BRIDGES THEORETICALLY DESTROYED.

An interesting part of the equipment of headquarters are the placards which have been prepared to indicate that bridges have been theoretically destroyed or trestles felled theoretically across highways to impede the movement of wagons and automobiles.

Dispatches received in the city during the day brought the news that a large part of the invading army had landed from transports somewhere on the coast of Buzzard's Bay.

The transports bearing the Red troops consisted of the steamers Puritan, Pilgrim, Boston and City of Taunton, and the army vessels the McClellan, the Sumner and the Meade.

The Red army met keen disappointment at Buzzard's Bay if it expected Boston's defenders to care as to whether it got ashore or stayed afloat.

GENERAL WOOD SATISFIED.

General Wood, who watched the movement with a great deal of satisfaction, said: "We learn more in a week of work actually in the field than in six months of theoretical warfare in office headquarters."

It is the biggest war game the country has yet played, and it has brought a more distinguished group of veterans together to see how its large scale maneuvers work out in the field.

Except at such times the generals of the army get really little to do. While the captains drill their companies and the colonels drill their regiments, the generals remain in quarters.

Definite results are sure to follow the maneuvers that will seriously affect any real New England invasion should one come while present warfare methods prevail.

It has already been demonstrated to the satisfaction of the military authorities of the country that no hostile fleet can successfully run past the forts in Boston Harbor, and the object of the present maneuvers is to ascertain whether such a foe could successfully make a rear attack on the city.

The rules for the present game provide that the attacking force shall be landed from transports under the supposition that no American battle fleet was on shore to prevent its approach.

At the request of the military authorities the small army of war correspondents in the field with both forces abstained to-day from giving the exact location of the different regiments.

TAFT BUSY WITH PEN

TEXAS TRIP UNCHANGED.

Practically Entire List of Census Men To Be Announced To-day.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.] Beverly, Mass., Aug. 14.—Although President Taft had an extended conference with Postmaster General Hitchcock this afternoon regarding some disputed census places, announcement of the names of the men and two hundred supervisors yet to be commissioned was withheld until to-morrow.

Only a few places are in dispute, and the delay in announcing the successful candidates heretofore agreed on and approved by the President was due to the inability of Mr. Taft to complete to-day the signing of the stack of commissions resting on his library desk.

Colonel Cecil Lyon, Republican National Committeeman from Texas, who hurried back to Boston last night when the Beverly curfew bell began to toll, returned to town this afternoon and accompanied Postmaster General Hitchcock to the Taft cottage.

Colonel Lyon said he wanted to talk over the President's trip through Texas next October, but that if the President should perchance bring up the question of census supervisors, he, the colonel, would be glad to discuss the subject with the Chief Magistrate.

As a matter of fact, Colonel Lyon is urging that the list of states entitled to a full list of census supervisors at the close of this conference with the President to-night, when asked if he had succeeded in moving the line, he declared that he had tried one end loose, anyway.

NO CHANGE IN TEXAS PLANS.

It has practically been decided that the President cannot alter his previously announced itinerary through Texas. A change was made to-day, however, in the route through Arizona to include Phoenix and Prescott in the places to be visited.

At Omaha, on September 20, the President will be entertained by the Aksarben, an organization of business men, who chose Nebraska spelled backwards for the name of their society.

Arriving at Omaha on Saturday, November 5, the President will be met with an address of welcome at the railroad station and will then go direct to the golf links, where he played so many games last winter as President-elect.

Disappointment in love, coupled with his failure to pass a Civil Service examination, caused Herbert Edmund Fleschner, a translator in the United States Navy, and a son of the assistant librarian at the Washington Public Library, to wander away in a daze from his home.

He went to the Western Union Building and found Fleschner peering back and forth in the corridor of the building.

"WHAT IS WINE?" NOW

DR. WILEY'S DEFINITION.

He Says It Must Be Made from Grapes, but Makers Think Otherwise.

[From The Tribune Bureau.] Washington, Aug. 14.—The familiar question, "What is whiskey?" promises to have a counterpart in the query, "What is wine?" Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the pure food expert of the Department of Agriculture, has made a ruling which is a reply to the latter question, but as his findings probably will be satisfactory to many wine makers, the query may continue to be a source of trouble to the government's chemists for some time.

Dr. Wiley has announced that wine must be made from grapes, which is a much more rigid definition than that of the famous French wine merchant, who said that the beverage could be made from anything—"even grapes."

The wine question was brought to the attention of the bureau of chemistry as a result of the practice of certain American wine manufacturers of adding water and sugar to the grape juice and making about three gallons of wine from about one gallon of grape juice.

Some of the manufacturers insisted that they had to add sugar to the wine in order to overcome the acidity of the grapes, especially grapes grown in the northern part of the United States.

Another objection of the bureau of chemistry is to the labeling as Rhine wine of wines made in this country from domestic grapes. It is asserted that this practice contravenes the pure food and drugs act, and that wine so adulterated cannot be labeled and sold as wine.
