GOSSIP OF THE BOROUGH

WANTED, A LEADER.

McCarren's Foes, as a Whole, Are Still Disorganized.

The fight against the leadership of Senator Patrick Henry McCarren is still continuing. Although a leader has been chosen by the anti-McCarrenites in every Assembly district, the forces of the opposition as a whole are still without a recognized leader, although Borough President Bird S. Coler is signifying his willingness—by his actions, at least—to step into the breach. There are others, too. Among them are James Shevlin, once the right hand man of the "Boss" McLaughlin; John H. DeLaney and ex-Warden Hayes, the leaders of the Kings County Democratic party; ex-Sheriff Flaherty, leader of the "common" non-pull; Minor C. Eastman, leader of the Brooklyn Civic Union, and other single-minded patriots. Like the Republican leaders who want to become county leader in State Chairman Woodruff's place, these Democratic leaders are perfectly ready to assume the leadership of the opposition movement, but none of them is willing to sacrifice himself in the altar of conviction to so great an extent as to allow any other person to get the job.

Some of them are stronger than others, but not one of them is strong enough to tower over the rest and force recognition. None of them controls a single Assembly district, for instance, and probably all of them together could marshal their forces in one of the larger halls of the borough without making the walls bulge out. To every one outside the movement looking in the fight against McCarren seems merely a demonstration of the weakness of the anti-McCarrenites and the strength of "Long Pat."

The Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Reformation, Pennsylvania and Liberty avenues, which recently celebrated its tenth anniversary, is seen to have a new home in Barby street, near Arlington avenue. The plans for the new building, which is to cost $40,000, are already prepared, and it is expected that the building itself will be ready for occupancy within a year. When the church was organized there was much opposition among the Lutherans to the use of the English language in the services, but the church began with English and has continued its use with great success.

Within two years after the organization it was found that no more help was necessary from the Brooklyn Missionary Society, which at first contributed to its support. The church then abandoned the chapel in which it had started and rented a building which had been used by Congregationalists. It has now a membership of 375 and a Sunday school with an attendance of 350.

Ex-Mayor Charles A. Schieren of Brooklyn, who has taken much interest in advancing the use of English in the Lutheran churches, has done considerable toward the success of the church. As an experiment in a way, it has proved that the Germans who have adopted America as their country and their children are not opposed to the adoption of the English language as well.

Frederick Munsen will deliver the second of his illustrated lectures on the Southwest, under the auspices of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, next Saturday. His topic will be "New Mexico." The lecture will be delivered both in the afternoon and evening at Association Hall. On March 12 the Kneisel String Quartet will give a chamber music concert at the Association Hall in the evening. The New York Symphony Orchestra, under the leadership of Walter Damrosch, will give a matinee concert at the Baptist Temple. M. Emilio de Gogorza

POLITE.

A very mild North of England vicar had for some time been displeased with the quality of the milk served him. At length he determined to re-monstrate with his milkman for supplying such weak stuff. He began mildly: "I've been wanting to see you in regard to the quality of milk with which you are serving me." "Yes, sir," unceasingly answered the tradesman. "I only wanted to say," continued the minister, "that I use the milk for dietary purposes exclusively, and not for christening." Pick-Me-Up.

LOST MUNICIPAL PARK.

Becomes Site for Stable to House Brooklyn Officials' Horses.

The most valuable stable site to be found in the greater city is that of the new municipal stable for the benefit of the officials of the Borough of Brooklyn who use horses and carriages in their work. The site is valued at from $300,000 to $400,000. It is also one of the most convenient and well placed stable sites in the city. Right in front of it is the entrance to the subway. Across the street from it is the Borough Hall, with the offices of the Borough President and of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. To one side of the site is the Municipal Building and behind it the Polytechnic Institute. On all sides the site is within a stone's throw of the principal office buildings in the borough.

This valuable site is in Municipal Park, known also as Murphy's Park, and is a couple of hundred feet square. Once, before the subway was started in Brooklyn, the park was in fact what it is now—only in name. The subway contractor piled the grass plats and the flower beds with stone and steel, for which privilege he was supposed to pay a stipulated sum. So far as known, the city never tried to collect any money from him.

Some weeks before the subway tube was opened the contractor cleared the place of his property, but no attempt was made to restore the park to its original condition. Instead, a fence was built across it, and behind the fence the city soon had piles of sewer pipes, the little maple trees that were just getting big enough to be of some protection in the summer days were cut down. Two tool houses which the subway contractor had erected were appropriated for city purposes. Murphy Park was by this time about as free from any right and title to the name of park as it was in its virgin state, prior to the appearance of plant life. It soon dawned upon the city fathers that the unhappy appearance of the park behind the fence was not quite complete. Hence the stable.

The stable is a long wooden shed with a corrugated iron roof. In general appearance, and probably in most other respects, it is just like thousands of other wagon sheds which are erected less conspicuously and on less valuable property. There is nothing about it to give the impression that its architectural effects have been passed on by the Municipal Art Commission. Back of the shed a plain mud road leads behind the Municipal Building. Some of these days—if all goes well and the traditions of the past are badly fractured—the site of the new municipal stable will be utilized for a municipal building. This building has been planned for a decade now, and some day it may be built, and then the city may have something in the way of compensation for the loss of Municipal Park.
