OBJECT TO NOISES

Six Thousand Teachers Sign Mrs. Rice's Petition in 24 Hours.

More than six thousand teachers responded inside of twenty-four hours to Mrs. Isaac L. Rice's request for signatures to a petition to be presented to the Board of Aldermen...

"We women are the pauper sex," objected Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake. "We have no money, no vote, and no influence. What can we do?"

"We can complain," said Mrs. Rice. "One of the things for which the Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noises was organized was to educate people not to suffer in silence."

"I know three people whose houses in 47th street, and each of these houses is advertised for sale because the owner can't live in them because of the noise in the streets," said Dr. Harriet Keatinge.

"I want to propose a halo for Dr. Darlington," said one woman. "We live at Lexington avenue and 56th street. We are disturbed by the thunderous noise of the downtown cars when they strike the crosswalks. We went in a prayer to the Health Department. It was heard, and the nuisance was abolished."

RESULT OF DIRETOIRE SCORE.

New Mode Teaches Dressmakers Value of One-Piece Costume.

Fashion scores are seldom as serious as they seem. If the alarmists who prophesy the ascendancy of the Directorate gown were to be believed, most women would have good reason to adopt Hamlet's advice to Ophelia about getting to a nunnery...

But there's no real cause for worry, for Directorate gowns won't reign, except in the fashion plates. And the Directorate style will have, as Evelyn Sharp points out in "The Manchester Guardian," at least one good result...

There is, too, one point in the Directorate styles which should recommend them to economical mothers of daughters. No more need the big sister's last winter's frock be tucked in the skirt to make a next winter's frock for the little sister.

LITTLE CHINESE AT WHITE HOUSE.

President Greatly Interested in Work of Rescue Home.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Big and little politicians and statesmen passed in and out of the White House to-day and discussed important matters with the President, but by far the most interesting visitors were eight little Chinese children, ranging in age from four to thirteen years, inmates of the Oriental Rescue Home of the Methodist Church, in San Francisco.

"Do you like to do this?" Lum was asked. "No, sir," he declared with emphasis, just like a real American boy. The children were dressed in Chinese style, although in the Rescue Home they wear American clothing.

President Roosevelt showed deep interest in his little callers, and inquired in much detail as to the work of the home. He was told that it had been in existence nearly forty years and had turned out 1,000 good Chinese men and women.

The children were dressed in Chinese style, although in the Rescue Home they wear American clothing. President Roosevelt showed deep interest in his little callers, and inquired in much detail as to the work of the home.

O'BRIEN WHILE TRYING TO FIND A JOB

Falls Into a Yard with a Tub of Lard After an Unsuccessful Attempt to Rob. Young John O'Brien, plasterer, who lives in East 4th street, had lost his job some weeks ago and had no food to eat.

Now, Gaetano was unpacking a very costly cheese, which had just been rushed from Russia and which had cured his appetite. John was forced to cool his heels and curb his appetite.

And there they lay and bawled and howled, and mended things up some more, until Patrolman Sullivan appeared within the door. Though Sullivan soon scanned the clerk and saw he was unarmed, at the plight of poor O'Brien he really grew alarmed.

But, oh! the rescue was misnamed, for John was quickly haled before a magistrate in court and afterward was jailed. For Special Sessions he was held, the ball 20 plunks, and still the lard drops from his head in large and greasy chunks.
