JEROME HEARING ENDS KING'S LETTERS SHOWN.

District Attorney's Final Pleasantry at Close of Evidence.

The hearing of the charges preferred by the King committee against District Attorney Jerome was finished yesterday, except for the summing up. After that Commissioner Hand will prepare his report and submit it to Governor Hughes. After yesterday's hearing had been closed Mr. Jerome sprung his last surprise in the case. Franklin Pierce, counsel for the committee, was gathering up his papers preparatory to leaving the hearing in the Tribune Building. Mr. Jerome reached down in an inside pocket and drew out two letters. "There are the newspaper men," he asked. "I have something here I want to show them." Mr. Pierce heard the remark and "began to sit up and take notice."

WHOLE CITY ARRESTED

sure sign that he wants to know all that I do since he watches me every time I appear on the street and sometimes follows me in a casual gumshoe sort of way. Before the parade started Mark Twain and Cardinal Logue had a long conversation together, and though the crowd in general could not hear what was said the laughter of both men seemed to indicate that the Irish wit and the American humor were being rubbed together and were throwing off sparks. Afterward Mr. Clemens said: "I found his eminence a very nice old gentleman. He told me he had read my books. He didn't say that he approved of them, but I didn't need to have him tell me that. He looks like an intelligent man, so I take it for granted he approves of high class literature."

THE MEDAL MEN. Then as a preliminary to the parade proper there stepped forth from the ranks of the honor men the three who this year receive recognition. Mayor McClellan, standing bareheaded, read the general order of the Police Department to them and then gave each in turn the medal he had earned. First was the Isaac Bell medal, awarded to Patrolman Henry L. Lobdell, of the 5d Precinct, who early last Christmas morning jumped into the ice filled East River at 23d street and rescued a drowning man.

The Peter F. Meyer medal went to Patrolman Walter MacDonough, also of the 5d Precinct. MacDonough on October 8 rescued a would-be suicide who had leaped into the North River from Pier 39. An even more thrilling feat was commemorated when the Brooklyn citizens' medal was given to Patrolman Patrick Kelly, of the 190th Precinct. He, in arresting a pistol flourishing Italian in a crowd at the Masonic Temple, in Brooklyn, was obliged to fight about one hundred of the man's friends.

The Rhineland medal and the medal of the Automobile Club of America were not awarded. In the reviewing stand none was more interested in these ceremonies than Patrolman James Farley, the oldest man on the force. Ten blue service stripes on his arm showed his fifty years of service, and he sat in a seat of honor. In the marching lines that tramped by he saw his two sons, one a sergeant and the other a patrolman. "Old Jim," or "Uncle Jim," as he is variously known, is now on duty in St. Mary's Park, in the Bronx. He said the proudest moment of his life was when he was presented to Cardinal Logue and Mark Twain.

And then the great annual show began. Moses W. Cortright, chief inspector, led on his aged but energetic horse Jed, twenty-one years old and thirteen years in the department. The course lay from Astor Place up Broadway to 23d street, and then up Madison avenue, around by 40th street and down Fifth avenue past the reviewing stand. As Katie said after it was all over: "It's certainly a good thing to show the town that we get a lot of men who are related to the force have as fine and soldierly a lot of men folks as can be found anywhere. What?"

DINNERS FOLLOW PARADE

Police Enjoy Themselves in Feasting After Their Long March.

After the police parade yesterday afternoon the police of the 8th Precinct, the Leonard street station, retired to the Zittler dining rooms, known as the "City Hall Celler," for a dinner given by Captain Cottrell of the precinct. Sergeant Stephenson acted as toastmaster, and, besides the lieutenants, one hundred guests were present. The third annual dinner of the traffic squad took place at the Waldorf last night. There were about four hundred and fifty policemen present, most of them in uniform. The toastmaster was Walter MacDonough. The following letter of regret from President Roosevelt to Inspector Max F. Schmittberger, was read: "My Dear Inspector: I wish I could be present at the dinner of the traffic squad. I cannot be, but I send you my warmest wishes, and say that, like all our New Yorkers, I take special pride in them. With earnest good wishes for your future, I am, your old friend."

CITY NEWS IN BRIEF.

Edward E. Brennan, who was arrested on Thursday, charged with attempting to extort $40,000 from F. Augustus Heinze in connection with the case of the Etina Bank, of Butte, Mont., was held in $4,000 bail in the Tombs court yesterday. He was paroled in the custody of his attorney. Roscoe C. Stebbins, of No. 156 West 78th street, was released in $5,000 bail by United States Commissioner Shields, who held court in the Tombs yesterday. Stebbins was indicted with Rupert V. Wilson for using the mails in a scheme to defraud the Atlantic Coast Line and other railroads. He is alleged to have posed as an attorney, and, without authority, settled certain claims. Luke M. Moran, a carpenter, living at No. 201 West 124th street, through his counsel, G. Washburne Smith, got a verdict yesterday in the Supreme Court for $3,500 for a broken leg sustained while a passenger on a Brooklyn Heights Railroad Company train.

MAURETANIA STOWAWAYS TO GO BACK.

The Cunard liner Mauretania arrived here yesterday with seven stowaways, which were part of a party of thirty who boarded the steamer at Liverpool. Soon after leaving port the ship's officers found twenty-three and put them ashore at Queenstown. When the Mauretania was two days out from the Irish coast seven more were discovered. The men were rounded up when the Mauretania docked yesterday, marched down West street under guard and put aboard the outbound Cunarder Campania.

TAGGED FOR SCHENECTADY HOSPITAL.

City Given Over to Solicitors for Charity—Trains Not Exempt.

Schenectady, N. Y., May 9.—At dusk to-night practically every man, woman, child, dog, horse, wagon and automobile in this city was wearing a Red Cross tag. The whole city is in gala attire for charity day. Stores and houses are decorated with flags and red crosses of all sizes. Mayor Van Vleet formally turned the city over to the women's auxiliary of the Erie Hospital, and it had the freedom of the city to solicit for charity. About a thousand women, wearing red crosses on the left sleeve and carrying mite boxes, were on every street corner, in every trolley car, in all stores, hotels, office buildings and factory buildings, distributing small red cross tags to all who contributed to the mite boxes. Once tagged, one was exempt from further solicitation. Even the steam trains as they stopped at the stations were canvassed. "Tag Day," it is expected, will net the hospital $10,000.
