

NEW-YORK LIFE NEXT.

Grand Jury to Investigate Charges of Election Fraud.

The June grand jury will investigate this week or the week following the charges of forgery in the insurance election against a representative or representatives of the international committee, according to a semi-official announcement made yesterday.

Inquiries in the Criminal Courts Building within the last forty-eight hours show that the District Attorney's office has this still under consideration.

From indications the issuance of a "certificate of election results" by the New York Life inspectors may proceed immediately the grand jury's investigation.

The official statement of the New York Life votes as canvassed by the inspectors up to May 15, and which is here published for the first time, is as follows:

TO PLAN USE OF GIFT FOR NEGROES.

Trustees of Miss Jeanes's $1,000,000 Fund Favor Self-Help Scheme.

The trustees of the Fund for Ruminantary Schools for Southern Negroes, which was incorporated in Albany on Friday to administer the $1,000,000 given for that work by Miss Anna T. Jeanes, of Philadelphia, will hold an organization meeting on Thursday.

This board was named, under the terms of the gift, by H. D. Frissell, head of the Hampton Institute, and Booker T. Washington of Tuskegee Institute, who are looked upon as the best qualified statesmen in the South to deal with the education of the negroes there.

In the deed of gift Miss Jeanes directed that the board should apply the income of the fund "solely toward the maintenance and assistance of rural, county and country schools for the Southern negroes and to such other educational and social betterment, which shall promote peace in the land and good will among men."

OBITUARY.

THE CAREER OF KARL BLIND.

Word comes by cable from London of the death of Karl Blind, at his long-time home in the suburb of Hampstead. There is something almost inconceivable in the added statement that the end was "peaceful" of this distinguished career.

The bride was given away by her son, William H. Gelsheben. Her two daughters, Miss Madeline Gelsheben and Miss R. Corinne Gelsheben, were her bridesmaids. There were no ushers. The wedding was followed by a dinner served at eighteen tables, at which about one hundred guests were seated.

Dr. Gamage took charge of St. Paul's under the most discouraging circumstances. Through his friendly and anxious efforts, high ambition for the future of the school and broad minded and intelligent supervision, he has plotted the school until an opportunity has been afforded to reorganize and disperse into the haven of good repute and public confidence.

FIRST SO HONORED.

Miss Guinan, of Middletown, N. Y., Is Modest Withal.

Middletown, N. Y., June 1 (Special).—Although she is the first woman in the United States to receive a medal from the government for bravery, in risking her own life to save another, Miss Mary Guinan, of this city, was apparently not in the least perturbed when the news came to her to-day. She has been employed in the Millen & Alkenhead shirt factory here for the last eighteen years. She is about forty years old, and with a sister is the sole support of an aged and infirm mother and a little nephew and niece.

On December 19 last, when Miss Guinan was returning from her work at the shirt factory, she saw John C. Runyon, an aged grocery merchant of this city, standing on the Erie Railroad tracks, at Montgomery street, waiting for a train to pass. The train was going west, and Mr. Runyon did not see the eastbound train approaching. Miss Guinan saw the old man's danger, and stooping under the gates pushed the aged merchant off the eastbound track as the train rushed past. The two were then in a space of less than three feet, with a train rushing past at high speed on each side. Miss Guinan held the old man firmly until one of the trains passed, and then assisted him to the sidewalk.

Miss Guinan went home without giving her name, and told no one about the incident. One of the spectators of the incident followed her and on inquiry learned that a Mrs. Mary Gorman lived in the house Miss Guinan was seen to enter. Owing to the similarity of names, Mrs. Gorman received all the credit for the daring act, and though Miss Guinan requested her to say nothing about it, she finally made the fact public that Miss Guinan was the rescuer of Mr. Runyon.

The story was published in the New York papers, and copied in the Washington papers. Secretary E. A. Moseley, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, saw the account of the incident, and communicated with Miss Guinan. He was followed by a visit to the woman from the Interstate Commerce Commission. These men secured the testimony of nine witnesses to the incident, and submitted it to the commission. This was followed by the awarding of the bronze medal to Miss Guinan on Friday, which was accompanied by a letter signed by President Roosevelt, which appeared in to-day's Tribune.

Miss Guinan was seen by the correspondent of the Tribune this afternoon at the Millen & Alkenhead shirt factory. She had not yet received the letter nor medal from President Roosevelt, and was greatly pleased when informed that she had been awarded the medal. "I did not think I would get it," she said, "for I had not heard anything about it for a long time."

When asked how she came to risk her life to save Mr. Runyon she replied: "I did not think anything about it. I saw him standing on the track and that he was going to be struck by the train, and I could not reach him in time to get him off the track. I would push him in between the two trains and hold him until one of them went by."

Miss Guinan said that while between the two trains she was much frightened, but held the old man tightly to her expecting every moment that they would be struck by the cars. As soon as the train went by she hurried the old man across the track and then went home and forgot all about the incident.

Friends of the woman are now anxious that the incident should be brought to the attention of the Carnegie Endowment for the Peace, and hope that they will investigate the matter and make her a money award, which would help her in the support of her mother and nephew and niece.

Miss Guinan is so modest that she has so far refused to allow her picture to be taken, refusing point blank when asked to do so to-day. Though hundreds of cases of alleged bravery have been investigated by the Interstate Commerce Commission since the law went into effect only five of these medals have so far been awarded, Miss Guinan being the first woman to receive one.

FIFTY YEARS IN CITY'S SERVICE.
