

PERILS OF FREE TRADE.

CHAMBERLAIN'S APPEAL.

Workmen Urged to Disregard Leaders—Future Loss in Cuba.

Liverpool, Oct. 27.—Joseph Chamberlain addressed another large meeting in the Hippodrome here to-night. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Workingmen's Conservative Association, and the five thousand persons present gave to the former Colonial Secretary a tremendous reception. It was organized as an offset to the recent action of representatives of labor unions in various places in denouncing Mr. Chamberlain's tariff and preferential proposals.

Mr. Chamberlain devoted the first portion of his speech to the "dumping" of the manufactures of the United States and Germany in this country, which, he said, must result in depression after the present prosperity. With regard to the cry of "dearer food," he pledged himself that his proposals would not add anything to the cost of living; on the contrary, they would decrease the cost of living to the poorest families in the country.

The speaker gave up the greater part of his speech, which lasted for an hour and a half, to a powerful argument addressed to the working classes of the United Kingdom, to whom he appealed against their leaders. He pointed out the fact, hitherto overlooked by his opponents, that when the movement for free trade was carried the working classes were neither represented nor consulted; but it was a movement of the manufacturers and the middle class people. Now that the working classes were represented in Parliament, their support was absolutely essential to the carrying out of his proposals, which he said meant more employment.

Emphasizing the statement that it was impossible to reconcile free trade with trade unionism, Mr. Chamberlain pointed out the inconsistency of supporting a policy which admitted the product of the cheapest kind of labor without taxation. He said he believed the working classes of the United Kingdom were more advanced than many of their leaders, and said if this were true he was confident his proposals would win.

Mr. Chamberlain dwelt especially upon the shipping industry. He pointed out the greater growth of foreign shipbuilding compared with that of Great Britain and referred to the disability from which England suffered because of foreign bounties and because the regulations imposed by British shipping legislation were not enforced upon foreign shipping in British waters. He referred pointedly to Great Britain's loss of trade with Cuba, where, he said, British conditions of trade had not been respected, adding:

Perhaps the Americans did not understand them in the same sense as we did. In any event all our representations have been fruitless and America proposes preferential arrangements, treating Cuba exactly as I want you to treat Canada. This will result in no more British goods going to Cuba, and all the traffic between the United States and Cuba will be done in American bottoms. Not only that, but the large trade between Rangoon and Cuba, now being carried by British ships, will henceforth go to New-York and thence to Cuba in American vessels.

In regard to the losses suffered by British shipping from being excluded from foreign coasting trade, Mr. Chamberlain said:

What about defying the voyage from Riga to Vladivostok, or from Portland, Me., to San Francisco, as I want you to do? I want you to defy the vessel is entitled to voyage around Great Britain, putting in at every port, without restriction?

Mr. Chamberlain contended that all this emphasized the necessity to Great Britain of some means of bargaining with the foreigner. He said the adoption of his policy would encourage and stimulate the colonial shipping trade and enable ship owners to get return freights in such cases as Canada and Australia, and at the same time it would not prevent the development of the shipping industry. He said he wanted to see fewer foreign manufactured articles imported, but more raw materials in return for British finished goods.

In conclusion Mr. Chamberlain declared that Holland had tried and failed to keep command of the sea and her position as carrier and merchant of the world without a protective capacity, and that Great Britain could be no more successful than Holland if she neglected to bind her colonies to her.

The meeting adopted a resolution endorsing Mr. Chamberlain's services in endorsing the government's fiscal policy, and declaring the advisability of hindering the empire more closely together.
