

FOR THE BUSY MAN

Constant Reader Tells What He Missed in Last Week's Papers.

"What does the leafy month of June have to promise in the way of news?" asked the "Busy Man," entering the office of the Constant Reader. The latter was moved to reply, "To parody the well known lines of James Russell Lowell, 'What is so rare as a day in June. Then, if ever, come well-done days.'"

"But, seriously, June of this year of grace is big with portent, for in it will be named the man who in all probability will be the head of the great nation for the four years beginning with March 4, 1909. The twenty-seventh President of the United States will be elected in November, and much depends on the wisdom which guides the gathering of the Republican delegates in the Chicago Coliseum. A week from Tuesday the body will be called to order by Senator Julius Caesar Burrows, of Michigan, but already the national committee is busily engaged in settling the vexed questions of the rights to seats in the body. There are many contests, and most of them come from the states where the Republican vote is so small as to be a negligible quantity. On the decision of the contests hinges some of the developments of the convention's work. The permanent presiding officer of the convention will be Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts. There is also talk that Senator W. Murray Crane, of the same state, may be made the chairman of the national committee to conduct the campaign. Not to be outdone by their fellow citizens in ambition, Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., and John Hays Hammond, of the well known mining engineer, are nursing Vice-Presidential hopes. In the week's development of the situation, while there is strong pressure on Vice-President Fairbanks to be a candidate for his present place, he says first place or nothing, and there is talk of Senator J. P. Dolliver, of Iowa, thus taking the candidate from beyond the Mississippi and securing a speaker who can make a whirlwind campaign, while Mr. Taft, as head of the ticket, receives visitors at his Ohio home and expresses his views to them."

Members from left to right: Jackson Smith, chief of labor, quarters and subsistence; Joseph Bucklin Bishop, secretary; Colonel W. C. Gorgas, U. S. A., chief sanitary officer; Civil Engineer H. H. Rousseau, U. S. A., chief of municipal engineering, motive power and machinery; Lieutenant Colonel George W. Goethals, U. S. A., chairman and chief engineer; Major D. D. Gaillard, U. S. A., chief of excavation and dredging; J. C. S. Blackburn, chief of civil administration, and Major William L. Sibert, U. S. A., chief of lock and dam construction.

THE PRESIDENT'S ESCAPE.

"What is this I hear about the narrow escape of the President from serious accident?" "Mr. Roosevelt has had another instance of what is called 'Tiddy's luck.' As he was riding a young and untrained steed in a perilous place the horse reared and fell over backward. Fortunately, the rider was aware of his situation, and when he foresaw the inevitable managed to disengage himself from his stirrups, drop the reins and slide out of the way of the falling animal and escape his hoofs in his efforts to regain his feet. But the President had a nasty fall into a shallow stream, the bed of which was strewn with boulders, and besides the soaking he received some serious bruises. He retained his indomitable spirit and when the horse had been caught remounted and rode for an hour and a half, finding in the vigorous exercise the best panacea for his fall and wetting. It was not the first time that Mr. Roosevelt has met with accident in his favorite pastime of horseback riding. The President is taking every precaution against a stampede in the Chicago convention placing him again at the head of the ticket, but there is a considerable number of delegates ready to promote this if it is regarded as feasible. It is aided by the efforts of some of the candidates and their friends to prevent the nomination of Mr. Taft by acclamation, but their efforts in this direction may be frustrated. In the week just ended Mr. Bryan made no less than forty-two set speeches, so he may be regarded as in good trim for a campaign, and his hopes are high of carrying the Denver convention. In one of his latest speeches he recalled the fact that he was once known as 'The Boy Orator of the Platte.' The effort to twist out of the speech of Secretary Taft on Memorial Day an intentional affront to the memory of General Grant has proved futile, his statement that he simply set forth the facts of history in order to emphasize the deduction that Grant won the greatest victory over himself as a preparation for winning the greatest of victories for the nation having cleared away all misapprehensions. It may be recalled that when Lincoln was told that a certain general drank whiskey he asked what brand it was, saying that he wanted to know in order to recommend it to some of his other generals."

CONGRESS ADJOURNMENT.

"The close of the first session of the 60th Congress was effected in time for its members to revisit their homes and pay some attention to their political fences before the assembling of many of them at the Republican nominating convention at Chicago. Not to be outdone by the House, in which filibustering tactics were displayed by the Democratic members a few weeks ago, the Senate had to have a filibuster in its closing hours, which promised at one time to obstruct the session. In fact, if the plans of the filibusters had not miscarried the national legislators might still be in session at the capital. It was Senator La Follette who sought to test the patience of his fellow members by his futile speaking against the currency bill which the majority sought to enact as a preventive of panic if financial difficulties should arise before 1914. He made a record as a speculumaker, sticking to the task for eighteen hours, although in the first part of it he was able to secure considerable rest by a rollcall whenever he found, by the aid of a vigilant secretary, that less than a quorum attended to his remarks. After he had exhausted himself, Senator 'Gumshoe' Stone took up the task, and he in turn was relieved by the blind Senator, Gore. But their plans to keep their tactics were upset by La Follette himself, who sent word to Gore to end his speech

After having a successful season H. W. Greene and Mrs. M. M. Aarup Greene closed their studios at Nos. 864 and 865 Carnegie Hall on June 1. They will go to Brookfield Centre, Conn., to begin the preparatory work for the 1908 season of the Brookfield Summer School of Music, which will open on July 1 and close on August 25.

On Friday afternoon, June 5, a musical for the benefit of the Actors' Church Alliance (New York chapter) was given at Sierrys' under the personal direction of Damon Lyon, formerly of Richard Mansfield's company. Among the numbers on the program that attracted more than usual attention were "The Crown's Baby," rendered by Mrs. Damon Lyon, several humorous and dramatic readings by Damon Lyon, the Woelber Violin Quartet and musical readings by Mary Louise Woelber. The entertainment ended with the cottage scene from "The Lady of Lyons," in which Mr. and Mrs. Damon Lyon and Miss Pauline Fritz appeared.

The Henry Liff Orchestra gave an interesting programme at the Hotel Majestic on the afternoon of May 29 for the Woman's Democratic Club of New York. Much appreciation was shown of the rendition of compositions of Mendelssohn, Haydn, Chopin and Nevin.

Agnes Sumner Goe entertained on Saturday at Miss Frank G. Fowler's home, at Mount Kisco, N. Y., for Washington Heights Chapter, D. I. A. R. Next Tuesday she will recite for the In-As-Much Home, Bergen street, Brooklyn, and on June 18 at a concert in Astoria, Long Island. During part of July and August Miss Goe will entertain in Connecticut, the Pocono Mountains, the White Mountains and Richfield Springs.

At the Central Baptist Church, No. 222 West 42d street, the choir, under the direction of the organist, F. W. Riesberg, will sing Gault's "The Holy City" on Sunday evening, June 7, at 8 o'clock. Besides the solo singers and chorus, a violin, cello, piano and organ are concerned in the cantata. Mr. Riesberg's annual students' recital took place at Carnegie Hall yesterday. On June 11 he will give an organ recital at Mobile, Ala., for the Southern Music Teachers' Association.

The Master School of Music, at No. 106 Montague street, Brooklyn, is now under the directorship of Richard Ewers, formerly a music critic. The object of the institute, which is chiefly supported by residents of Brooklyn, is for the improvement of musical art in its various branches. Persons of talent are invited to join, and if they are too poor to pay the institute will be glad to extend its advantages free.

Mrs. Carrie Louise Dunning, of No. 151 West 79th street, will open a summer course of study for teachers in Buffalo on July 6.

The Millbrook Choral Society, of which Walter L. Bogert is conductor, will give its annual concert in Thorne Memorial Hall, Millbrook, Dutchess County, N. Y., on June 12. The work to be performed is Cowen's "Rose Maiden." The society formed in 1892 by the following artists from New York: Miss Vera Curtis, soprano; Miss Helen Waldo, contralto; John Bland, tenor; Clifford Cairns, bass, and J. Bertram Fox, accompanist. This is Mr. Bogert's sixth year as conductor of the society, of which Harry Barkness Flager is president, and which has an active membership of 100. Among the associate members are Mr. forty-eight and Mrs. Samuel Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Wing, Mrs. H. H. Flager, Mrs. Austin Flint, Mrs. Daniel Lamont, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. STUDIO NOTES.

The seventh annual commencement of the Guilman Organ School was held Thursday evening in the First Presbyterian Church under the direction of William C. Carl. The programme was brilliantly played and several of the students displayed unusual ability. Their playing reflected the highest credit upon Director Carl for his work in bringing about the results demonstrated Thursday evening. The class of '08 consists of Arthur W. Arneke, Edward Boyd Smack, Roy K. Falconer, Harold Vincent Milligan, Aliso Gordon Don, Eugene C. Morris, Teresa Weber, Caroline Marjorie Tucker, T. Scott Godfrey Burman, W. Ralph Cox and Harry Oliver Hirt. The post-graduates are Martha Stewart Koch and Mary J. Seaby. The soloist was André Sario, barytone of the Metropolitan Opera House. A reception was given for the school by Director Carl and Miss Carl after the exercises in the church.

THE GREEN MOUNTAINS. Equinox House and Elkwanok Links Ready for the Season.

Manchester-in-the-Mountains, Vt., June—(Special)—This charming resort has for more than a century been known as a delightful place in which to spend the sultry months of July and August. Colonel Jack Graham, of the British army, in a book entitled "Vermont," published in London in 1775, refers to the serenity of summer weather at Manchester, and says: "The kind breeze which whips among the trees and press between the mountains refresh the weary traveller, and render this place, if I may venture to use the expression, the habitation of the zephyrus."

The visitor here is first struck with the picturesque situation of the village. It lies in the heart of the mountain ranges and at the foot of Mount Equinox, which rises more than three thousand feet above. Four miles north is Mount Equinox, from which was quarried the marble in the Astor Library and in the Plaza Hotel, in New York. Toward the east lies the Green Mountain Range, which runs in an unbroken chain from the Massachusetts line to Canada. The hills abound in high cataraacts, rushing torrents and small lakes.
