

MAY ARREST ANOTHER "INTERNATIONAL" MAN.

Insurance Ballot Investigation Brings in "Man Higher Up."

District Attorney Jerome, it was rumored in the Criminal Courts Building yesterday, is seeking evidence against a "man higher up" in the management of the international committee...

This man who, according to the rumor, possesses wealth, brains and no little influence in the community, has received intimations within the last few days of the District Attorney's search for evidence against him...

Not before, at the trial of the three men expected for next week the District Attorney's office...

The evidence in the case now in Mr. Jerome's possession includes several documents, it is said, tending to show that Mr. Scragham in his correspondence with certain policyholders...

POLYHOLDS ASKED INFORMATION.

Correspondence in one such alleged case came into a Tribune reporter's hands yesterday in the form of a letter from a New York Life policyholder in the Oranges to Mr. Scragham...

After a careful reading of the law governing the election of directors for the New York Life Insurance Company, I am convinced that those policyholders who choose to vote by ballot...

I read in the newspapers about ten days ago the statement of your general manager, Mr. Scragham, to the effect that 25 per cent of the ballots received by your committee did not comply with the requirements of the law...

In view of your apparent action it is not strange that the insurance office of this state, in a letter addressed to a policyholder which I have read, states that your action...

According to the correspondence, on December 6 Mr. Scragham wrote the following reply:

Replying to your esteemed favor of the 5th inst., I am correct in noting the New York Insurance law as follows: "Such envelope containing the ballot, sealed and postpaid, may be mailed by the policyholder at his home office or at the home office of the company..."

The entire law was carefully gone over with Messrs. Olney, Tracy, Parker, Gray and myself, and we are operating under their construction of these statutes, and no policyholder has been disfranchised...

This is all the men cited by Mr. Scragham in his "ballot opening" letter had cognizance of the practices which the three arrests were based, was indicated by the visit of one of them to the scene of the New York Life canvass...

CONTROL OF DOMINGO.

Treaty Ratified—Way Clear to Settle Republic's Debts.

Santo Domingo, May 3.—The new treaty between the United States and Santo Domingo, intended to replace the treaty which has been pending before the United States Senate for the last two years, was ratified by the Dominican Congress to-day.

The Dominican treaty marks a new departure in the relations of the United States with the smaller republics of the Western Hemisphere...

The treaty really had its birth in a revolution. While the American government was pressing a settlement of the claims of its citizens against Santo Domingo in December, 1904, President Morales, being beset by revolutionists...

The modus vivendi, however, resulted beneficially, as far as the Dominican Republic was concerned, not only did it lead to the deposit in New York of $300,000, which will now be placed to the credit of the Dominican government...

The substance of the modus vivendi, in the shape of a treaty, was pending before the United States Senate when Secretary Root assumed office...

The new treaty recites in its protocol this agreement and the stipulations for the settlement of the debt. It provides in its first article for the appointment by the President of the United States of a receiver of customs...

GUATEMALAN APOLOGY.

Part of Mexican Demand Met—To Refuse Demand for Lima.

Mexico City, May 3.—Guatemala has apologized to the Mexican government for insinuating that the Mexican Legation at Guatemala City was harboring the men who are suspected of attempting to assassinate President Cabrera...

Guatemala "El Diario" will say: "We have been officially advised that Guatemala will refuse Mexico's request for the extradition of General José Lima, charged with complicity in the assassination of General Barrillas..."

WILCOX ESTATE TO COUSINS.

Railroad President's Property, Valued at $1,100,000, Goes to Mother's Relatives.

So far as known, the family relatives present at the funeral were William G. Wilcox and Professor Walter G. Wilcox, of Cornell University, cousins; Mrs. John Duer, a cousin, and Miss Elizabeth Stewart Hamilton, a niece...

JACKSON HAS DEPUTY.

NAMES R. B. MAILANY.

Attacked Mayor for Naming Specials, but Does It Himself.

Attorney General Jackson, who the first week in January discovered that was a great political crime for his predecessor, Julius Mayer, to spend the state's money for special counsel...

Despite the fact that he has regular deputies, among them "Jimmy" Donnelly, formerly of W. Bourke Cockran's office, to take care of local business, Mr. Jackson has designated Congressman Rowland Blennerhassett, Mahany, of Buffalo, as special counsel...

In the good old Hill days, the Attorney General and State Controller found it convenient to scatter money around the state in banks controlled by Democratic politicians...

Rowland Blennerhassett Mahany has made various visits to the City Chamberlain's office in quest of the funds. City Chamberlain Keenan and his deputy, John H. Campbell, have told him to get a court order first...

Rowland Blennerhassett Mahany once represented a Buffalo district as a Republican in the House of Representatives. Then he quarrelled with the Republican leaders and became a rampant "friend of the people"...

Mr. Mayer's employment of special counsel was, in the judgment of the present Attorney General, a "gross misuse of official power"...

TREAT PROCTER HERE.

HAS CASE OF RABIES.

Cincinnati Soap Man Has Been at Hotel in Secret for Three Days.

William Cooper Procter, president of the Procter & Gamble Soap Company, of Cincinnati, whose father, William A. Procter, committed suicide on March 29, has been in this city for three days suffering from rabies...

Mr. Procter, who is a dog fancier and who owns one of the finest kennels in Ohio, was bitten several days ago on the right hand while separating two of his favorite animals which were engaged in a fight...

These doctors found that Mr. Procter's right hand was bitten in five places and that the teeth of the animals had penetrated deep into the bones...

Dr. Poor said last night that, although Mr. Procter had shown no violent symptoms of hydrophobia up to the present time, he was not yet entirely out of danger...

Dr. Procter said last night that the fact that Mr. Procter was not suffering any pain was a good sign, and that he might recover without any serious results...

Since Mr. Procter has been here not even his most intimate friends have known of it. He especially desired to have the matter kept quiet. The Procter homestead is in the suburb of Glendale...

NO NEW STATEMENT.

President Has No Plan to Reaffirm Pledge Against Third Term.

Washington, May 3.—If another statement from President Roosevelt declaring his attitude toward the third term movement is to be issued from the White House in the near future, neither the President himself nor Secretary Loeb has any knowledge of it...

"The President has no idea whatever of issuing such a statement," said a high official of the administration. "What is the necessity of doing so, anyway? If the President were to do so every sixty days the result would be the same..."

There would be some well meaning gentlemen who would nod their heads wisely and exclaim: "Ah, yes, the President said sixty days ago that he stood upon the declaration he made on the night of last election. But that was sixty days ago. What does he think now? What does he say about it now? And if the President doesn't issue another declaration for their special benefit, it will be proof positive to them that he has changed his mind..."

GOVERNOR AT ELIMRA.

FLAYS MR. STANCHFIELD.

Defends Utilities Bill Against Attack of Attorney.

Elimra, N. Y., May 3.—Governor Hughes and party had a strenuous afternoon and evening in Elimra. The programme included four receptions, a dinner, an automobile ride and a big meeting at the Lyceum Theatre...

After pointing out many alleged defects in the public utilities bill, Mr. Stanchfield took occasion to say that he was not present with a retainer in his pocket. He spoke simply as an individual. The Governor, after preliminary words of introduction, said:

Now I did not come here to-night to join in a debate. (Applause.) It is entirely true that I proposed to say some things in regard to the very measure of which my friend Mr. Stanchfield has spoken so eloquently. I am here, any less, but perhaps something more. In distinction from my learned friend, I am here under a retainer. (Applause.) I am here, retained by the people of the state of New York, to see that justice is done, and with no disposition to injure any investment, with every desire to give the fullest opportunity to enterprise and with every purpose to shield and protect every just property interest...

Now, I am fully conscious, as is every one who professes to have a modicum of intelligence, of the tremendous advantages which the country and the people of this state stand to gain from the extension of our railroad facilities.

Greater facilities needed. They are the arteries of commerce; our communities would be lifeless; our trade would collapse; we would all be worse than dead were it not for these arteries of communication and these facilities of transportation. We know all that has been done in a just effort to make these possible. We want more; we want extensions; we want more facilities of communication and every opportunity afforded to enable the people to remove their produce, and we want fair treatment to those who are engaged in this very necessary and profitable business.

Yet, it is said that despite the prosperity of the country and the great benefits that have been derived from the extension of our transportation facilities, there is a general feeling of discontent throughout the country. Why? Is it because of extension of means of communication? Will any one suggest to an intelligent audience that American citizens are in revolt against their own prosperity? What they revolt against is dishonest finance. (Applause.)

What they are in rebellion against is favoritism which gives a chance to one man to move his goods and not to another, which gives one man one set of terms and another set to his rival, which makes one man rich by giving him the chance to do so, while another man is driven into bankruptcy or into combination with his more successful competitors. It is a revolt against all the influences which have grown out of an unbusinesslike freedom of finance...

URGES POWER OF REMOVAL.

The Governor said he did not believe the resolutions adopted voiced the sentiment of the business men. In urging the centering of responsibility in the Governor, with the power of appointment and removal, he cited the Kelsey case as one reason why this power should be given. Continuing, he said:

Eighteen months ago the country was shocked by the revelations made in connection with the insurance investigation. Those in whom the greatest confidence had been reposed, men of the highest standing in the community, were found to have betrayed their trust, and hundreds of thousands of policyholders through the state found that their interests had been disregarded. Vast funds collected by means of a false and sacred obligation upon directors and executive officers, had been used for improper and corrupt purposes. Accounts had been manipulated and improper methods of accounting resorted to in order to conceal extravagance and corruption.

Yet all this was done in a business under state control. All these transactions were conducted above a department of the state which professed to have subjected the companies engaged therein to the most rigid examination. The state held them forth accredited to the world as models of honest enterprise.

What a farce it was! How every citizen of New York felt the stigma that had been placed upon his citizenship by such abuses of public confidence! How every citizen of New York felt the stigma that had been placed upon his citizenship by such abuses of public confidence! How every citizen of New York felt the stigma that had been placed upon his citizenship by such abuses of public confidence!

Let seven or eight months after the enactment of the laws which resulted from this investigation, when I assumed office, I found the Insurance Department in substantially the same condition in which it was at the time of the investigation. Those who had been grossly delinquent in their duty and through whose neglect or connivance alone the abuses which I have referred to had been made possible, were still named in relations of trust and confidence and were regarded as suitable channels for the information in accordance with which the state authority was to be exercised.

The people of the state knew and approved the grounds of the recommendation. They still believed and approved the recommendation, and had a right to expect that I would endeavor to have the Insurance Department put upon a basis which would command the confidence of the policyholders of the state and of the United States, and there was no personal question involved. The transaction of the business of a great department of a state should transcend all personal considerations.

And it is minimal to honest and proper administration that when such a condition exists there should be a lack of executive power to bring administration methods up to the standards demanded by the people.

I believe that the time has come when the people will hold their officers more strictly to account for the manner in which they perform their duties and represent their constituencies, and that along with this increased sense of responsibility there will be a willingness to repose in their chosen representatives such power as will enable them to discharge their public trusts. There was an important matter of reorganization of this state. Let it be considered fairly. Let the people of the state be divided into districts in accordance with their constitution. This important question of administering the departments of the state and of representing the people of the state is not to be made a matter of political maneuvering.
