Commissioner Smith proposes to adopt the system, so long practiced in foreign countries, especially Belgium, of having each patrolman accompanied at night by a trained dog, which will instinctively sniff trouble and give warning by barking. RETURN TO OLD SCHOOL.

Public School 31, in Broome street, was en fête yesterday morning to welcome back an "old boy" as principal, Israel Edwin Goldwasser, just fifteen years after his graduation. Mr. Goldwasser's friends, under the leadership of Leon Goldrich, took possession of the school for the occasion and decorated it beautifully with flowers, and with palms leading all the way up the stairs to the assembly room at the top. A galaxy of high educational officials, prominent in the city, was present, including the principal, and a delegation of City College, headed by President John H. Finley, presented a picture of the college to the school in honor of the occasion.

New Principal of No. 34 Was Once Pupil There.

The return of Mr. Goldwasser at the age of twenty-seven to his own school is a coincidence, but it was by his own desire that he was appointed to a position in that particular neighborhood. As he stood at the head of the eligible list of principals, his friends say that he could have had practically his choice of the vacant principalships in the system, but he wanted a downtown school, the "bigger and poorer" the better, because he thinks such a school offers a larger field to a prosperous up-town one.

WHAT THE SETTLEMENT NEEDS.

A Religion That Does Not Repel, Says Dr. Lyman Abbott.

Whether or not there should be any religion in Settlement work is a moot question, the answer to which depends somewhat, according to the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, on the character of the religion. "If our religion repels people," he said to the workers of the Gospel Settlement at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday afternoon, "the less we have of it the better. But I don't see why we can't carry the spirit of Christ into the Settlement, and without announcing or hiding it, show it in our lives in such a way as to offend neither the Jew, nor the apostate, nor the Roman Catholic. Some people think that they can do Christ's work better without using His name, but I don't see how they can do it at all. The main object of a Settlement is not merely to teach women to clean up their floors and boys to wash their hands. Its purpose is to inspire the people to seek to benefit to nobler lives, and there is only one thing that will do that, I think, a liberal Congregationalist and a radical Unitarian what they would say to a fallen brother who doubted his power to rise. They all, with one exception, gave practically the same answer. 'Christ was the first Settlement worker.' Dr. Abbott explained the answer to mean that to him among people who were poor and sinful and undeserving, that he might inspire them with His life, and that is what the social Settlement worker does."

THE TRIBUNE PATTERN.

Transferable Embroidery Designs, 10 by 15 Inches, for 10 Cents.

This cut is a small reproduction of an embroidery pattern 10 by 15 inches, which may be transferred to any material for embroidering by simply following the directions given below.

The picture frame will be most daintily transferred on white linen and worked in wash silks. Use two shades of pink for the petals, dots of yellow for the stamens, and two shades of green, one for leaves and stem. Work the scroll in a darker green or brown. Or, another pretty effect would be to use a yellow denim and make the roses yellow, with deep orange centres and leaves a brownish green.

The baby's boot is worked on white linen or denim with white mercerized cotton or wash silk; if the latter, boil for the flowers and green for leaves. Bend it around the foot, putting notch for heel. Bend it up the back. The whole to be buttonholed around the top. The small pieces are intended to fasten around the ankle and can be made any length to suit the ankle in a few seconds.

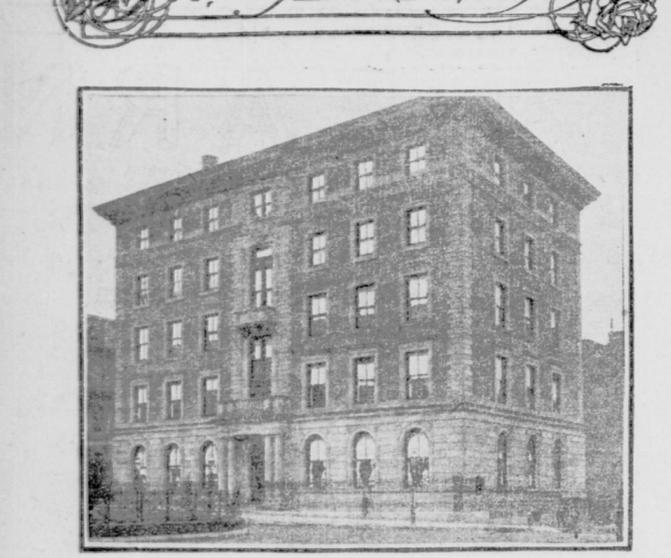

For the needle case the shape is outlined, and the flap that comes over is to be worked with the blue thread, not to be cut. Lay the material on a flat surface and press firmly, rubbing from the center to the edges with the fingers. Everything shown on the large sheet.

When you have finished the small pieces and have received the full size working pattern noted above, follow these directions:

Lay the material on which the transfer is to be made on a hard, smooth surface. Sponge the material with a damp cloth. The material should be damp, not to wet. Lay the pattern on the material and press firmly, rubbing from the center to the edges with the fingers. The transfer will be sufficiently plain in a few seconds. Do not let the pattern slip. Each pattern is good for several transfers.

The pattern will be sent to any address on receipt of 10 cents. Address: Pattern Department, New-York Tribune.

Worried About Home?

THE ANNA OTTENDORFER DISPENSARY.

16th Street and Park Avenue, which will be opened to-day.

NEW DISPENSARY.

The Anna Ottendorfer Dispensary, standing on Park Avenue between 75th and 77th streets, is to be opened at 3 o'clock, this afternoon. Among the speakers at the exercises will be Governor Hughes, Controller Metz, Patrick F. McGowan, Dr. Zinsler, president of the German-American Hospital, with which the dispensary is connected; Dr. Jacoby, and Dr. L. Feiser.

This new dispensary is indeed an improvement upon the old one of the same name. It is now thirty years since the Anna Ottendorfer Dispensary first began its work, in the old building on Second avenue, near 4th street. Time passed on; the founder, Mrs. Ottendorfer, died; and her children, Edward Uhl and Mrs. Charles F. Woerhschofer, resolved to erect a larger and more adequate dispensary in her honor. It was decided that, owing to the rapid growth of the population in the northern part of the city, the new dispensary would do better service if placed further uptown.

The old building was sold for $80,000, and $200,000 was added to this sum by Mrs. Woerhschofer and Mr. Uhl, so that the new building, with its fittings, cost nearly $300,000. It is said to be the best and most complete dispensary in the world. One of its admirable features is an immense roof garden, which is covered with glass, so that it can be used as a sun garden in winter, as well as a roof garden in summer.

The dispensary accommodates about one hundred thousand patients in the course of a year. It did not live to see the completion of the building, but Mrs. Woerhschofer is living and will be present at the dedication ceremony this afternoon.

Mrs. Ottendorfer is remembered as the founder of the Isabella Heimath, New York City, and the widow of her deceased daughter, Miss Isabella Heimath. After Mrs. Heimath's death the Isabella Heimath was enlarged and removed to a better locality by her husband, Oswald Ottendorfer, who, in 1865, bought the site on which the present "Heimath-Zeitung" is now published.

Notes of the Clubs.

Miss Ida Tarbell will lecture on "Intellectual Intercity" before the Women's Municipal League, on Wednesday, March 20, at 4 p. m., at the League's clubrooms, No. 10 East 25th street. Tickets may be had at No. 15 East 25th street, or of Mrs. Richard Aldrich, No. 31 West 70th street; Mrs. James M. Lawton, No. 37 Fifth avenue, or Miss Helen De Foyt Fox, No. 11 East 58th street.

The New York branch of the Dickens Fellowship will be celebrating a birthday party and reception in the studio of Helen Watson Phelps, at the Sherwood, 57th street and Broadway, where the fellowship was organized. The most striking feature of the celebration will be the appearance of twenty or more members of the organization in costumes representing the various characters in Dickens's novels.

The Colonial Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, Mrs. William H. Hotchkiss, regent, was entertained on Monday by Mrs. Henry D. Williams, of No. 141 West 124th street. A most business session was held at which Miss Jessie Mook, the treasurer for several years, received the gift of a diamond pin in appreciation of her work for the chapter. The presentation speech was made by Mrs. Henry N. Bickard. Mrs. Alfred Hill sang several songs; a paper on "Lafayette" was read by Mrs. Nathaniel S. Sherman, and a recitation given by Miss Edith Williams. Among the guests were Mrs. D. Phoenix Ingraham, president general; Mrs. Joseph J. Casey, registrar general; Mrs. Howard A. Clark, 2nd vice regent; Mrs. Zeb Mayhew, recording secretary, of New York; Miss Julia Leland, corresponding secretary of New York; Miss Katherine J. C. Carville, regent of the Huguenot Chapter, and Mrs. Peter Williams, secretary of the chapter. The affair was given on Friday, April 12, at the Hotel Marie Antoinette.

A meeting of the board of managers of the Daughters of the Revolution of the State of New York, Mrs. John Howard Abel, regent, was held

Seen in the Shops.

As the buds upon a rose tree burst into blossom one after another, so the city shops one by one have their Easter blossom. And the comparison may extend even further, for in the present season the colors, at least, rival nature. It would seem that never before have the makers of artificial flowers succeeded in producing such wondrous tints as blossom now upon Broadway.

One window is a study in variations of the mushroom shape, all worked out in different color schemes that make a delightful eye. One that is pink hair braid, made into a symphony by the massing of immense rich roses ranging from pink to deepest Bordeaux. Another is of silver gray, with splendid orchids, while still another, gray, golden brown trimmed with flowers in all the rich tones of this color.

The little garment which the dressmakers call a cape, but which bears in reality no more resemblance to the regulation cape than a ball gown to a wrapper, bids fair to have a great run this season. It would be more accurately named if called a "sleeved bolero."

The new sleeveless jackets are indeed graceful and not lacking in variety. One of the handsomest, shown in a Fifth avenue window, is made of natural pongee, accented pleated completely from shoulder to hem with a two-inch apology for a sleeve attached to the armhole by brown silk braid ornaments.

The sleeveless jacket and its antithesis, the so-called cape with sleeves, will each prove of great value to the woman who wishes to give an up-to-date touch to a last year's gown, for it so happens that the day's fashion of any suitable material quite regardless of an attempt to match the gown.

Skirts are being trimmed more and more, and in the greatest variety of ways. One newly imported model has two pointed bands of velvet rising from hem to knees in front, which are met by two rows of huge buttons reaching to the waist. This is an extreme style, which will not be adopted by the well dressed woman.

Among the multitudinous items for skirt trimmings are braiding, buttons, ruching, bands of striped goods—used lengthwise, crosswise or bias—and bands of polka dots.

Striped material is also fashionable, and the notion of using the same goods as trimming is gaining ground. Sometimes these stripes are applied in three ways on the same gown—in vertical, horizontal and bias stripes.

Almost every possible kind of sleeve is being worn, and, like the skirt, is much more trimmed than formerly. The short sleeve continues to hold its own, despite repeated alarms as to its demise. Comfort and convenience will insure its popularity for some time yet, undoubtedly.

There is apparently never to be an end to the brown pony coats. They are becoming monotonous. The only trimming favored for them seems to be bands of self material in sunder effect.

The linen departments are showing beautiful hand-worked neckwear in wide turnover collars with cuffs to match, as well as in the straight stocks. Some of the eyelid and blind embroideries show especially fine needlework.

The rage for pleated skirts will be short-lived. Pleating is not practical enough to be a lasting feature. Especially is this true of accordion pleating, which, while once its glory has departed, becomes a sorry spectacle indeed.

The jumper waist is a strong favorite. It is an ideal device to give tone to a garment that is past its pristine freshness, and when made of lace it gives an air of elegance to an otherwise simple costume.

A modified Gibson effect of pleats over the shoulders of shirt waists is considerably used this season.

Wide silk Hercules braid in divers colors continues its popularity as a general trimming for all kinds of coats.
