THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1906.

THE NEWS THIS MORNING.

NATIONAL POWERS AND OPPORTUNITIES. Senator Spooner's speech of Tuesday should be convincing.

are subject to its direction, and are responsible to it alone. Under the treaty they would continue doing almost exactly the work they are now doing.

Equally admissible with his vindication of our policy in Morocco was Senator Spooner's explication of the existing arrangement in the Dominican Republic and a treaty.

Why? It is universally conceded that the work of the American administrators at the Dominican custom houses is being well done and is highly beneficial.

THE WRECK OF THE VALENCIA.

By the loss of the steamship Valencia at the entrance of the Straits of San Juan de Fuca a fresh addition is made to a long list of tragedies which have been enacted in that locality.

THE END OF AN "INSURRECTION."

Yesterday's vote in the House of Representatives on the Stated bill rule brought in by the House Committee on Rules presumably assures the easy passage of the Hamilton measure.

The interesting intimation is vouchsafed from the national capital that the federal government may not be able to give New York relief from the unnecessary nuisance of steam whistles on the North River.

STREET TRAFFIC REGULATION.

Just why any sane man should wish to break up the police traffic squads, which are of great benefit to the community in general and do no particular harm to any class, is difficult to see.

THE CONNECTING ROAD QUESTION.

The application of the Pennsylvania Railroad for permission to build its connecting line across certain streets in the boroughs of the Bronx and Queens is as much in the interest of the city of New-York as of the stockholders of the road.

across the stream of traffic and turn orderly progress into chaos just for the sake of having their own way. At any rate, no wise lawmaker will support such an indefensible invasion of "home rule" as a measure forbidding by state law the regulation of street traffic in the city of New-York by the government of the city of New-York.

THE WRECK OF THE VALENCIA.

By the loss of the steamship Valencia at the entrance of the Straits of San Juan de Fuca a fresh addition is made to a long list of tragedies which have been enacted in that locality.

The primary cause of this accident was inability to make an observation for two days and a half. The captain was obliged to rely on dead reckoning, and it now appears that he underestimated the distance he had run after leaving San Francisco.

puts into the city's hands a club to be used to extort rate concessions in interstate commerce. This is apparently conceded by sensible men, however, to be quite beyond the power of the city officials.

The grants asked by the railroad are not like those generally asked by a streetcar line. The railroad is to be built on the company's own property. A franchise in the ordinary sense is not sought, but merely permission to cross certain streets separating properties of the railroad.
