

O. S. STRAUS TO OLNEY

Compares Records of Cleveland and Roosevelt Administrations.

Washington, Sept. 26.—Secretary Straus made his first speech of the campaign to-night at the formal opening of the District of Columbia Republican headquarters...

Secretary Straus's speech dealt with Richard Olney's recent endorsement of Bryan and the Democratic ticket, and those who heard his argument agreed that he will arouse enthusiasm on the stump.

Speeches were also made by Treasurer Treat, ex-Senator Marion Butler, of North Carolina, and Henry M. Camp, president of the League of Republican State Clubs. Mr. Straus said in part: "I was once a Cleveland Democrat. I honor the memory of Grover Cleveland and glory in his patriotic achievements..."

Mr. Straus read several extracts from Mr. Olney's speech, including that in which he said: "The Roosevelt policies, in other words, simmer down to the Ten Commandments as follows: 1. Don't."

On which Mr. Straus commented: "Well, I will not deny that, if Olney regards the policy of the Ten Commandments as an objection, I don't."

Replying to Mr. Olney's references to suits under the Sherman law, Mr. Straus said: "The anti-trust law was passed on July 2, 1890. Mr. Olney was Attorney General, charged with the enforcement of that law from March 6, 1888, to June 7, 1888. The only cases which the Cleveland administration brought under that act were brought against combinations of working men; there were no cases brought by the Cleveland administration against combinations of capitalists..."

When we compare the present administration with the Cleveland-Olney administration there is another striking difference to be noted. Olney only brought action against labor unions, while the administration that has been brought under the Roosevelt administration included, among others, the Northern Securities Company, the great packers, the railroads, the Federal Silt Company, the General Paper Company, the Otis Elevator Company, the American Tobacco Company and the Standard Oil Company. In this injunction and criminal cases and in its injunction and criminal cases against other defendants the government has been successful in the cases that are still pending or have been taken up on appeal under the anti-trust act during the present administration has the government been defeated.

BOULDER COUNTY GOLD THE TAMBOURINE MINE.

Cyanide and Roasting Plants Make Low Grade Ore Valuable.

What would you think if some one were to place in your hand a piece of rock, irregular in shape, measuring not more than three inches in length and two inches in width, studded all over with tiny, glistening specks of yellow, and tell you in a conversational tone of voice that a ton of the same kind of rocks is worth anywhere from $30,000 to $100,000? Very likely you would do the natural thing and become interested and possibly curious to learn what it was and from whence it came.

If you could go to Colorado, from whose mountains there is taken daily a gigantic fortune in just such rocks, you would see the mines which produce the yellow metal which becomes golden eagles. The State of Colorado is dotted throughout the mountain districts with smokestacks surmounting the surface works of thousands of mines, which day in and day out act as the allies of uncounted throngs of men who spend their lives in delving into the heart of the earth for virgin gold.

In no part of this state are there more mines or greater riches than in the territory around Denver, Boulder and Pueblo. The hills in this section of the country are tapped by the Colorado & Southern Railroad which carries to the markets the materials and supplies necessary for mining and development work, and starts the ore containing the gold on its way to the smelters where it will be reduced.

Prominently to the fore in the list of mining and development companies in the neighborhood of Boulder is a group whose activities consist in mining for gold, is the Tambourine mine, one of a large group owned by the same management. Then there are the Livingstone, the Logan, the Yellow Pine, the Ingram, the Emancipation, the Smuggler, the Richmond, the Wood Mountain, the Lucky Star and scores of others adjoining or contiguous to the Tambourine mine, which is on Melvina Hill, near the city of Boulder.

Boulder County is reputed to be one of the richest gold bearing sections of the entire state, and the only reason it is not better known as a great gold producing county is found in the character of the ore which up to this time has been difficult to treat. With the erection of cyanide and roasting plants, the difficulties which beset the pioneers in this section have been overcome, and the cost of the treatment of the ore, which was the big problem confronting the men at the head of the mining industry in the Boulder district, has been brought to a level where mines producing ore of a valuation as low as $4 a ton may now be operated at a big profit.

One of the first mines in this section to utilize the cyanide process in the handling of the low grade ores was the Tambourine, in which several New Yorkers are interested, among them being W. T. Wintermute, who is largely responsible for recent activity in this district. The installation of cyanide plants for the treatment of low grade ores in the Boulder County district marked a distinct step in advance, for not only is the section prolific in the higher grade ores, but there is no spot in the country where profit-bearing low grade ores occur in more abundance than here.

In every gold mining district of the country millions of dollars have been realized in profits, by cyaniding the immense piles of ore which had been dumped aside as valueless, because of the expense involved in extricating the gold which was there. Therefore, in many cases, attention was given only to the high grade ore, which could be taken out easily and give a profit to the miner. The Boulder section of the state abounds in veins containing not only the highest grade of gold-bearing ore, but also immense deposits of ore which are worth millions now that men know how to get the gold out at a cost which leaves a big margin of profit.

It is just as sure that, great as has been the development of mining, there remain untapped avenues of wealth that will make the discoveries up to date seem small in comparison. Cripple Creek district is the wonder of the world, and from present indications is going to be duplicated in the Boulder County district, where each day finds richer ore discovered. There is no one who would be foolish enough to hazard a guess as to the ultimate value of the mines in this district. No matter where you go in this section you will see the smoke arising from the stacks that tell you, even before you come within sight of the shaft houses, that more gold is being mined. The casual reader is not interested in the cost of mining. If he has any interest at all, it is in finding out how these men in the abstract do it. Gold mining, like everything else that is worth while, progresses in method and efficiency. The Cripple Creek district has up to this time marked the high-water mark in mining, and what made Cripple Creek famous will probably make Colorado the leading gold producer of the world, and may do the same for Boulder County.

BEVERIDGE SURE OF INDIANA. Senator Beveridge held a conference yesterday with Chairman Hitchcock before departing for the West to make specific reply to the various speeches that Mr. Bryan has been delivering. The Senator told the chairman that Indiana was safe for Taft without the least doubt, and denounced as absurd the Democratic claim that Mr. Bryan would carry the state.

WON'T USE CLEVELAND ARTICLE. Richard V. Oulahan, in charge of the literary bureau of the Republican National Committee, said last night the national committee had stopped the use as a campaign document of the Cleveland endorsement of Judge Taft. The Tribune yesterday published in "The Times" on August 30 over ex-President Cleveland's signature and quoting him as favoring Judge Taft for President and opposing William Jennings Bryan. "When Mr. Oulahan was asked yesterday about the use of the Cleveland endorsement by the Republican National Committee he said: "We shall make no further use of it, unless its authenticity is absolutely proved. When the article was first published it impressed me at once as having value as a campaign document. Its repudiation to-day was a complete surprise to me. Before I made use of it I took the trouble to personally call on Mr. Hastings and examine the genuineness of the Cleveland endorsement. Mr. Hastings no longer ago than day before yesterday told me that it was authentic. Now that he repudiates it, the Republican National Committee has no use for it."
