

CURZON MAY BE LEADER

India's Ex-Viceroy a Possible Party Chief in the Commons.

Lord Curzon may possibly become leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons if certain negotiations in progress are brought to a successful issue. In that case Arthur Balfour would retire to the House of Lords with a peerage. There is no doubt that the Unionist party since its overwhelming defeat at the polls feels the absolute necessity of a more aggressive, energetic and manly leader than the amiable ex-Premier, who is regarded by its members throughout the country as responsible for its disaster, and who has therefore forfeited their confidence.

Lord Curzon, on the contrary, inspires very different sentiments. He has come back over India with a magnificent record as the most brilliant and successful of a long line of viceroys, commanding as such the respect of political foes, as well as of his friends. True, he has not the agreeable manner and pleasing ways of Arthur Balfour, and may never perhaps be able to command as much personal popularity as the latter. But he is better fitted to reorganize the shattered forces of the Opposition and to direct an effective warfare upon the administration of the House of Commons than any other member. Lord Curzon as an Irish peer has a perfect right to stand for the House of Commons, and there are plenty of seats whose occupants will be ready to resign in his favor should he accept the proposals which are being made to him, and induce the leading members of the Opposition and the managers of the party to agree to his return. If the plan is carried through it would mean that Lord Curzon would be Premier on the return of the Conservatives and Unionists to power, and as such continue the traditions of Lord Palmerston, whom he resembles in the masterful way of his ways and in his principles of foreign policy. Lord Palmerston, too, it may be remembered, was an Irish peer, who as such sat as Premier in the House of Commons, being indeed the only member of that body to wear the Order of the Garter.

COUNT'S FIGHTING AMERICAN BLOOD.

Count Guy de la Rochefoucauld, who has just been condemned by the French tribunal to a term of three months' imprisonment for his extremely active share in the March riots at Paris, is half an American, and his relatives and friends are accustomed to ascribe not only his good looks, but also his combative disposition—his readiness to fight on any and every occasion—to the presence of the strain of American blood in his veins. His mother was a Miss Euphrasia Montgomery, of New-Orleans, member of a family well known in Washington and New-York as the Crescent City. The Count is the senior branch of the ducal house of the De la Rochefoucauld, and not to the Etesian line, as asserted in London "Truth" and in many of the European papers. His grandfather was Duke Francois de la Rochefoucauld, chief of the entire family. Duke Francois, who emigrated along with the royal princes at the close of the Great Revolution as the eighth of the century, married at Paris an English woman, a native of Southampton, and by her had a son, the Count's grandfather, the Duke of Wellington. The Count's father, Duke Francois, who emigrated along with the royal princes at the close of the Great Revolution as the eighth of the century, married at Paris an English woman, a native of Southampton, and by her had a son, the Count's grandfather, the Duke of Wellington.
