AMERICAN LEAGUE. New York, 2; Boston, 1. Philadelphia, 4; Washington, 3.

AMERICAN LEAGUE STANDING. Clubs. Won. Lost. Pct. Games. New York, 2; Boston, 1; Philadelphia, 4; Washington, 3.

Twenty thousand baseball enthusiasts turned out yesterday afternoon to witness the opening of the American League baseball season at American League Park, where for twelve hours New York battled against Boston before Williams scored the winning run for the Yankees. The final score was 2 to 1. At the end of the fifth inning the score was tied at 1 to 1. Then for six innings the best batters on both teams failed to circle the diamond.

The real opening of the baseball season in Manhattan saw a crowd that defied the occasion. There have been games here before this year, but not the games that count. By the time the game began every seat in the grand stand was taken and there were only a few seats left in the bleachers on the west end of the field. This was despite the fact that all day long a gray coating of clouds had overshadowed the sun.

American League Park was fixed up in gala attire for the occasion. From dozens of poles that topped the fence surrounding the park floated flags of various nationalities. Draped from the roof of the grand stand were yards and yards of bright colored bunting. The wind caught the flags and made them flap a glad welcome to New York's baseball fans. In front of the grand stand, on the field, twenty boxes had been fitted up. These were filled with laughing men and women, most of whom had taken the precaution to don overcoats and furs, which were the only reminders that it was not a midseason game.

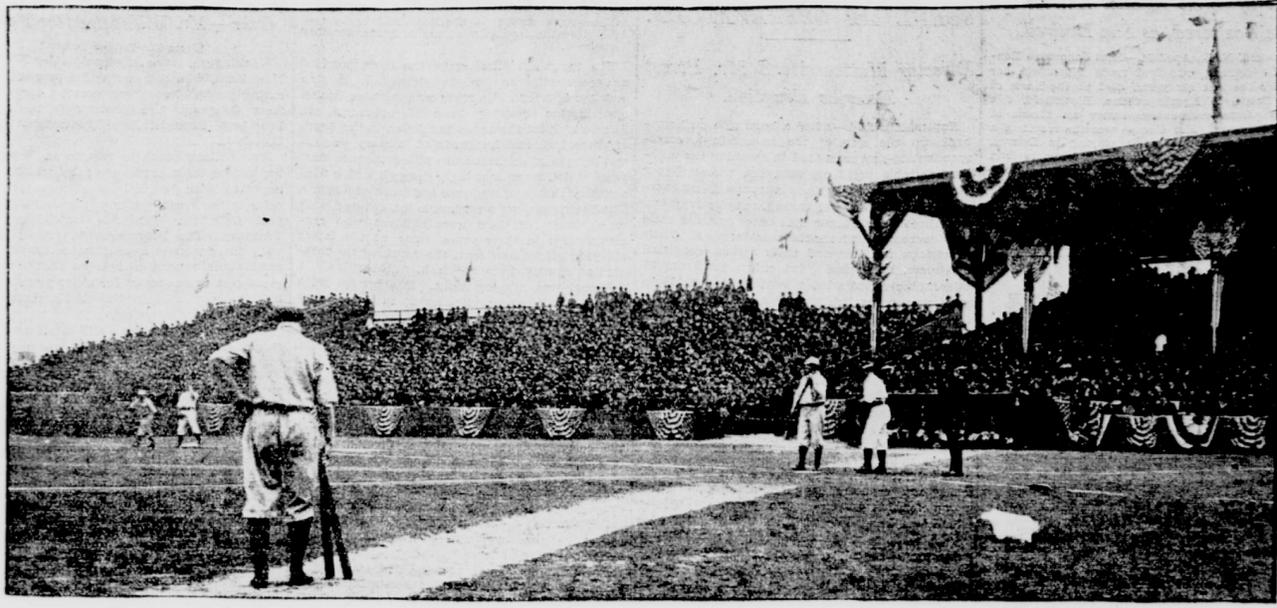

So far as the players were concerned, they looked as though they were glad to get down to work again, and sported about like colts. The six errors showed that the men had not quite reached midsummer form in fielding, but they made up for it by slugging the ball right and left, so that the scoreboard showed eight hits for New York and eleven for Boston. Had the hits been bunched the story of the game would have been different, but both pitchers were in fine fettle and seldom allowed two hits to come in succession.

"Cy" Young was in the box for Boston, and although his team was defeated, he showed slightly superior form to his opponent, "Happy" Jack Chesbro. For the Yankees, eight men did not get the chance to start for first base, while on the Boston team there were only three.

It was a good natured crowd that saw the game, and one liberal of applause for both sides. The cheers when Elberfeld made a good stop were fully equalled when "Cy" Young swatted out a two-bagger in the fifth inning. When, at the beginning of the eleventh inning, Parent went to bat for Boston it was difficult to tell just which side the outsiders wanted to win. "All out" and the fans had the choice of walking, paying 25 cents for a carriage, or waiting for a little shuttle train that ran occasionally.

The delay was caused by an accident that happened to one of the elevators at 164th street, which dropped a short distance with several men and women in it. The women screamed, but there was no damage done. After this only a part of the express trains ran as far as 164th street. In addition to the subway, the Amsterdam avenue and Broadway cars did a good business, while for a long time a train of carriages and automobiles poured into the park.

Before the game there was the usual opening parade of the two opposing teams. Led by a brass band and "Jimmy" Williams, the little mascot of the Yankees, the two teams marched across the field. John M. Ward, the veteran shortstop, tossed out a new ball promptly at 3:30 o'clock. Sheridan, who umpired the strikes and balls, stepped behind the plate. There was a thinking of a ball up in the grandstand, a cry of "Play ball," and the fight for the American League pennant was on.

Sellbach was the first man at the bat for Boston, and went out early at first on a little infield hit. Collins went to second on an error, but it did him no good, for he was out at second on Stahl's hit to Chesbro. Just as Parent, Boston's shortstop, was going to the bat the sun broke through the clouds, and seemed to smile approval on the opening of the season, but it did not help Parent, for he was an easy out. New York likewise went out in one-two-three order, after Dougherty had come to first on a hit.

The first run came in the second inning. The Boston men were easy outs on the first three pitched balls. Freeman was an easy out at first. Grimshaw, however, got a hit. Godwin batted one to Elberfeld, who fielded the ball to second in time for Williams to throw Godwin out at first, making the first double play of the American League season. When the Yankees first, Grimshaw, however, got a hit. Godwin batted one to Elberfeld, who fielded the ball to second in time for Williams to throw Godwin out at first, making the first double play of the American League season.

Conroy, McGuire was thrown out at the plate. Boston's first run came in the fifth. Grimshaw, not to be outdone by Chesbro, hit for two bases and went to third when Laporte mistudged Young's hit for a foul and let it go by. He scored when Elberfeld threw wild to Chase.

From the fifth until the ninth inning the game was mildly exhilarating. After that it became exciting. For the most part the men went out in one, two, three order. Boston could do nothing in its half of the ninth. When Dougherty went to the bat the crowd on the bleachers was wildly calling on him to save the day for New York. He responded by knocking out a two-base hit. Had he had good coaching he would have scored easily, but had judgment took him too far away from the bag, and he was caught trying to get back. Keeler went to second on a throw that went far over the first baseman's head, but Young fanned the next man and Laporte could do no better than fly out to Freeman.

There was plenty of excitement in the tenth and eleventh innings, but no runs. The announcement at the beginning of the tenth that the Giants had won in Philadelphia brought one of the biggest cheers from the crowd that had been heard. Boston almost scored in its half of the twelfth. Collins opened with a clean single. Williams made a fine one-handed stop of Stahl's grounder, but was too late to catch either of the men. Parent swung hard at the ball, but succeeded in sending it only far enough so that it was easy to field Stahl out at second.

Laporte opened the inning for the Yankees with a fly into Stahl's hands. Williams, however, scored a two-bagger. Conroy went out on a foul fly, but Chase ended the game by making a pretty hit, on which Williams scored. The score follows:

Washington Beaten in Close Game Before a Record Crowd.

Washington, April 14.—What was said to be the biggest crowd that ever attended a baseball game in this city turned out to see the opening game of the season between Washington and Philadelphia this afternoon. Nearly thirteen thousand people passed through the turnstiles, to say nothing of the free admissions and those that climbed over the fence.

President Van Johnson of the American League tossed out the first ball, and many Senators, Representatives, members of the Supreme Court of the United States and members of the diplomatic corps were present.

The game was well played, and the American League champions won by a score of 4 to 3. Bender outpitched Hughes, although the former had the luck on his side. The batting of Murphy and the fielding of Cross and Schaffly were the features. The score follows:

CINCINNATI, 1; CHICAGO, 0. Cincinnati (National), April 14.—Only one run was scored in today's game between Cincinnati and Chicago, and that went to the home team in the seventh inning. Schulte mistudged Seymour's long fly. A high throw to the plate enabled the batter to make the circuit. The score by innings follows:

SUPERBAS LOSE AGAIN.

Boston Wins Third Straight Game by Dolan's Timely Hit.

The Boston Nationals scored their third consecutive victory over the Superbas at Washington Park, Brooklyn, yesterday, by a score of 1 to 0. Doeschler and Lindaman pitched for Brooklyn and Boston, respectively, and it was a pitchers' battle throughout.

Doeschler pitched good ball for Brooklyn, striking out nine men. A feature of the game was a three-base hit by Brain in the seventh inning, when he sent the ball to the clubhouse. Maloney let the ball pass through his hands, but recovered it quickly enough to hold Brain at third.

Boston scored the only run of the game in the ninth inning, when Goodie got a base on balls. He was advanced to second on Tenny's sacrifice, and romped home on Dolan's timely two-bagger to centre field. The score follows:

NEW-YORK. Philadelphia, 1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 8; 9; 10; 11; 12. Brooklyn, 1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 8; 9; 10; 11; 12.

PHILADELPHIA. Philadelphia, 1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 8; 9; 10; 11; 12. Brooklyn, 1; 2; 3; 4; 5; 6; 7; 8; 9; 10; 11; 12.

GIANTS PULL GAME OUT.

TAKES ELEVEN INNINGS.

Philadelphia Beaten by a Strange Twist of Fortune.

NATIONAL LEAGUE GAMES TO-DAY. Boston at Brooklyn. Pittsburgh at St. Louis. Chicago at Cincinnati.

Philadelphia, April 14.—The Giants defeated Philadelphia in an eleven inning game here today by a score of 2 to 1. A dispute arose over a decision of the umpire in the last inning, and it looked for a time as if it would have a serious ending, but O'Day, the umpire, was firm, and the game was finally resumed after some minutes.

A bigger crowd than on the opening day saw the game, which was exciting from start to finish. It was estimated at 15,000 persons. In the last half of the struggle McGraw changed the positions of a few of his men. With the exception of Gilbert's two errors, the Champions played a perfect fielding game. His hesitancy in throwing the ball in the opening inning was responsible for the Quakers getting their only run.

Taylor, who was in the box for New York, besides pitching a fine game and holding Philadelphia down to six hits, fielded his position cleverly, making three assists and one put-out. The work of Kane, who was in the box for Philadelphia, was also effective. It was not altogether his fault that the Giants scored their winning run in the eleventh inning.

While the game was lacking in fielding features, there were several fast plays on both sides. The Giants made their first run in the opening inning. Bresnahan singled and took second on Brown's successful bunt. A wild pitch advanced both men, and on Dolan's single Bresnahan crossed the plate. The enthusiasm was unbounded when Philadelphia tied the score in this inning. Thomas singled and Gilbert held the ball too long on Magee's grounder, which allowed Thomas to cross the plate.

For the next nine innings the game went on without either side scoring, but in the eleventh the Giants made their winning run. With McGann out Mertes was hit by a pitched ball. As he stole second he was again hit by the ball on the leg on a bad throw of Dolan. It carried off to centre field, which enabled Mertes to cross the plate with the run that meant victory. The score follows:

STEEL WITH A TENSILE STRENGTH OF 225,000 POUNDS TO THE SQUARE INCH.

Now that the POPE-TOLEDO has adopted Chrome Nickel Steel of a tensile strength of 225,000 lbs., all the arguments that hitherto may have been valid with reference to foreign built cars are blown into a cocked hat. Even the most ardent advocate of the foreign car has ever been willing to admit that the POPE-TOLEDO motor is the most consistent, most flexible, most powerful, silent and smooth running in the world. Their arguments have always been steel, steel, steel—the superiority of the nickel steel used in the shafts and gears of their cars. Now that we have adopted CHROME NICKEL STEEL THROUGHOUT for crank, counter and jack shafts, transmission, and all other gears, and are drop forging all axes of the I beam pattern from steel of 110,000 lbs. tensile strength, we can, in all sincerity, say and prove that the POPE-TOLEDO to-day is the peer of any automobile in the world, no matter where made or at what price.

Any man who will stop to think must realize that America leads in the production of steel of all kinds. That we are to-day the largest users in the trade of Chrome Nickel Steels can be easily ascertained by any one who will communicate with any of the following named steel makers:

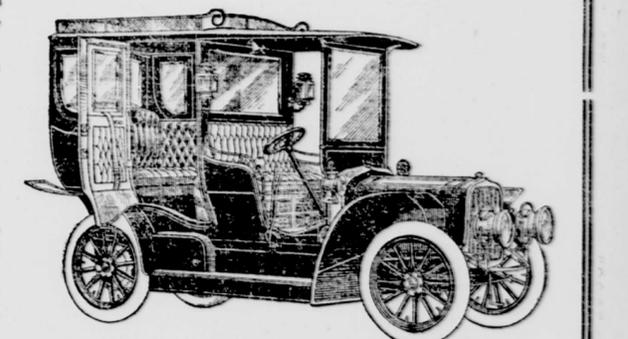

- BETHLEHEM STEEL CO., Bethlehem, Pa. CARPENTER STEEL CO., Reading, Pa. MIDVALE STEEL CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

In planning and designing the 1906 POPE-TOLEDO, Colonel Pope gave emphatic and carte blanche instructions to spare no pains and no expense to produce absolutely the best car in the world. This Chrome Nickel Steel is not only ten times as expensive to purchase in the rough, but it is many times as hard and expensive to work.

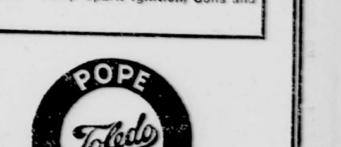

As an illustration, we put a piece of the ordinary case hardened gear steel in a vise, the size of a fifty-cent piece. From four to five blows of a hammer will break it. It takes from 150 to 200 blows of the same hammer to break the same sized piece of Chrome Nickel Steel.

The only mistake we have made in the 1906 POPE-TOLEDO is in the price. It should, by every token of cost of production and in comparison with the price of strictly high grade cars, be $5,000 instead of $3,500. Certain it is that the price for 1907 will not remain at what it is to-day.

Type XII, 35-40 H. P. Pope-Toledo, $3,500. Four Twin Head, Copper Jacketed Cylinders, Jump Spark; Coils and Batteries; Provision for Magneto. Three Speeds Forward; Reverse. Chrome Steel Shafts, Gears and Transmission. Steel Body; twenty-one Painting Operations in Finish. Five to 60 Miles an Hour on High Gear. I Beam Axles, Drop Forged.

Type XII, 35-40 H. P. Pope-Toledo Limousine. PRICE $5,000. FULLY EQUIPPED. Four Twin Head, Copper Jacketed Cylinders, Sliding Chrome Steel Transmission, Gears and Shafts. Three Speeds, Forward and Reverse. I Beam Axles, Drop Forged. Twenty-one Painting Operations in Finish; Beautifully and Luxuriously Upholstered. Jump Spark Ignition, Coils and Batteries, Provision for Magneto.

WHAT regular stock model touring car has won every notable speed, hill climbing and endurance contest in which it was entered from October, 1902, to date—covering an uninterrupted period of victory of three years?—POPE-TOLEDO.

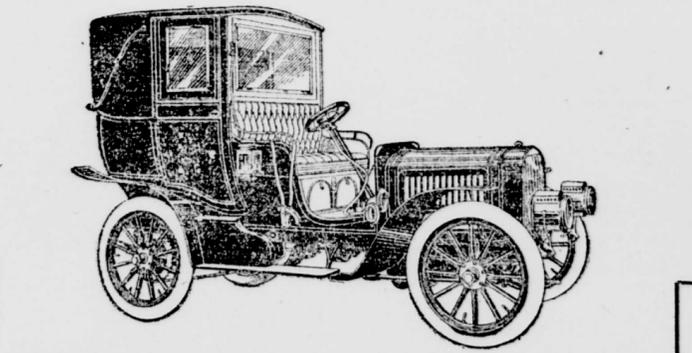

WHAT car was first to adopt in this country Chrome Nickel Steel construction?—POPE-TOLEDO.

WHAT car can you drive behind a team walking or up the steepest hills of Harlem on the high gear?—POPE-TOLEDO.

WHAT car won the Louisiana Purchase trophy, World's Fair, 10-mile championship of the world, against a big field, at St. Louis, Mo., August 28th, 1904?—POPE-TOLEDO.

WHAT car won the 5-mile open race for stripped touring cars, and what car made a new record for equipped touring cars at Buffalo, N. Y., August 18-19, 1905?—POPE-TOLEDO.

WHAT car won the 5-mile race for heavy touring cars at Albany, N. Y., Sept. 17, 1904?—POPE-TOLEDO.

Type X, 25 H. P. Pope-Toledo, $2,800. Pope-Toledo Construction Throughout, including Chrome Nickel Steel. Four Cylinders; Sliding Gear Transmission—Five to 50 Miles an Hour. A High Powered handy Car, easy to drive, easy on tires. Carries five people anywhere.

WHAT 30 H. P. touring car made the run from Santa Barbara to Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 3, 1905, in 4 hours, 4 minutes?—POPE-TOLEDO.

WHAT 24 H. P. and only stock touring car in 300-mile Vanderbilt Cup race averaged 48 miles an hour and finished third, being beaten only by 90 H. P. Panhard and 80 H. P. Clement-Bayard, at Garden City, L. I., Oct. 8, 1904?—POPE-TOLEDO.

WHAT car won the Hill Climbing Contest on Old Nigger Hill at St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 4, 1907?—POPE-TOLEDO.

WHAT regular stock model touring car won the most arduous Endurance Run ever attempted—that from New York to Pittsburgh via Cleveland, in October, 1903, losing only 8 points in the journey of nearly 900 miles under weather conditions that stalled trains?—POPE-TOLEDO.

WHAT car won the 5-mile, full equipment, 4 passenger race at Yonkers, N. Y., Sept. 24, 1904?—POPE-TOLEDO.

WHAT car competing against many other American cars of far greater horse-power made 112-16 miles in 2 hours, 5 seconds, defeating all other cars entered at the Vanderbilt Cup Elimination Race, Long Island, N. Y., Sept. 23, 1905?—POPE-TOLEDO.
