THE AMERICAN SPIRIT.

E. H. Harriman has returned from Europe, with great hopes for American prosperity. "Money," he said to a reporter, "was never so well distributed as now. Our prospects were never so good. Best of all is the dogged and hopeful determination of the American spirit. "I'll give you an illustration of it. An intelligent looking man entered the office of the editor of a newspaper and said: "I understand, sir, that you are in need of an editorial writer." "We were," the editor replied, "but the post has been filled." "The applicant sighed. Then he resumed in a brisk tone: "I heard also that you wanted some one to address envelopes. Is that vacancy still open?" "It is," said the editor. "Then," said the other, "I'll take it, if I may." "He took it, and I'll wager that before many months were gone he was an editorial writer, after all."

WHY SHE LOOKED BACK.

"Why," asked the Sunday school teacher, "did Lot's wife look back?" "I s'pose," replied Johnny, "it was to see if her skirt hung all right behind."—(Chicago Record-Herald)
