

TOKALON'S TURF PRIZE.

the business and professional world to the lowest stable boy. All were attracted by the promise of a brilliant contest, and found in the sport the same keen enjoyment. They came by carriage, by coach, by automobile, by trolley, by train, and all roads seemed to lead to Gravesend.

Among the well known sportsmen present were August Belmont, chairman of the Jockey Club; James R. Keene, Herman B. Duray, Sydney Page, John A. Drake, E. R. Thomas, Foxhall P. Keene, Thomas Hitchcock, jr., Senator McCarran, Charles G. Gates, H. K. Knapp, Francis E. Hitchcock, P. J. Dwyer, J. E. Widener, Jesse Lewish, S. S. Howland, Woodford Clay, Andrew Miller, J. G. Follansbee and John Hunter.

The individual was lost, however, in the multitude, and the vast majority of those present was made up of those who have been won to the sport because of the high plane to which it has been lifted, until it has become a recreation.

After two overnight races had been decided and Superman had so bravely defeated the high priced De Mund in the Expectation Stakes, which served as a curtain raiser, so to speak, for the Brooklyn, the larger part of the crowd kept their seats or stood on the lawn while the candidates for the big race came out on the track for their preliminary warming-up gallops.

Twenty minutes later there would be applause for only one, or possibly two, but for the time each one, as a prospective winner, was closely watched and eagerly discussed. The gallops over, some made their way to the crowded ring to lack their fancy, while others sought out the paddock in the hope of picking up some stable information to aid them in making a selection.

The Brooklyn Handicap, with a guaranteed value of $20,000, at one mile and a quarter, was run as the fourth race. August Belmont withdrew Blandy and planned his faith to Lord of the Vale, while Knight Errant, Adbell, Red Knight and Garnish were also scratched. Snow King, a four-year-old, was the only horse to start, so that fourteen horses went to the post. Each one was well served in the matter of jockeys, and to all appearances, each one was fit and ready to do for a good race.

There were plenty of bookmakers to handle the wagers of those who wanted to back their fancy, but the speculation on the race was comparatively quiet. Merry Lark, with Miller up, closed a slight favorite at 2 to 1, while Dandelion, a strong second choice at 4 to 1, and the other horses ranged in price from 10 to 1 (The Picket and Tokalon) to 20 to 1 (Goldsmith and Snow King). Tokalon opened at 20 to 1, and on the support of his followers and the few pickers who are always looking for the unexpected to happen, was backed down to 25 to 1.

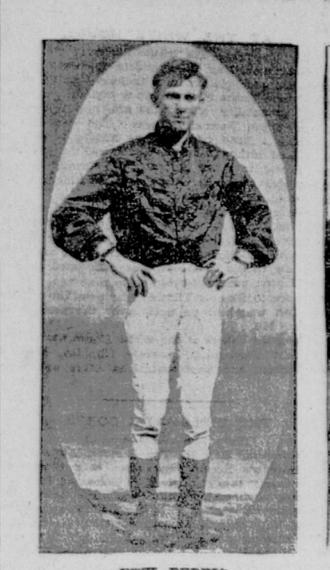

SCENES IN THE PADDOCK. The paddock was a quiet place, compared with the seething, crowded ring. Little knots of persons stood about discussing the chances of this one or that and commenting on the looks and appearances of the various candidates. Owners and trainers were supremely confident and not one there was who did not seem to have high hopes for victory, with no excuses to offer in case of defeat.

There was the same high tension, however, which precedes a big race, and general relief was felt when the starting bell rang. Most of the horses were saddled by the assistants prepared for the purpose, but the Picket, Merry Lark, Dandelion and Security got their final toilet on the outside of the paddock shed. Lord of the Vale appeared the most nervous, as did Security, but most of the excitement attending the final preparations was on the part of the spectators. The Picket and Merry Lark attracted the most attention and could not impress muscular development, power and wonderful speed and seemed anxious to get out on the track as early as possible. Dandelion, too, could hardly be restrained, so keen was he for the struggle.

When the bugle sounded there was a general scurrying to the ring or to some point of vantage to see the race, while the trainers, giving a final test to the saddle, the jockeys, giving a leg up and a last word of instruction, the horses were then done, the horse on which they had such high hopes was in the hands of their jockey, and with high hopes was in the hands of the place from which to view the race to find some one to back. As the field filed out of the paddock gate there was a ripple of applause. Proper led the way with stately stride, and the other horses followed in a line, and so on down to Snow King, which brought up the rear. They passed the Picket in single file, the bright silks of the riders lending much to the general scene. Some sixteenth of a mile the horses broke into a gallop and made their way to the start at the head of the stretch.

OFF TO A GOOD START. Once at the post there was a general wheeling for position and a shifting of flashing colors. Proper was on his bad behavior, while Oxford, Security and Lord of the Vale were more or less fractious and delayed the start four or five minutes. The jockeys, knowing full well the importance of getting their mounts away from the post in a good position, were wide awake and ready to back the barrier, but on the whole they were on their good behavior and did their best to get their mounts away from the post in a good position. Mars Cassidy, the starter, waited patiently for the single purpose of getting every horse away from the post in a good position.

THE WINNING COMBINATION IN THE BROOKLYN HANDICAP.

DRICK BEDELL. Who rode Tokalon to victory.

Lord of the Vale and went on to take issue with Dandelion. O'Neill saw his danger and sat down to ride his mount out and give him all possible help, but Tokalon ranged along so smoothly and so easily that he was looking for a better chance to fight out a bitter fight to the judges, and won the post by a neck.

The Picket, closing with a rush on the right, was slowly but surely gaining on leaders, but the distance to the judges was all too short and third place was his portion. Proper also closed to the rear and led the rest of the field, which came straggling some in a cloud of dust.

PADDOCK THE MECCA. Mr. Keene a Central Figure—Owner of Tokalon Wins Fortune. Though the paddock at Gravesend is not to be compared with the spacious inclosures at Sheepscot and Belmont Park, it was filled with a thoroughly representative crowd of turfmen yesterday before and after the running of the Brooklyn Handicap. Many owners and enthusiasts also visited it to look over the two-year-olds which tried conclusions in the Expectation.

The most interesting figure, perhaps, was James R. Keene, who did not attempt to conceal his pleasure over the victory of Superman, the two-year-old chestnut colt by Commando and Anomaly, which he had bought from the late Mr. Keene, the owner of the Expectation Stakes. It was the second time the famous "white, blue spots" had finished first in this stake, Confederate having won for Foxhall P. Keene in 1892, when the distance was four furlongs.

Asked whether he had expected to win with Superman, Mr. Keene smiled and said: "When you are starting a great colt against such high priced and seasoned horses as De Mund and W. H. Daniel, you can't just say that you expect to win. I am sure, however, that my horse had a good chance, and I am well satisfied with his performance." When it was suggested that the race was run exactly to suit Superman, Mr. Keene shrugged his shoulders as if to imply that post mortems were distasteful to him. He told that he was looking for a better chance to fight out a bitter fight to the judges, and won the post by a neck.

W. Fuller, the owner of Tokalon, is a Texan. He backed his mare heavily in the winter months, as well as in the spring, and when, indeed, he was himself in the ring. He had, indeed, won Mr. Fuller after Tokalon's victory that he did not go to the paddock at all to see the mare cool out. As he trains the mare himself this was a most unusual occurrence. The stable boys who rode Tokalon in the race were a happy lot. Mr. Fuller wanted to match Tokalon as a two-year-old against Alforten, but the race was abandoned because of the illness of George W. Arnold, which raced with much success on the Western tracks, but was killed in a railroad accident.

Dick Bedell, who rode Tokalon to victory, was too pleased after the race to know how he had won. He was riding right after the race, and was a ripple of applause. Proper led the way with stately stride, and the other horses followed in a line, and so on down to Snow King, which brought up the rear. They passed the Picket in single file, the bright silks of the riders lending much to the general scene. Some sixteenth of a mile the horses broke into a gallop and made their way to the start at the head of the stretch.

TWO EACH FOR MILLER AND RADTKE. Clever Jockeys Divide Riding Honors—Tokalon Paraded After Winning. Miller and Radtke divided the jockey honors, each riding two winners. Miller was first with Hoopla and Superman, while Radtke was first with Hoopla and Superman in the Brooklyn, and deserves all credit. He is not particularly well known in the East, but was considered a good jockey in the West.

After Tokalon had won the Brooklyn Handicap Bedell paraded her up almost to the head of the stretch and back again before dismounting, while the crowd along the track cheered and clapped. It was the crowd along the track that was not entirely appreciated, as usual, at the judges' stand. It was done at the order of the stewards, and is likely to meet with approval in future big races.

SUPERMAN A GOOD COLT.

Beats De Mund and W. H. Daniel in the Expectation Stakes. James R. Keene had the satisfaction of seeing his two-year-old colt Superman, by Commando-Anomaly, defeat the two high priced colts, De Mund and W. H. Daniel, in the Expectation Stakes at Gravesend yesterday. This race served as an added attraction to the Brooklyn Handicap and aroused more than usual interest, as it furnished the first meeting between De Mund, for which Paul J. Rainey paid $45,000 two weeks ago, and W. H. Daniel, which was sold last week to E. S. Burke, jr., for $55,000. There were two other starters, Superman and Senator Clay, the former starting for the first time.

De Mund was a strong favorite at odds on, as he had won his two races so easily that he was considered almost unbeatable. W. H. Daniel had a strong backing, however, at 11 to 5, while Miller's followers took Superman at 8 and 10 to 1. Senator Clay was neglected at 100 to 1. It was a pretty race. De Mund and W. H. Daniel raced head and head up the backstretch and around the turn, where both went wild, giving the watchful Miller a chance to save at least two lengths with Superman on the rail. This was for the Keene colt, for while De Mund, after he had succeeded in shaking off W. H. Daniel, fought on in gamine fashion, Superman caught him at the last sixteenth pole and, in a hard drive, won by a scant half length. Senator Clay closed strong and beat the fast tiring W. H. Daniel out for the card, Grande, Healsip and Golf Ball.

THE OTHER WINNERS were Lady Amelia, which galloped home an easy winner in the high weight handicap first on the card, Grande, Healsip and Golf Ball.

SOCIETY AT THE RACETRACK. Although the Brooklyn Handicap is famous among sporting men as one of the greatest races of the American turf, yet from a social point of view it is perhaps less popular than the Metropolitan or the Suburban, and while the Long Island set was well represented, yet there was no such gathering of the modish world as characterized the opening day at Belmont Park.

Chilly weather again interfered with the exhibition of summer finery, and wraps were welcome, and even furs were not disdained. Among the small number of women present were Mrs. Francis C. Bishop, Mrs. E. W. Burden and Miss Minnie Edinger, Miss Alice Halloway, Englewood, and Miss Ruth P. Fawcett, Englewood. Mrs. Charles T. Stout, Richmond County, and Mrs. J. P. Lefferts, Englewood, and Mrs. M. B. Barber, North Jersey. Mrs. J. P. Lefferts, Englewood, and Mrs. M. B. Barber, North Jersey. Mrs. J. P. Lefferts, Englewood, and Mrs. M. B. Barber, North Jersey.

Grande forced the pace and was winning easily when Consulio II challenged in last sixteenth, and Homer, on the first named, rode him out. Angler ran a fair race. Consulio II closed strong. Water Dog tired chasing.

OP RACE—THE EXPECTATION: For two-year-olds; $2,500 added; five furlongs. Start good. Won driving. Time, 1:30.2. Winner, ch. c. by Commando-Anomaly.

THIRD RACE—THE BROOKLYN HANDICAP: For three-year-olds and upward; value $20,000; one mile and a quarter. Start good. Won driving. Time, 2:07.3. Winner, ch. c. by Tammany-Kid.

OP RACE—SELLING: For three-year-olds; $1,000 added; about six furlongs. Start fair. Won easily. Time, 1:10.4. Winner, ch. c. by Phoebe-Pentecost II.

ON THE GOLF LINKS.

Good Field for Women's Metropolitan Championship Tournament. Several of the strongest players in the country are included in the entry received for the seventh annual championship tournament of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, which begins this morning over the links of the Englewood Golf Club. Mrs. Charles L. Tiffany, the secretary, sent out the entries and pairings last night. There are thirty-five names in all, representing a dozen clubs.

Mrs. Charles T. Stout, of the Richmond County Country Club, the present Metropolitan Golf Association and former national champion, has entered, as has Miss Georgianna Bishop, of the Brookline Country Club, another former national title holder. Other prominent ones are Mrs. E. F. Sanford, Mrs. M. D. Patterson, Miss Julia R. Mix, Mrs. S. F. Lefferts and Miss Elizabeth Hurry.

Englewood heads the list with nine entries. The Baltour Golf Club and Nassau Country Club have four, and the Apawamis Club three. All the championship play in this year's tournament will take place in the afternoon. The first play in the eighteen-hole medal play qualifying round is scheduled to drive off at 12:30 p. m.

A majority of the entrants were practicing on the course yesterday, and they are not confident of making low scores, as the playing will be along the links. The women's record over the long course is 95, held by Mrs. Lefferts, of the home club. The low score made by Mrs. Stout there last season, which was as follows: 120—Mrs. Richard Hackenschack, and Mrs. A. Cunningham, Englewood. 125—Mrs. Alice Halloway, Englewood, and Miss Ruth P. Fawcett, Englewood. 125—Mrs. Charles T. Stout, Richmond County, and Mrs. J. P. Lefferts, Englewood. 130—Mrs. J. P. Lefferts, Englewood, and Mrs. M. B. Barber, North Jersey. 130—Mrs. Myra D. Patterson, Baltour, and Miss Georgianna Bishop, Brookline. 135—Mrs. James E. Langley, Baltour, and Miss Berdona Graham, North Jersey. 140—Mrs. E. F. Burgess, jr., Wee Burn, and Mrs. B. P. Keenwood, Englewood. 145—Mrs. Frank Jones, Englewood, and Mrs. J. P. Lefferts, Englewood. 145—Miss Margaret Langley, Baltour, and Mrs. A. D. Patterson, Englewood. 150—Miss Elizabeth Hurry, Englewood, and Mrs. Gerald F. Murphy, Richmond County. 155—Mrs. Evelyn Lane, Richmond County.

Elberfeld's wild throw into the crowd in trying for a double play in the seventh inning, which allowed Sullivan and Dundon to cross the plate with what proved to be Chicago's winning runs, was responsible for the defeat of the Highlanders at American League Park yesterday by a score of 7 to 6.

The Highlanders used three pitchers in the game. Chesbro was relieved by Clarkson after the first inning, when he was hit freely for three runs. The latter was used, and after three of the four men who faced him in the sixth inning got their bases on balls he was hurried back to the bench and Griffith pitched the remainder of the game.

Jones started the fatal seventh with a single. He was forced by Sullivan. Tannehill walked, but as doubtless he made his wretched throw, that doomed his side to defeat, as Sullivan and Dundon raced home.

The Highlanders held the lead from the opening inning until the seventh. A combination of three singles, two bases on balls and a double steal in the fifth inning gave the visitors three runs and put them within one run of tying the score.
