FAST GOLF IN "OPEN" YANKEE PLAYER LEADS

THE BIG FIELD. Hunter Makes New Course Record in Play for Championship Title.

The unusual spectacle of a home-bred American leading the field at the end of the first six holes of play in a national open golf championship tournament was furnished at Englewood yesterday, when Tom McNamara, of the Westland Golf Club, near Boston, returned rounds of 73 and 89 for 162. McNamara learned the game as a boy in Boston, and several years ago gave indications of becoming a high class player.

Next on the list came Andrew Campbell, of Spring Haven, the youngest member of this family to get the championship, with rounds of 71 and 73 for 144. George Sargent, of Hyde Manor, Vt., another dark horse, got third, with 75-74-147. Also Campbell, familiarly known as the "Nipper," and the far-driving Gil Nichols tied for fourth place with 148. So far as the amateurs were concerned, Walter J. Travis, of Garden City, had the distinction of showing the way with an even 150, although the metropolitan champion was eclipsed by Francis J. Hpton, Jr., of Baltusrol. Up next got the same as Travis in the morning-72. The next best amateur was Jerome D. Travers, the national title holder, with 77 and 78 for 155.

Probably the most remarkable performance of the day was Dave Hunter's record round of 68 in the forenoon. On the other hand, his indifferent 84 later in the day only served as another illustration of the uncertainty of golf. The 68 referred to broke the course record by two strokes, and incidentally made good the prophecy of Will Anderson that 70 would be beaten during the tournament.

With regard to the favorites, who failed to work their way near the top, it may be said that Alec Smith, of Wykagyl, champion of the Eastern Professional Golfers' Association, had to be content with rounds of 76 and 73, for 149, while Will Anderson, four times winner of the title and present champion of the Western Golf Association, could do no better than 152. Then there was Fred McLeod, the national open champion, with 154.

An international flavor was lent to the affair through the presence of Tom Vardon, of Deal, England, who only reached this shore on Wednesday night. Considering this, coupled with the fact that he had absolutely no knowledge of the title and present champion of the Western Golf Association, could do no better than 152. Then there was Fred McLeod, the national open champion, with 154.

Genial of manner and with a free and easy, almost careless, way of hitting the ball, Vardon promptly became a favorite with the gallery. In a way he was also the subject of much sympathy. He was nearly overcome with the heat. In accordance with the custom abroad, he wore the typical English golfing jacket, which he did not dare discard for fear of throwing off his swing. He declared he had never felt the heat so in his life, and at the ninth hole thought he would not be able to continue.

In getting his low score McNamara played sound golf from start to finish. He started with five consecutive 4s, and, after a 5 at the long sixth, brought off a good put for a 2 at the 150-yard seventh. Two more he enabled him to go out in 35, clever work considering the length. Fives at the thirteenth, fourteenth and sixteenth holes prevented him from coming back better than 68, but, even so, he was nearly overcome with the heat. In accordance with the custom abroad, he wore the typical English golfing jacket, which he did not dare discard for fear of throwing off his swing. He declared he had never felt the heat so in his life, and at the ninth hole thought he would not be able to continue.

Later in the day McNamara took 84 at the sixth hole and reached the turn in 37. Coming home the Westland player's golf was perfection itself, and he came within an ace of crowning it all with a 1 at the home hole. The ball bobbed in the cup and out again, so that all he had to do was to get the ball in the hole. The card read as follows:

Isaac Mackie, of Fox Hills, made a total of 152, good enough to lead any ordinary field. He is tied with Tom Anderson, Jr., Fred Brand, C. R. Murray, and Dave Hunter for twelfth place. Hunter, by the way, made six 3s in his record round, as follows:

There were eighty-two starters, and all but three finished in accordance with the rule, although with totals of 165 or more will not be able to continue.

His downfall in the afternoon came at the second hole, where his drive found the brook, and he reached four niblick shots in getting out. After wasting the turn in 47 he came back in 37.

SECOND CAR GETS IN. Shawmut Machine Second in Ocean-to-Ocean Auto Race.

Seattle, June 24.—The Shawmut car rolled up to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition at 5.30 o'clock this morning, winning a prize of $1,500 in the ocean-to-ocean automobile race from New York to Seattle.

PHILLIPS GETS BACK. Columbian Oarsman Recovers and Returns to Poughkeepsie.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 24.—The gloom about the Columbia quarters was dispelled this afternoon, when Phillips, the varsity oarsman who had been in New York suffering from an ulcerated tooth, followed by an abscess, returned and reported for work. Rice did not put him in the eight in the evening row, however, leaving the boat as it went out yesterday. He said that Phillips had undoubtedly got back his seat at No. 5 by Saturday, as he wants to give him a rest.

Several of the men in the Cornell quarters are indisposed because of the excessive heat, and in the morning Courtney just took his crew out for about five minutes. Both Simpson and Suttin, who were out of the boat on Wednesday, are fit to go back, and will be rowing again in a day or two. Cornell took a good row early this evening, going down almost as far as Milton after the sun had set.

Strause was out in the morning for a paddle over the course in the broiling sun. Both crews rowed with a low stroke. Ten Eyck gave his men light work in the afternoon.

Wisconsin and Pennsylvania, occupying adjoining houses at Highland, sailed out in the middle of the forenoon and rowed over the course. Ward wants to be working his men hard enough. In the afternoon both crews went up the river to the start and came down slowly.

ALL QUIET ON THAMES. Harvard and Yale Oarsmen Yield to Tropical Heat Wave.

New London, Conn., June 24.—The extreme heat prevented the Harvard and Yale crews from making other than light practice, both this morning and afternoon. To-night there is a general celebration at the Harvard quarters, with a large bonfire and fireworks, on account of the baseball victory over Yale at Cambridge this afternoon.

The Harvard crew sailed out in the middle of the forenoon and rowed over the course. Ward wants to be working his men hard enough. In the afternoon both crews went up the river to the start and came down slowly.

NO STRIKE BY UMPIRES. Powers Denies Report of Trouble in Eastern League.

P. T. Powers, president of the Eastern League of Baseball Clubs, issued a statement last night denying the report from Philadelphia that his umpires had gone on strike because he had failed to back them up in their controversies with club owners and players. President Powers said:

"The report evidently grew out of the fact that Kelley and Connor are on leave of absence. There is nothing in the report, and I desire to state that I have no objection to my umpires in every way and will continue to do so, without fear or favor of anybody in baseball."

"I have disciplined players and collected fines right and left and backed up my umpires repeatedly. Kelley is ill in a hospital in Baltimore and I granted a leave of absence to Connor to be with his wife, who is ill at her home, in Philadelphia."

Jack Roberts, the home "pro," failed to come up to expectations by supplementing a 75 in the morning with a 78. A 7 at the fourteenth hole hurt his chances materially. Sargent, who is an Englishman, at one time worked under Harry Vardon. He plays an easy game and drives a long ball, and the gallery will probably give him some attention.

Andrew Campbell, who is not more than twenty years of age, will also be watching, while Alec Campbell and Gil Nichols, both of whom are tied at 148, are certain to fight hard throughout the remaining thirty-six holes.

Isaac Mackie, of Fox Hills, made a total of 152, good enough to lead any ordinary field. He is tied with Tom Anderson, Jr., Fred Brand, C. R. Murray, and Dave Hunter for twelfth place. Hunter, by the way, made six 3s in his record round, as follows:

There were eighty-two starters, and all but three finished in accordance with the rule, although with totals of 165 or more will not be able to continue.

GIANTS GET THE HABIT. WIN TWO MORE GAMES. Farce Comedy Follows Creditable First Act by Boston.

The Giants and the Doves figured in the second production of the great comedy entitled "Boston Trying to Win a Game from New York" at the Polo Grounds yesterday, and the comedians on both sides gave a representation that differed only in minor details from the highly successful first performance on Wednesday. As was the case then, Frank Bowerman's troupe gave a creditable imitation of a baseball team in the first act yesterday, and the Giants had to gather themselves together and bat in enough runs to win by a score of 7 to 4 in the eighth inning. The second act saw the comedy degenerate into an old-fashioned farce, and the Giants were thought of saving him, but "Red" took things pretty easily after the Giants had batted in five runs in the first inning. He made four wild pitches and hit one or two men, relying on his support for a good many of the put-outs. His trust was not misplaced, for a batting error got through the game without an error.

Larry Doyle had something of a fitting career in a substitute every time one of his outcasts reminded him of his existence, fitted getting into the second contest. Ames stayed in the box throughout. McGraw may have thought of saving him, but "Red" took things pretty easily after the Giants had batted in five runs in the first inning. He made four wild pitches and hit one or two men, relying on his support for a good many of the put-outs. His trust was not misplaced, for a batting error got through the game without an error.

ERRORS BEAT YANKEES. STILL ON THE TOBOGGAN. Cree Drives Ball Over Fence with No One on the Bases.

Philadelphia, June 24.—Defeat was the portion of the Yankees again to-day, errors letting the Athletics take the game by a score of 5 to 3, despite the fact that Manning outpitched Morgan. The Yankees could not bunt their hits, and were unlucky in having no one on the bases when Cree opened the third inning with a terrific smash over the right field fence, a drive thought to be impossible when Shibe Park was laid out.

Eiberfeld was at short for the Yankees to-day, his old position, as Stallings thinks he is needed to steady the infield. Knight played second base in place of Laporte, and Austin was at third. Laporte is likely to be back in the game to-morrow, however.

The new arrangement of the infield worked well, but Knight was a weak spot. Austin played his position at third base well, and made two hits as well.

Poor playing by Knight in the third inning helped the Athletics to a pair of runs, and two would have been out in the next inning before Morgan sent two men home with a two-bagger had Eiberfeld not made a mess of an easy grounder by Davis.

Cree made his great drive in the third inning, and two men got on the bases after he had come in, only to die there. It took three hits, moreover, to score one run in the fifth inning. Cree and Eiberfeld led off with singles, and Cree scored when Morgan struck out two batters. Engle and Demmitt failed to produce a hit, however.

Cree got to third on an error, and two outs in the seventh inning, and scored when Engle singled. That was the last chance of the Yankees, however.

The score follows: PHILADELPHIA: O'Leary, 2; Morgan, 1; Manning, 1; Engle, 1; Demmitt, 1; Cree, 1; Austin, 1; Eiberfeld, 1; Davis, 1; Laporte, 1; Knight, 1; St. LOUIS: Morgan, 1; Manning, 1; Engle, 1; Demmitt, 1; Cree, 1; Austin, 1; Eiberfeld, 1; Davis, 1; Laporte, 1; Knight, 1.
