

ROBBERY OF STEPHANIE. Her Secretary Arrested, with Her Jewels and Papers.

Seized by the police at the very moment when she was setting foot on board the transatlantic liner of Antwerp that was to convey him to this country, a young Hungarian of the name of Stephanie, a young girl of the name of Stephanie, a young girl of the name of Stephanie...

While Stephanie has doubtless been granted to her husband, she has not been granted to her husband, she has not been granted to her husband, she has not been granted to her husband...

The Duke of Arcos, formerly Spanish Envoy at Washington, who married Miss Lowry, that city, whose heart he had won while here still united as a mere secretary of legation, has just been appointed by King Alfonso to the post of ambassador at St. Petersburg.

JEFFERSON ADDRESSES YALE MEN. Tells of the Only Time He Was Hissed Off the Stage.

While on the subject of Hungary it may be as well to state that the assertion contained in a recent issue of the Tribune that the Duke of Arcos is certainly unfavourably known to the students of the Phi Beta Kappa Society.

Senator Quay Very Weak. Indications That His Work in Congress is Approaching the End.

Washington, May 5.—Senator Quay, of Pennsylvania, is at his home here, and at present has no intention of leaving the city. His condition causes his friends some anxiety.

PROBABLE ARRIVALS AT THE HOTELS. ALBEMARLE—Professor Alexander Graham Bell, Washington, Cambridge—Colonel Henry May, Boston.

THE WEATHER REPORT. Official Record and Forecast.—Washington, May 5.—The weather in the eastern districts continues to be dominated by an area of high pressure that has occupied the lake region and the Middle Atlantic States since the first of the month.

Count Orloff-Davidoff, who travelled the other day in his motor car from New York to St. Petersburg, stopping on the way, to present to the Czar a gift of a diamond necklace.

Local Official Record.—The following official record from the Weather Bureau shows the changes in the temperature for the last twenty-four hours in comparison with the corresponding date of last year.

WAR VIEWS OF EXPERTS. The Situation at New-Chwang and Port Arthur Discussed.

Washington, May 5.—The day's dispatches from St. Petersburg give a somewhat new coloring to the situation in Manchuria. Military experts here have cherished the notion that the fight in the Yalu section did not have the importance of a battle, and that, if it were to be strategically classified, it must be designated a skirmish or collision of outposts.

The Japanese evidently are in a position to carry out what experts describe as amphibious warfare. There must have been disclosed in any of the signs visible to the Russians, since the invasion of the New-Chwang section means the use of transports to a considerable extent, and this seems to have been accomplished without withdrawing Japanese warships from more or less ostentatious performances off Port Arthur and before Vladivostok.

Perhaps this was done for the benefit of the Russians to keep them in a state of preparedness at those two ports and in the vicinity of the Yalu, which a formidable army of Japanese was landing elsewhere, for instance, near Tallien-Wan (Dahly). This, some of the experts are now remarking, was early suggested as a possible stratagem of the Japanese.

NOTES ON THE WAR. Speculation upon the reported battle between the Japanese and the Russian Vladivostok squadron would be more easy and more confident if we knew that ships the Japanese have captured and sent into those waters.

That was a characteristic performance of the Japanese, to refrain from using tobacco and wine for a day, as a sign of mourning at the death of their gallant adversary, Admiral Makino.

There seems to be ground for Russian anxiety lest the victories of the Japanese shall incite insurrection among the Mongolian and other Asiatic peoples now under Russian rule.

It is well to bear in mind that ten years ago the Japanese occupied the whole region between Ying-Kow, or New-Chwang, and Moulken for a year or more. They are perfectly familiar with the "lay of the land" and with every stream, road, hill and village.

MAURUS JOKAI DEAD. Hungarian Novelist Had Inflammation of the Lungs.

Budapest, May 5.—Maurus Jokai, the Hungarian novelist, who was recently reported to be seriously ill, died this evening from inflammation of the lungs. He was seventy-nine years old.

Maurus Jokai, or Jókai Mór, according to the Hungarian custom of placing the surname first, was born February 19, 1825, at Komorn, a town on the Danube, about fifty miles northwest of Budapest.

He was left an orphan, and the change in his circumstances obliged him to leave school at Presburg, where he had been studying German, and to go to his own teacher thereafter for about three years.

After leaving the high school Jókai studied law, but although he completed his course and was admitted to the bar, he never practiced the profession, and practised only a short time.

He was left an orphan, and the change in his circumstances obliged him to leave school at Presburg, where he had been studying German, and to go to his own teacher thereafter for about three years.

FRANZ VON LENBACH DEAD. The Historical and Portrait Painter Expires in Munich.

Munich, May 5.—Franz von Lenbach, the historical and portrait painter, and a resident of the Munich Artists' Association, is dead.

Franz von Lenbach was born at Schrobenhausen, and was the son of a poor carpenter, whom the son helped until he was nearly grown. At length he obtained permission from his father to go to Munich, and there presented himself to Piloty, who made arrangements for him to enter the academy.

He was left an orphan, and the change in his circumstances obliged him to leave school at Presburg, where he had been studying German, and to go to his own teacher thereafter for about three years.
