GOSSIP OF THE BOROUGH. BROOKLYN SOCIAL WORLD.

Criticism of "Anti-Pass" Baker's Use of Franking Privilege.

Congressman Robert Baker, who on account of his aversion to accepting courtesies from railroads has gained the title of "Anti-Pass" Baker, is being sharply criticised by certain persons who do not believe in what they term the abuse of privileges that are granted to Congressmen. Recently there has been widely circulated among those whose names appear on the poll lists in Brooklyn a speech by Congressman Baker made in the House of Representatives on March 26, 1904. These have been sent out in manila envelopes, on the outside of which is a statement showing that they contain "Part of Congressional Record—Free," being a speech of Congressman Baker, entitled "Ship Subsidies." The subheads as printed are: "Ship Subsidies the Rankest Paternalism—Foreign Experience—Balance of Trade Fallacy—Stacking the Cards—Let Us Try Freedom." These envelopes, containing a speech which was an attack on trusts and an organized band of unscrupulous, but wealthy plutocrats, were sent through the mails without stamps under the frank of Congressman Baker. Under the freedom of the mails accorded to Congressmen for their own business his signature as M. C. appearing on the envelope was sufficient to insure it being carried as deadhead matter. The first inference was that Congressman Baker was sending some of his speeches to his constituents, but this illusion was destroyed when the speech was taken out and seen to bear the following imprint, made with a rubber stamp: "Compliments of Radical Democracy, No. 261 Fulton-st., Brooklyn, from whom other literature on this subject can be obtained on request."

WISH DIAMOND WEDDING. Couple Now Married Sixty-five Years in Good Health.

If the earnest wishes of their many friends are granted, Mr. and Mrs. David Pierson Gardner, who celebrated their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary last Monday, will live to celebrate their diamond jubilee, which will come in ten years. Mr. Gardner would then have reached the century mark, however, and his wife would be ninety-five years old, and he says he is hardly looking forward to reaching that age. "It is contrary to nature," he says. But to look at the accompanying picture of the happy old couple, which was taken in the garden of their home, at No. 599 Washington-ave., three days after the celebration of their sixty-fifth anniversary, one could easily believe that the good people have still many years of happy life before them. To see and talk to them only strengthens that impression.

It will cost about $25,000. Assistant District Attorney M'Carthy is chairman of the building committee.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID PIERSON GARDNER. Picture taken in their garden three days after the celebration of their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID PIERSON GARDNER.

It takes him so long to finish with the paper. No matter how busy his day, he never goes to bed without having read it. As for the Odd Fellows, he is the oldest living member in New-York State, and, some believe, in the country. He was one of the charter members of Howard Lodge No. 5, which was organized in Newark, in 1841, and was its first noble grand. In Brooklyn he belongs to Principle Lodge and Bethlehem Encampment, both of which meet in the Johnson Building. He never misses a meeting. Two years ago last October he went out to Newark to the celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of Howard Lodge.

NAVY YARD NOTES.

The one feature of interest about all others at the navy yard at present is the old warship Constellation, now more than a century old. She was rebuilt and lengthened twenty-two feet in 1851. An incident occurred on Thursday which recalled the old recitation "The One Hoss Shay." The old vehicle which had "lived a hundred years to a day" and that "went to pieces all at once." There was really more of a scare than the fact warranted still it showed that the Constellation was a ship that could be depended upon. Some of the workmen were using the blower torches, such as painters use to blast old paint in order to remove it more easily, and at one place on the starboard side the planks were so rotten that the blaze caused it to burn through. The alarm was given, the emergency fire extinguisher was put into action, and the fire was put out and kept from spreading. The ship catch fire she would no doubt burn quickly and thus would be lost one of the famous old ships of which two others only remain, the others being the Constitution and the Wabash.

DIGNITY OF LABOR.

While a Tribune reporter was talking to Mr. Gardner in his shop the other day the old man would not sit down. He was on his feet all the time, walking around and directing everything. Now it was "Daniel, your shoe is boiling pretty freely." Then a workman came in with some trouble about a job he had been out on, and Mr. Gardner listened to it and advised him. "I guess you'd better put the horse away, then," he concluded. After watching the work at one of the benches he remarked: "Do those head lugs go over the door?" Then he took a walk all around the room, looking at everything, and afterward examined some plans on which his son was at work.

GROUNDLESS FEAR.

and his wife have been active members of the Church of Our Father, and are regular attendants at all the meetings. For many years Mr. Gardner was president of the church society. But it is in his home where Mr. Gardner's devotion is shown most strongly. Indeed, the very fact that he and Mrs. Gardner have lived together so long and so happily, is a clear indication of the serenity and happiness that have surrounded them. "How often some one asked Mr. Gardner the other day, 'that you and your wife have been able to live happily together for sixty-five years, when nowadays sixty-five weeks or sometimes sixty-six days seems to be about the limit of marital life,' Mr. Gardner seemed to think this a rather frivolous question, but, pressed by the reporter, he said: 'I allowed my wife to run the house and I ran the business.'

The evenness of his temperament undoubtedly has had much to do with it. As told in The Tribune last week, he does not believe in worrying. "I might have worried," he says, "if it would have done any good, but what was the use?" His son says of him: "I allowed my wife to run the house and I ran the business."

"I have only four grandchildren, and they are all single. I do hope, however, to have a great-grandchild before long." He used to go to the grand lodge of the Odd Fellows at their annual gathering in August, and now his friends do not think he ought to go alone after dark," he told the reporter, "but I haven't reached that point yet."

Mr. Gardner, as the reporter was leaving, said: "I had my wife's own words, but I have tried to make the best of it all. I haven't much to complain of."

It is truly remarkable to see the active interest that this ninety-year-old "young man" takes in his business. He manufactures snakes, blinds and sorts of machines, but a good deal of the work still has to be done by hand. "Our business isn't what it used to be, because we have to compete with products from the country. Lumber is cheaper there and labor is cheaper. They can hire boys to run machines for 50 cents a day. Now they sell doors and screens for 50 cents apiece in the department stores. I never could understand how they could do it. Even if they got the lumber given to them, there is the labor of fitting the wire on screens, for instance. Machines are wonderful, but I never imagined we'd be doing this kind of work. I see men are going to put them in the Government. Mr. Gardner's devotion to the church has been such that he is known as the "grand old man" of the Universalist Church." For fifty-seven years he

NEW PLAN FOR BRIDGE TROLLEYS.

W. J. La Roche Suggests Elevated Loop Around the City Hall.

In behalf of certain of the citizens of Brooklyn, ex-Senator William J. La Roche has suggested a plan for relieving the bridge congestion at this end of the old Brooklyn Bridge. The plan involves the following features:

Mr. La Roche proposes giving the trolley tracks an up grade to the beginning of the present down grade toward Park Row, and carrying the trolley tracks thereby to the level of the bridge trolley tracks. From this point he would lay two elevated tracks, running then in a horseshoe around the City Hall, and back to the other side of the bridge.
