BROOKLYN NEWS

GOSSIP OF THE BOROUGH

BROOKLYN SOCIAL CHAT

Michael J. Dady Now in Line with Mr. Woodruff.

Michael J. Dady, the rival of State Chairman Woodruff for the leadership of the Republican organization of Kings County, has fallen in line with Mr. Woodruff, and a couple of nights ago his district, the 1st Assembly, passed, through its committee a resolution endorsing the administration of President Roosevelt and also the candidacy of Governor Hughes. Not many weeks ago Dady announced while at Washington that, although he had at one time been for Hughes, he had turned against him. He was not, he said, for any man who was not for himself. Since then there have been great changes. Whether it was the announcement by the Governor that he was for himself or whether it was the agreement to stand together which he made with Woodruff before the county convention last fall that influenced Dady to change his mind, no one seems to know exactly.

Weddings, Engagements and Announcements of the Borough.

The marriage of Miss Lucille Macdonald and William Parsons Sloovich, of Henry street, will be celebrated in the quietest manner possible on Wednesday, February 25. The ceremony will take place in St. John's Chapel, Manhattan, with only relatives in attendance. No invitations have been issued nor will any announcement cards be sent out. Miss Macdonald is the daughter of M. M. Macdonald, of Dubuque, Iowa.

Tuesday, March 24, is the date set for the wedding of Miss Florence Frothingham Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Frothingham Smith, of No. 28 Henry street, and Walter Herman Koehn. It is to be a home ceremony at 4:30 o'clock. Mrs. Alfred Nicolovius, of Westfield, N. J., will be her sister's matron of honor, and Miss Helen Whitney Smith and Miss Nina Gauntlett, of Hiaeca, are to be the bridesmaids.

Mrs. Mary Field Bates was quietly married to William Dixon Spalding on Wednesday afternoon at her home, No. 64 Remsen street. The Rev. Edwin H. Bryington officiated.

Tuesday, March 3, is the date set for the wedding of Miss Isabelle Jennings Bush and Robert Reed Lasher, son of the late Hazard Lasher, of Flatbush. Only relatives and a few intimate friends will witness the ceremony, which is to take place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. George Bush, No. 88 Quincey street. Miss Henrietta Bush will be the maid of honor. Guy L. Harrington is to be the best man and Hazard Lasher and Frank W. Lovejoy will act as ushers.

The marriage of Miss Florence Estelle Johnson and Harold Le Grand Boyer, of Grinnell, Iowa, will take place on Saturday at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Edward Johnson, No. 88 Carroll street. As Miss Johnson is still in mourning for her father, the wedding will be exceedingly quiet.

Miss Blanche Denevere Smith and Samuel John Badracco were quietly married on Monday at the Church of the Transfiguration. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Frank Porter Quibby, of the St. George, where Mr. and Mrs. Badracco will also make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Whitlock, of No. 64 Putnam avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Florence Whitlock, to Albert Ross Clement, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Clement, of No. 22 Halsey street.

MORTON CLUB'S HOME. Brooklyn Republican Organization Moves to New Building.

The Levi P. Morton Club, the regular Republican organization of the 24th Assembly District, has set up its headquarters in a new home, a large frame building at Stuyvesant avenue and Decatur street. The club began life as a small and poor organization in a store at the time that Mr. Morton, after whom it was named, was running for Governor, in 1891. Now it is the most powerful organization of its section and one of the leading Republican clubs of the borough.

Ex-Alderman John Wirth, Robert A. Sharkey's lieutenant, is president. He and his organization supported Sharkey, who is the leader of the district, in his fight with the opposition at the fall primaries. The opposition was backed by the regular Republican organization of the county. Sharkey held his place as leader on a plank that was made up of the principles of Governor Hughes. The fight culminated at the county convention. When Sharkey introduced a resolution as a substitute for one introduced by State Chairman Woodruff, both indorsed Hughes, but Sharkey was worded more strongly than Woodruff's. Sharkey was defeated, but he and Woodruff soon made up and are now working in harmony. Under Sharkey's leadership the Morton club was one of the first organizations of Brooklyn to pass resolutions indorsing Hughes for the Presidency.

OPERATING ON PETS.

Chloroform Gladly Paid For by Most Owners.

"The number of operations performed on dogs, cats and horses is increasing every year," said the veterinary, as he deftly extracted a tiny chicken bone from the throat of a squirming fox terrier. "The notion that an animal should be shot or chloroformed out of existence the minute it becomes severely injured is now considered old-fashioned. The rapid advance in animal surgery has made many difficult operations possible, and the discovery that an anesthetic may be easily administered to cats and dogs has done away with any necessity for torturing the animals.

"The operations on dogs are for all sorts of strange things. Removing tumors is a very common one, these swellings coming most often in the glands of the neck. One of my dog patients was suffering intensely from a growth in his intestine, I operated and took out a stick six inches long which had swallowed at some time or other. A valuable but foolish little cocker spaniel had swallowed a rubber ball. I removed it, but the little fellow had been brought to me too late, and poisoning of the stomach had set in, so I could not save its life.

"A splendid hunting dog was brought to me last fall which had run a stick into its abdomen while jumping a fence. A Scotch collie was brought here one day with a gangrenous sore on one of its toes. I had to cut off its foot to save more serious trouble, and the animal hobbles around and enjoys life as much as ever. I had a hurry call once to a mongrel but beloved dog in the country. The animal had got in front of a mowing machine, and its legs were fearfully cut. One of the legs was nearly severed almost up to the body, and I finished the job. Now it goes blithely about on three legs and is one of the sights of the town. "Of course, clipping the ears and cutting the tail could hardly be regarded as operations, but few humane veterinarians perform them nowadays without first administering ether or chloroform, for the cutting process is extremely painful to dogs. They often cause trouble afterward by scratching or licking the wounded places, and in fact, that is the greatest difficulty in operating on dogs. They scratch or lick off bandage after bandage, and will keep fussing with themselves afterward, and will him up here because she couldn't stand his clownish ways. When he gets sense I'll send him back to her.

"The English bull terrier has a high fever, and she'll snap if you go near her. Just look at her burning, wild eyes. I expect I'm going to get bitten before I get her well. That pointer is simply suffering from wounded pride. I had to put an evil smelling wash on him to save his sleek coat, and he has taken it as a personal insult. He has been standing like that, with his head drooping to the floor, for the last hour, and I don't suppose he'll chirp up until the last trace of the odor disappears. "I'm sorry for that little spaniel of the dog, for she's grieving herself to death with homesickness. I'm only going to give her a little treatment and send her home, for she'll never get well here. Stop your noise!" continued the veterinary, yelling at a setter. "That animal has been howling and rising since three days, and there's little the matter with him but a disagreeable disposition. I have him here merely to train and put in shape for an amateur exhibition. He'd be a decent dog if he'd been taught his manners at home."

A big, white Angora cat rubbed against the bars of her cage, clamoring for admiration, and the veterinary surgeon took her up. "I'm proud of this little creature," he said, "for she's just come out finely from an operation. She seemed very sick, and on examining her mouth I found a bit of thread caught on her back teeth. Further investigation showed that the thread had almost hit her stomach, with a needle at the end. I was nervous, and I got it out for her. It is not often that cats swallow foreign substances, however. The long haired cats often have trouble by swallowing large quantities of their own fur as they lick themselves, and every once in a while I have to operate to remove a ball of fur. I frequently perform dental work on cats, but it consists mostly in extracting the teeth, which loosen up and protrude from their mouths. Occasionally I cut a growth of some sort, and improve the eye in cases abcesses which appear back of their ears.

"In a horse operation cocaine is generally used. One animal brought in here had a broken jaw, caused by its rearing up and hitting its head against a crash against some hard substance. Another broken jaw was caused by the kick of an unmanageable trachea horse. The Caesarian operation is often performed on horses with success, both the colic and the mothers surviving.

"It is an excellent thing that we often have to remove an eye from a horse, generally because of a runaway accident. Yesterday, however, I removed an eye because of the formation of a tumor. Horses are always having swellings of their legs that must be removed, and sometimes we have to operate for insect stings.

"A sick horse is the most tractable animal in the world, for he seems to realize that our doctoring is just for his good. I have seen a horse who he is a different creature, and when he shows forth his true disposition, whether he is gentle or vicious, I have been kicked by horses more than once, but it has always been by the convalescing and not the sick animal."

DREAM FOOD. Consul Edward I. Nathan, of Patras, Greece, writes about the Greek preparation and exportation of hashish, an Arabian, drug, which has given our language its word assassin--a man so frenzied by the drug that he accomplishes murder--is used by the Persians, Turks and Egyptians in a manner akin to the use of opium by the Chinese. It is the product of a plant grown in large quantities in the Peloponnese (southern Greece) and is a very powerful narcotic. The plant grows to a height of about four feet and its branches are thickly covered with small leaves and studied with tiny seeds.
