

ERIN'S BEST KNIGHT.

Sir Horace Plunkett a Raunching Chum of the President.

Rulers of great nations, no matter whether they enjoy their office by right of inheritance or by popular election, are always obliged to exercise a considerable amount of circumspection in the choice of those foreigners to whom they accord the confidence of close personal friendship.

Among the foreigners who stand nearest to President Roosevelt, for instance, and who occupy the highest place in his affection and regard, is Sir Horace Plunkett, who, although by birth and by political affiliations a Conservative, is nevertheless so universally beloved by those who have at heart the welfare and happiness of the Emerald Isle that even so vigorous a champion of the Union as the late President has many times on occasion declared that in years to come, when Horace Plunkett is gathered to his fathers, his grave in Erin will always be kept green and adorned with flowers, and will become a shrine of pilgrimage on the part of Irishmen from all quarters of the world.

The friendship between the President and Sir Horace Plunkett is a friendship of the most intimate kind. It is a friendship that has stood the test of time, and has been a source of mutual benefit to both parties.

His principal title to fame, however, is the splendid work which he has done toward relieving the distress in Ireland and to improve the economic situation of the island. Turning to good account the knowledge of agriculture which he obtained in America, he has introduced into Ireland the potato and the Jesuit Father Finley, the Irish Agricultural Association, for the purpose of promoting agricultural co-operation and of teaching its benefits to the small Irish farmer.

His principal title to fame, however, is the splendid work which he has done toward relieving the distress in Ireland and to improve the economic situation of the island. Turning to good account the knowledge of agriculture which he obtained in America, he has introduced into Ireland the potato and the Jesuit Father Finley, the Irish Agricultural Association, for the purpose of promoting agricultural co-operation and of teaching its benefits to the small Irish farmer.

THE TRIBUNE'S 66TH BIRTHDAY.

Congratulations from Long-Time Readers. To the Editor of the Tribune. Sir: I send you hearty birthday greetings and congratulations from my mother.

There has been a number of complimentary tributes to the Tribune's 66th birthday, and it is a pleasure to receive them.

There has been a number of complimentary tributes to the Tribune's 66th birthday, and it is a pleasure to receive them.

There has been a number of complimentary tributes to the Tribune's 66th birthday, and it is a pleasure to receive them.

There has been a number of complimentary tributes to the Tribune's 66th birthday, and it is a pleasure to receive them.

There has been a number of complimentary tributes to the Tribune's 66th birthday, and it is a pleasure to receive them.

There has been a number of complimentary tributes to the Tribune's 66th birthday, and it is a pleasure to receive them.

There has been a number of complimentary tributes to the Tribune's 66th birthday, and it is a pleasure to receive them.

There has been a number of complimentary tributes to the Tribune's 66th birthday, and it is a pleasure to receive them.

THE DRAMA.

A SAIR GREETING.

Mr. "Ben" Greet, the renowned Shakespearean showman, is again distinguished, and, apparently, this time, with the old affliction that so often befalls vain persons whom the cold and cruel world will not accept at their own tremendous valuation of their importance.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion. The latter is a massive building, in the Tudor style, built on the site of an ancient Saxon castle, of which the foundations and some of the walls remain, and that belonged to the noble house of Stourton from the reign of King Richard II until that of George I, when it was purchased by the Hoares, who built the present structure.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

THE DRAMA.

A SAIR GREETING.

Mr. "Ben" Greet, the renowned Shakespearean showman, is again distinguished, and, apparently, this time, with the old affliction that so often befalls vain persons whom the cold and cruel world will not accept at their own tremendous valuation of their importance.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

THE DRAMA.

A SAIR GREETING.

Mr. "Ben" Greet, the renowned Shakespearean showman, is again distinguished, and, apparently, this time, with the old affliction that so often befalls vain persons whom the cold and cruel world will not accept at their own tremendous valuation of their importance.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

OBITUARY.

GENERAL EUGENE GRIFFIN.

Schenectady, N. Y., April 11.—General Eugene Griffin, first vice-president and manager of the sales department of the General Electric Company, died at his apartments in the Mohawk Club without recovering consciousness from a stroke of apoplexy with which he was stricken shortly before.

General Griffin was born in Schenectady, N. Y., April 11, 1852. He was a member of the General Electric Company, and was one of its most prominent and successful executives.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

General Griffin was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

PUBLIC REQUESTS OF $1,500,000.

To Be Distributed in Consequence of Death of Sister of Decedent.

[By Telegram to The Tribune.] Boston, April 11.—A million and a half in public bequests are to be distributed as the result of the death in Salem, this morning, of Mrs. Eliza O'Connell, of No. 218 Essex street, to whom was left the estate of her sister, Mary P. O'Connell, who died on September 29, 1902. The estate has been held in trust until the former's death, when, according to the will, it was to be divided in public bequests.

MRS. LESLIE CARTER ROBBED. Jewels Stolen from Private Car During Theatrical Performance in Atlanta.

[By Telegram to The Tribune.] Atlanta, April 11.—Mrs. Leslie Carter suffered a loss recently, presumably while she was appearing at a musical at the Grand Theatre. Her private car, Halmore, was stolen, and she was despoiled at the terminal station and what few trinkets and valuables Mrs. Carter did not wear as Du Barry were carried away.

Death notices appearing in THE TRIBUNE will be published in The Tri-Weekly Tribune without extra charge.

Barbelle, Sarah L. Mueson, Violet B. Canfield, Mary A. Robinson, Mary P. Barie, Margaret D. Taylor, Richard H. Griffin, Eugene.

BARBELLE—On April 10, 1907, after a brief illness, Sarah Louisa, wife of Archibald Barbelle, of New York, died at her residence, No. 335 Jefferson avenue, Elizabeth, N. J., on Saturday, April 10, 1907.

CANFIELD—At the family home, in Arlington, Va., on Monday, April 8, aged 79, Mary A. Canfield, aunt and foster-mother of James H. Canfield, of this city.

EARLE—Margaret, widow of the late Justus E. Earle, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. A. E. Herring, on Metuchen, N. J., of pneumonia. Funeral private, on Friday, April 12, at 12 o'clock.

GRIFFIN—Eugene Griffin, brigadier general United States Volunteers, suddenly at Schenectady, April 10, 1907, after a brief illness, died at his residence, No. 335 Jefferson avenue, Elizabeth, N. J., on Saturday, April 10, 1907.

MURSON—At Westwood, N. J., on April 9, 1907, Violet B. Mueson, beloved wife of James Mueson, jr., of Westwood, N. J., died at her residence, No. 335 Jefferson avenue, Elizabeth, N. J., on Saturday, April 10, 1907.

ROBINSON—Suddenly, at her home, No. 86 West 124th street, New York City, on Friday, April 12, 1907, died at her residence, No. 124th street, New York City, on Friday, April 12, 1907.

SMITH—At Green Cove Springs, Florida, Henry Albro Smith, of Bedford Station, N. Y., died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. A. E. Herring, on Metuchen, N. J., on Friday, April 12, 1907.

TAYLOR—Suddenly, on Wednesday, Richard Henry Taylor, of New York City, died at his residence, No. 124th street, New York City, on Friday, April 12, 1907.

THE WOODLAWN CEMETERY. Is readily accessible by Harlem train from Grand Central Station, and by the New York and Westchester Railway from the Grand Central Station.

Special Notices. POSTAL INFORMATION, REGARDING INCOMING AND OUTGOING MAILS, WILL BE FOUND WITH THE SHIPPING NEWS ON PAGE 8.

Traverse Subscription Rates. THE TRIBUNE will be sent by mail to any address in the country. It is sent by express to all other countries.

MAIN OFFICE—No. 154 Nassau street. WALL STREET OFFICE—No. 15 William street. UPTOWN OFFICE—No. 127 East 125th street, 2nd floor.

THE TRIBUNE'S 66TH BIRTHDAY. There has been a number of complimentary tributes to the Tribune's 66th birthday, and it is a pleasure to receive them.

J. WADSWORTH RITCHIE'S ENGLISH BRIDE.

His daughter, who was married to J. Wadsworth Ritchie, of New York, took place yesterday in England, is one of the Hoares of Anna-belle, County Cork. The Hoares of Anna-belle are descended from one of the officers of Cromwell's army, who settled in Ireland, securing extensive tracts of land from the government. Originally, I believe, they came from Kent. Early in the eighteenth century, having meanwhile become Quakers, they transferred the headquarters of their family to London, where they established themselves as bankers. It was at the sign of "The Leather Bottle" that this sort of date from the time when London streets were still unnumbered and when the leading bankers and merchants had their distinguishing signs, some of the older established of them still retaining these signs as an indication of the age of their firm. The Hoare family likewise embarked in banking, and between this and banking it succeeded in amassing a fortune which, through the efforts of the late Sir Henry Hoare, Sir Samuel Hoare and Sir Sidney Hoare, respectively.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of the oldest baronetcy, created in 1786, is, of course, Sir Henry Hoare, of Stourhead. Stourhead is a magnificent place in Wiltshire, and, although partly destroyed by fire some years ago, has now been restored, in keeping with the original designs of the mansion.

The chief of the family and the holder of