Hall leaders and is a close personal friend of Controller Grout. "What does it mean?" he said. "Well, you can see as well as I. McClellan, Shevlin, McCarron and the other Willoughby Street leaders threw the gantlet down to Murphy and told him to go ahead and name his ticket. He has done so. I rather think that this move on Murphy's part will checkmate the fusion movement, and give the McClellan crowd a black eye from which they will never recover. Controller Grout was found at the Brooklyn Club at 11 o'clock last night. He had just come from Manhattan with ex-Assistant Corporation Counsel Henry A. Yonge and ex-Assistant Corporation Counsel Luke D. Stapleton, who have been out of the Willoughby Street breakwaters for some years. The Controller was asked point blank whether or not it were true that he had been offered the Tammany nomination for Controller. He replied in a way that led the reporters to assume that the statement was true, and requested that he be asked all the questions that were to be asked before he made his statement. In this assumption a volley of questions were presented, to all of which he smiled, but said nothing. Then he sat down and wrote the following statement, which he read slowly to all present: "I shall not during the coming campaign do anything inconsistent in letter or in spirit with my letter to Mr. Cutting last week. I shall offer no indorsement other than my record to procure any indorsement, nor will I accept any conditions or make any bargain to bring about such indorsement. If any organization or party shall unqualifiedly, unconditionally and unsought indorse my nomination, I shall feel free to accept the honor, and shall deem it helpful rather than hurtful to the cause of good government. "With any qualification, with any condition, I will accept nothing; and let me add I have sought nothing—even the fusion nomination. Charles V. Fornes, President of the Board of Aldermen, gave the lie flatly to a portion of the story from the Wigwag that Murphy had seen Mr. Fornes, and that Mr. Fornes was willing to run on the Tammany ticket with the Tammany candidate, McClellan. When seen at De Witt Clinton Park, Fifty-second-st., where he delivered an address yesterday afternoon, Mr. Fornes said: "I am entirely new to me, and I do not care to discuss it. I wish to think it over." He said that no one had offered him a nomination on the Tammany ticket, but that last week several had insinuated to him that such a thing was on foot. Continuing, he said: "The idea of running on both tickets shows to me that the people are satisfied with the present administration, and the officials of that administration, and would accept them on whatever ticket they might run. I think the people are convinced that we have tried to give them a good, clean administration, each man in his own department, and tried to take care of the public welfare. Further than that I do not care to talk. "When President Cutting of the Citizens Union was seen last night at Tuxedo Park he said that the proposition was so novel and astonishing that he wanted a little more time to think it over before he expressed a decided opinion on it. "Would the Citizens Union leaders permit Messrs. Grout and Fornes to run on the Tammany ticket?" Mr. Cutting was asked. "At the present moment I do not see anything particularly objectionable to such a plan," said Mr. Cutting. "We would not have indorsed any one they put on their ticket. But if they choose, after we have nominated our ticket, to indorse certain candidates on it, it seems to me that it is a great and significant tribute to the strength of our cause before the people. It practically is an admission that they are convinced that they could not beat those candidates. "Would not such an arrangement hurt Mr. Low's chances?" "I want more time to think over that question," said Mr. Cutting. "The proposition is so unexpected that I question its good faith. It may have been put out by interested people to draw out comment, without having any real foundation in fact. I hardly see where it would hurt Mr. Low. It might be interpreted by very many independent Democrats as a breaking down of the Tammany side of the case, and in that event Mr. Low might get an overwhelming plurality. However, as I stated before, it will be as well to wait and see if the Democratic city convention indorses Messrs. Grout and Fornes. It has been suggested to me that if the Tammany people, with their convention four or five days off, are willing to indorse two of our city ticket candidates, by the time they call their convention to order they may be willing to include Mayor Low in their indorsement. "Many friends of Mayor Low do not harbor the thought for an instant that he will countenance the idea of having Controller Grout and President Fornes indorsed by Tammany."
