Lawn a Sea of Derby Hats.

The grandstand was well filled, the lawn was a sea of Derby hats, with just one straw to break the monotony, while the clubhouse was crowded as if for a Suburban Handicap.

Thirteen horses went to the post for the Carter Handicap, the feature of an excellent programme, and Gretna Green, the winner, was No. 13 on the card. It was Friday, too, but the ancient hoodoo was not working, and everything ran off smoothly.

Those who saw Jack Atkin warm up were so impressed with his appearance that he was backed almost to the exclusion of the other horses, and went to the post at a short price. He showed no effects of his campaign in the South, and looked as fresh and strong as any time in his long career on the turf.

Tom Welsh and R. F. Little had every confidence in the three-year-old Prince Imperial, which ran in the name and colors of the Woodhaven Stable. The son of Orlando has not grown or filled out much over winter, but he appeared to be in good condition, and looked every inch a race horse.

GRETA GREEN A KEENE CAST-OFF.

Gretna Green was purchased two or three years ago at a wedding out sale of the James R. Keene horses, for $2,500. Albert Simons was the buyer, and he raced in his colors for some time, but later was turned over to John W. Schorr. The son of Ben Brush has never been considered a great horse, and has earned a reputation for being more or less erratic, but in fact, holds the American record for one...

PHILLIES TURN TABLES AND PILE UP SEVEN RUNS.

Philadelphia, April 15.—Although the Superbas outbatted the Phillies in the second game here to-day, they were unable to repeat their performance of Thursday, and were handily defeated by a score of 7 to 4. The visitors made nine hits off the home pitchers, but were weaker in the field, and several costly errors aided Philadelphia in walking away with the game.

A batting fest in the second inning gave the Phillies a lead which Brooklyn failed to overcome during the rest of the game. Three singles, a double and a pass netted four runs, and this was enough to truck the game away. Scammon was pounded badly and was forced to retire early in the struggle. Bell, who relieved him, pitched staidier ball and held his opponents down in better style.

Moren pitched six innings for Philadelphia, and while touched up for nine hits he kept them fairly well scattered. Moroney, who relieved him, had the Brooklyn batsmen at his mercy. He pitched a 1-0 game, and the score follows:

JEFFRIES HARD AT WORK

Champion's Wind Good After a Long and Trying Session. Ben Lomond, Cal., April 15.—James J. Jeffries to-day put in the hardest workout of his career since he left the ring.

Berger gave Armstrong instructions to send his punches in as hard as he could, and, obeying orders, the negro landed some smashing blows. When Jeffries came back for vengeance, however, the black refused to stand his ground. He was just able to go through the three rounds by dint of an extremely conservative attitude in the matter of mixing it with the big fellow. Jeffries worked a trifle faster to-day, but was handicapped by having to keep the full power of his punches up his sleeve.

DETROIT GETS A SHOCK

Defeated for Second Time in Extra Inning Struggle. Detroit, April 15.—To-day's game was almost a repetition of the opener, Detroit making it a tie in the ninth inning and Cleveland batting out four runs and winning in the tenth inning. Willett and Link both pitched fine ball, baseball luck being against the former, while Cobb could not beat Link, so that his passes did not count against him. Works was easy for the visitors. Bad weather conditions held down the attendance. The score follows:

FORDHAM SUFFERS DEFEAT

ATHLETICS WIN A GAME

Washington, April 15.—Philadelphia turned the tables on Washington to-day, winning by the score of 8 to 2. Bender was a puzzle with runners on the bases, while Reisinger was driven from the rubber in the second inning and Groom also was hit hard. A double play by Milan and Elberfeld was the feature. SINGLE RUN THE MARGIN RAYMOND IN POOR FORM

Quinn Holds Visitors to Five Hits, but Poor Support Brings About Defeat. Has One Bad Inning, and While Looked Like Safe Lead Is Lost.

Four costly errors made by the Yankees in the early stages of the game at the American League Park yesterday afternoon helped the Boston Red Sox to win the second game of the season by a score of 3 to 2. Once the home team staidied down Boston never had a chance to make the circuit, but the damage had been done in the first inning, when the Red Sox scored two runs. One more run in the third inning, due in part to misplays, gave Boston a lead which the home players failed to overcome, in the home game, a continuation of the fourteen-inning tie game on Thursday.

The playing of both teams grew better as the game went on. For the last four innings no Boston player saw first base, while Laporte's single in the seventh inning alone saved the Yankees from the work of both brilliant fielding and a single and a two-base hit in the latter part of the game, when Boston was straining every nerve to make victory sure and the Yankees were working their heads off to get the single tally which would tie the score and give more time to win a possible victory.

The most fair raising play of the struggle came at the beginning of the ninth inning, when Hooper, the first man up for Boston, drove a high fly to short right field. It was out of reach of Wolter, and looked like a safe hit, but Chase sprinted after the ball and, running with his back to the plate, caught it as it came down over his shoulder. Sweeney, too, made a circus catch in the eighth inning, when he got his hands on a foul ball which would have dropped into the boxes in front of the grandstand. He fell over the rail and went headlong into the box, but managed to hold on to the ball. Hooper and Speaker, in the Boston outfield, were less effective in shutting out the Yankees, and their playing went a long way toward saving the game for the Red Sox. McConnell, on second, stepped several grounders which looked good for his critical time.

Quinn pitched well for the Yankees, and with perfect support might have pulled out a victory. The need of some good hitters to start off the seventh inning forced Stallings to put Laporte and Knight in the game in place of Quinn and Criger, so Ford went to the box for the last two innings. Quinn pitched only two scattered hits, two of which, however, figured in the scoring. He passed one man. The Yankees did not do any heavy hitting, although they found Smith for seven singles. The Red Sox scored two runs in the first inning. Gardner let McConnell's grounder slip through his hand, and the runner was safe. Lord advanced him with a sacrifice and, when Speaker's single to center field brought McConnell home with the first run. Speaker stole second and scored another run when Criger let a pitched ball slip out of his hit.

The run which proved to be the one needed to win the game was made in the fourth inning, when only the steady work of Quinn kept the Red Sox from running up a larger score. Wagner opened the inning with a drive to left field, and took second on a sacrifice by Niles. He went to third when Gardner fumbled Hooper's grounder, and scored when Foster made a mess of a hard hit ball by Carrigan. With run on second and first base, Smith and McConnell died out in the fifth inning the Yankees pulled out of another bad hole, when two singles in succession by Lord and Speaker at the beginning made things look dark, but the next three men proved to be easy outs.

The Yankees lost two golden opportunities by poor base running in the second and fifth innings. When they scored two runs, but might easily have made more, in the second, with one out, Austin singled and stole second. Criger and Quinn walked to first, and the bases were full. Hemphill followed with a clean drive over third base, and Austin scored. Hooper made a quick throw to the plate to head off Austin, and Carrigan ran as if he had to Stahl in time to catch Hemphill off first. Wolter then grounded out to Wagner. Quinn opened the fifth inning by fanning, but Hemphill singled to left field and Wolter to right. Chase's scratch hit brought Hemphill home, but Wolter was caught off second base and Chase was out trying to steal.

The score follows: BOSTON. r 1 b o e a. Quinn, 4; Criger, 3; Foster, 2; Niles, 1; Hooper, 1; Gardner, 1; McConnell, 1; Smith, 1. NEW YORK. r 1 b o e a. Hemphill, 1; Stahl, 1; Wolter, 1; Chase, 1; Lord, 1; Speaker, 1; Carrigan, 1; Wagner, 1; Criger, 1; Quinn, 1; McConnell, 1; Smith, 1.
