

E. H. HARRIMAN BURIED IN THE SECLUDED ARDEN CHURCHYARD.

Workingmen of the Estate, the Family and a Few Personal Friends Present.

Arden, N. Y., Sept. 12.—E. H. Harriman was buried to-day in the little Arden churchyard with the same simplicity and absence of ostentation with which he had lived for more than a score of years as the neighbor and friend of the plain people of Orange County.

Though it was from the magnificent house at the summit of Tower Hill that the funeral procession came winding down the long road to the church, it was the simple farmer folk and workmen of the great estate, for the most part, who were waiting to assist in the last rites over the body of their friend.

Many of the dead man's friends had come by special train from New York to attend his funeral. But they attracted little or no attention among the rustic community.

At 2:30 o'clock the homely procession started from Arden House for the rustic church nestling among the pines at the base of the mountain.

The first three carriages carried the pallbearers, and behind the hearse, which came next, was the station wagon, in which Mrs. Harriman, her two sons, William Averell and Roland, and her three daughters, Mrs. R. L. Gerry and the Misses Mary and Carol Harriman, rode.

The friends who came from the house with the family were Judge Robert S. Lovett, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Trudeau, Dr. W. G. Lyle, Dr. W. Seward Webb, Charles A. Peabody and his family, and Archdeacon Nelson, of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

LOVETT WILL WAS READ.

Lovett Declines to Discuss Contents of Harriman Testament.

Arden, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Judge Robert S. Lovett and Charles A. Peabody returned to Arden House this afternoon after the funeral of Mr. Harriman and remained for about three hours. It is reported on good authority that the will was read to-night. Judge Lovett was one of Mr. Harriman's closest friends and Charles A. Peabody was his personal counsel.

It is believed that Mr. Peabody drew Mr. Harriman's will. Nothing is known yet of the contents of the document. Judge Lovett and Mr. Peabody returned to New York to-night on the 8:51 o'clock train from Turner.

SEES HALLEY'S COMET.

First Sight Recorded by Professor Wolff, of Heidelberg.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 12.—Halley's comet, for which astronomers the world over have been eagerly watching, had been seen, after an absence of seventy years, according to a dispatch received to-day at the Harvard Observatory from Professor Wolff, of Heidelberg.

The sight was obtained on September 11, 5642, in right ascension, 6:18:12; declination, 17° 11' north. It could be made out only with a large telescope.

The astronomical time of September 11, 5642, when the comet was observed, would be about 9 p. m., standard time, September 11.

Edmund Halley, the English astronomer, was born near London on October 29, 1656. He was educated at Queen's College, Oxford, and was elected a fellow of the Royal Society in 1678. All his life was devoted to scientific investigation, mainly in the branch of astronomy.

Among his most notable scientific achievements was his calculation of the orbit of the 1682 comet (the first ever attempted), coupled with a prediction of its return, strikingly verified in 1759 and 1835.

Some years ago the eminent astronomer Count de Foucault predicted the return of Halley's comet in 1910.

FOLLS CHURCH ROBBERY.

Former Sexton Accidentally Discovers Burglars at Work.

While passing the First Baptist Church, at Broadway and 79th street, shortly after 11 o'clock last night, W. E. Conway, who until a few months ago was sexton of the church, noticed a light in the sexton's window.

Magistrate Butts committed Muller without bail to await the result of the inquest on the two women, news of the death of Miss Duerr not being received until after court had adjourned.

His father was even more affected when his son was led away. Both offered to give bail in any amount, but Magistrate Butts told them the law was plain and he had no alternative except to hold the prisoner.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

KILLED A CHURCHGOER AUTO RUNS DOWN WOMEN GOING TO MASS.

Tire Bursts and Broker Loses Control of Machine as It Crashes Into Them.

Mass was about to begin yesterday morning in St. Elizabeth's Roman Catholic Church, at Broadway and 18th street, when the worshippers were startled by cries from the street and a noise that sounded like a pistol shot.

As the machine bore down on the women the tire of a rear wheel burst with a loud report and the car became unmanageable. Miss Soppie Duerr, a nurse in the Isabella Home for Aged Persons, at Amsterdam avenue and 136th street, received injuries from which she died later in the Washington Heights Hospital.

Her companion, Miss Theresa Appel, who obtained employment in the institution two days ago as a cook, received a compound fracture of the right leg and lacerations of the right arm. Father Lynch administered the last rites of the Church to both women, it being thought at the time that neither would recover. Muller was arrested.

During the nine years of her connection with the Isabella Home Miss Duerr has made a practice of going to St. Elizabeth's every Sunday for 9 o'clock mass.

Muller told Magistrate Butts in the Harlem court that they did not seem to hear the warning toot of the automobile horn, but stepped down from the sidewalk directly in front of the car. When they did see the approaching machine they became confused and stood still, and before he could apply the emergency brake they were pitched into the air.

The women were run down so quickly that the shrieks of the two victims and the bursting of the tire gave the first intimation that an accident had happened. Muller jumped out of his machine and ran to the aid of the women.

The crowd of parishioners was greatly increased by residents of the neighborhood and by automobile parties passing up Broadway.

Magistrate Butts committed Muller without bail to await the result of the inquest on the two women, news of the death of Miss Duerr not being received until after court had adjourned.

His father was even more affected when his son was led away. Both offered to give bail in any amount, but Magistrate Butts told them the law was plain and he had no alternative except to hold the prisoner.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

CURTISS WINS CONTEST GRAND PRIX AT BRESCIA GOES TO AMERICA.

Beats Rougier 20 Minutes and Gets $6,000—First Also in Quick Starting.

Brescia, Sept. 12.—Glenn H. Curtiss, the American aviator who won the International Cup at Rheims, added further honors to his brilliant record by capturing the Grand Prix in the aviation meet here. Curtiss made his flight for the grand prize yesterday, covering fifty kilometers (31.05 miles), or five times around the course, in 49 minutes and 24 seconds.

Rougier, the French aviator, also competed for the grand prize, making a flight of fifty kilometers in 1 hour 10 minutes and 18 seconds. To him was awarded the second prize.

Curtiss also won the prize for quick starting, his time being 8:15 seconds. Leblanc was second, in this contest, registering 9:35 seconds.

The last day of the international contests brought out an immense crowd of spectators, who came from all parts of Italy and many foreign cities.

After several test flights had been made by the different aviators, Rougier's aeroplane was brought out for his attempt to capture the grand prize. He made the first lap in 13 minutes and 50 seconds and the second in 19 minutes and 42 seconds, which included a stop to refill the tank.

Magistrate Butts committed Muller without bail to await the result of the inquest on the two women, news of the death of Miss Duerr not being received until after court had adjourned.

His father was even more affected when his son was led away. Both offered to give bail in any amount, but Magistrate Butts told them the law was plain and he had no alternative except to hold the prisoner.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

At this light was suddenly extinguished. Conway was convinced that something was wrong, so he called up Police Headquarters and also hastened to inform Smith, who was at his home in 80th street.

The interior of the building had been stripped of nearly everything removable. In the pastor's study several closets had been broken into and their contents strewn around.

The search continued to a small room in the rear of the pastor's study. There in a closet a man was found, who gave his name as Max Remk. He said that he was a clerk out of work, and that he had no home.

CANADA CLAIMS POLE.

Asserts Formal Possession of All the Arctic Hinterland.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 12.—Canada claims all land directly north of the American continent, as far as the pole, upon which it would be possible to nail a flag. This position will be taken, it is semi-officially stated, in reply to a question asked in the British House of Commons, as to the ownership of the North Pole soon after the result of Cook's and Peary's explorations became known. The question was referred to Canada for reply.

Canada's answer in effect will be that all the territory between the North American boundary and the North Pole must be recognized as Canada's hinterland. The islands, it is maintained, have been formally taken possession of by Captain Bernier, Canada's Arctic explorer, who is now lost in the Far North.

The fact also will be pointed out that if the observations taken by the American explorers are correct and there is a depth of two miles of water at the North Pole, it is in the high seas and cannot be claimed by any country.

USE FOR THE NORTH POLE.

E. C. Pickering Suggests a Weather Bureau Station There.