PLAYWRIGHERS' RIGHTS. Seeking Protection of Copyright Law Against Moving Pictures.

Washington, March 23.—Ligdon Johnson, as representative of the allied theatrical managers and the dramatic authors, opened the copyright argument before the joint Copyright Committee on Copyright to-day with a presentation of the contentions of the managers and authors that the right be denied to the moving picture concerns to reproduce the plays of American authors and managers.

William A. Brady, who has been a theatrical manager for twenty years and who has produced over seventy-five to one hundred plays by American authors, told the committee that the situation was becoming desperate and that "if this thing is not stopped it means the ruination of us and the men who write for the stage."

Mr. Brady stated that one of his companies had been forced off the road owing to the fact that the play it was presenting was being produced throughout the United States by the aid of moving pictures with photographic attachments.

Harry E. Parker, a member of the National Association of Producing Managers, claimed that through the moving picture machines the public learned the story of the play, and that when they had done this they lost their desire to see the original production on the stage.

"There was never a successful production of a Shakespearean play," replied Mr. Parker, "without a great personality to bring it forth. The poet is not to be seen in a Hamlet; they go to see a Booth."

Victor Herbert, the musical composer, next addressed the committee. He represented, he said, the American Federation of Musicians, which has a membership of sixty thousand. He reiterated the arguments he made last year before the committee against the mechanical machines being allowed to produce the works of composers, claiming that if such others reap the benefit. He read advertisements from talking machine companies to show that they made records only of successful selections, those that had been widely known and popular. "These people," he exclaimed, "are appropriating our works and they are ruining us."

At the afternoon session of the committee the substance of their arguments was heard. The House would the receipt of messages from the Senate when the latter body is not in session. The Senate adjourned yesterday until next Monday, and thus postponed for two days the official transmission of the news of its action to the lower body.

HEFLIN DEFENDS SHOTS. Fired at Ground, He Says; Received Threatening Letters.

Washington, March 23.—Representative Thomas J. Hefflin, of Alabama, in a statement to-day regarding last night's shooting affray on Pennsylvania avenue, defended his position.

"I am glad to say I have not yet reached the point where I will see a negro, or a white man either, take a drink in the presence of a lady without saying something to him. I did only what any other gentleman placed in similar circumstances would have done."

In the police court to-day it was agreed between Representative Hefflin, J. Clayton, of Alabama, who advised the shooting, and Assistant United States Attorney Ralph Given, that the case should not be called until later.

Mr. Hefflin later gave out for publication copies of several anonymous threatening letters received by him since his unsuccessful effort on February 22 to incorporate a "Jim Crow" car amendment into a local street railway track bill.

Mr. Hefflin authorized his colleague, Representative Clayton, to prepare a statement giving his version of the affray. Mr. Clayton says in this statement:

Mr. Hefflin drew his revolver to defend himself and struck one of his negro assailants on the head. One made a motion as if to draw a weapon from his pocket, but that movement both rushed at Mr. Hefflin. They struggled to the platform and the Representative forced both of them to the ground. Hefflin then turned and renewed their assault on the negroes, but they were not able to get through one of the car windows. He did not aim at either of the negroes, but shot at the ground with his revolver. One bullet glanced and struck Thomas McCreary in the leg.
