

MORGAN TO GET PICTURE.

Lord Townshend Receives Permission to Sell His Salvator Rosa.

Lord Townshend has at length received permission from the English courts to sell his magnificent "Bellarius" by Salvator Rosa, to J. Pierpont Morgan for $50,000, which the marquis says has been offered by the banker. The picture in question consists of part and parcel of the entailed property of the marquis, and when Lord Townshend sought the requisite legal sanction to sell the picture to Mr. Morgan he was opposed by his cousin, Colonel Townshend, the next heir to the family honors and estates. The colonel, who is married to an immensely wealthy heiress, daughter of that Parisian banker, Cahen d'Anvers, who was crushed to death beneath his automobile, does not lack funds, and is ready to be again entirely dependent on his pay, as he was until his marriage. He does not, therefore, appreciate the necessity of selling any of the masterpieces which adorn the gallery at Raynham, and which have rendered it famous throughout the art world. Lord Townshend, however, is in straitened circumstances. Indeed, it was shown by the testimony produced in court, although the Townshend estates comprise thirty thousand acres of land in three counties, and in spite of the fact that his country seats are filled with art treasures, the gallery at Raynham Hall alone containing four hundred paintings, most of them masterpieces, some indeed being valued by experts at $50,000 or $100,000, yet Lord Townshend has not until now derived a penny from all these riches owing to the encumbrances which the estates are burdened through the extravagance of his predecessors. The fact that the young peer should be without income, although the owner for life of such an amount of property, appealed to the judges when the marquis, made indignant by his cousin's opposition to the sale of the "Bellarius" to J. Pierpont Morgan, applied to the courts for permission to sell, not merely the picture, but also the disposal of the other hundred paintings at Raynham, and accordingly they have just granted a decision in his favor, merely stipulating that he should refrain from disposing of the family portraits. As they are not only the least valuable, but also the least salable, of the paintings, the restriction is of no pecuniary importance to the marquis, who will certainly be able to realize enough from the sale of his picture to assure himself a handsome income proportionate to his rank in the peerage and to his fallaciously reputed wealth.

D. H. MALPIN'S WILL FILED.

The courts have acted sensibly in the matter. For, great as is the hardship involved by the inheritance of peages without an income to support them in fitting style, it is infinitely worse when this pecuniary is accompanied by the possession of great entailed estates, which, owing to the incumbrances with which they have been charged, do not yield sufficient income to return the owners to the pre-nuptial marriage settlement. At her death this property is to go to his stepdaughter, Frances Knox, and Adelaide McAlpin, wife, share and share alike. To his son, Charles W. McAlpin, he leaves his summer home, E. McAlpin, at Morris-town, N. J., and D. H. McAlpin, Jr., he leaves his estate at Littleton, N. J. The residue of the estate is to be divided equally between Edwin A. McAlpin, George L. McAlpin, D. H. McAlpin, Jr., Charles W. McAlpin, William W. McAlpin and Adelaide McAlpin, wife. He provides for household articles and oil paintings which he gave her before his death. He leaves his sister, Jane Benedict, $10,000, and George Fountain the same amount. To several employes he leaves sums ranging from $1,000 to $200.

FREDERIC R. COUDERT'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Frederic R. Coudert took place yesterday at St. Patrick's Cathedral, where, at the request of the family, a low mass was celebrated. The funeral was largely attended, and was in a sense a legal funeral, a majority of those present being lawyers and judges of the various courts. As the body was carried into the cathedral, Gullman's andante in C minor was played on the organ, and as it was carried out Chopin's Funeral March was rendered. The organ music was sung by Father of the Church of the Holy Cross; Fathers Healy, Lewis, McCrackin and McKinnon, Chancellor Hayes and Vicar General Edwards and Mooney. Eight young men employed in the offices of Coudert, and eight members of the choir, were present. The funeral was largely attended, and was in a sense a legal funeral, a majority of those present being lawyers and judges of the various courts. REPORT ON NEW PART TIME SYSTEM.

Dr. Edgar Dubs Shimer superintendent of School Districts Nos. 4 and 5, has written Associated City Superintendent David B. Egan, reporting that the part time system of Dr. William L. Ettlinger is proving successful at Public School No. 147, in East Broadway, where it is being tested. "Every district superintendent has received orders to test the system. It is one of two schools, said Mr. Dubs yesterday. "In the old schools it probably cannot be used with success, but the new schools are built on the new plan. There is no doubt that it will be successful in many instances."

THE WEATHER REPORT.
