BREAD STRIKE DEADLOCK

Big Bakeries Taking Brunt of Union Onslaught.

HOTELS' SUPPLY LARGER

Broadway Restaurants Fare Better—Strike Leaders Remain Confident.

Bread was still scarce in parts of Manhattan and Brooklyn yesterday owing to the strike of the bakers, but there was more of it in Manhattan, the large concerns affected by the strike being very short of men. According to the leaders of the strike, six hundred French bakers employed in the hotels will strike today. The bakers who struck before in half a dozen of the hotels were Germans.

It seemed to be the consensus of opinion among the proprietors of the principal hotels and restaurants in the Broadway district that the strike of the bakers would not affect them appreciably. The great majority of these places either bake their own bread or buy from outsiders.

At Shanley's restaurant it was said that all the breadstuffs were bought from an independent baker, while at the Hotel Astor, William C. Marchand, the proprietor, said that he employed his own bakers, and that even if this were not the case bread and rolls could be brought from Philadelphia, Baltimore or Boston and reach New York fresh in time for breakfast. None of the hotel proprietors who were questioned thought that he would be affected by the strike.

Strike Leaders Outline Demands.

The strike in Yonkers was reported to be practically won yesterday, and Charles H. Iffland, general organizer of the Journeymen Bakers and Confectioners' International Union, who was looking after the strike there, came to the city to assist Adgust Ganzer, the New York strike leader. Organizer Iffland and Herman Kintlein, of the executive committee of the union, made a joint statement in which they said: "It is not a fact that the union wants to run the business of the master bakers. The men want the union recognized, as the best way of getting fair wages and good working conditions."

The strike committee said that the kosher bread firms, whose bakers were not on strike, were supplying thousands of loaves and rolls to hotels and restaurants, and that the Philadelphia master bakers were also sending bread here. The amount they supplied, however, was not enough to relieve the scarcity.

Police Guard Bakeries.

The representatives of Fleischmann's and Cushman's bakeries admitted that new men were difficult to get. A representative of the Fleischmann company said that, while matters were improving, there was still a shortage in the restaurants they supplied with bread. To guard against trouble there were policemen at all the doors of the bakery and police near each corner. Ten new men were brought to work from Philadelphia, and were taken to the factory in the evening under guard. The firm, it was stated, has now something over thirty men working.

"We will get all the men we need eventually," said a representative of the firm, "but in a case of this kind it is slow work at the first. We have had little trouble, except for the gathering of crowds around the factory after dark. The mischief-makers, for the most part, however, are not strikers, but either sympathizers or boys."

Alleged Striker Stabbed.

One strike incident yesterday was a stabbing and a number of small fights. The stabbing took place near the headquarters of the strikers, in the Labor Temple, where it was reported that three men were stabbed; but names were not given and the police knew of only one. An alleged strikebreaker named John Koboc was near the factory after dark. The mischief-makers, for the most part, however, are not strikers, but either sympathizers or boys.

Just after the strikers attended a meeting at their headquarters, in the Labor Temple, they saw George Stanz, of No. 631 East 135th street, driving a wagon of bread from Egler's bakery, 624 street and West End avenue. A mob of several hundred surrounded the wagon. Some of the mob held the horse while others clambered on the wagon and tossed the loaves to the street, where they were trampled and kicked around. Policeman Herbert, of the East 88th street station, heard the noise, and when he saw what was going on telephoned to the station for help. A number of resources came in a patrol wagon from the station and the crowd scattered. The

ALDERMEN IN UPROAR

Terrible Time Over Scrubbing of the Queens Courthouse.

It threats made yesterday are kept, it may be impossible to get any sixty new resolutions appropriating money through the Board of Aldermen. The deadlock between the Democratic majority and the Republican minority came yesterday over the question of giving Borough President Greaser of Queens an amount of money for cleaning the new courthouse, which is considered exorbitant by experts.

The debate caused a dispute between Alderman Downing and certain Democratic members, in which he called them ruffians, loafers, jackasses and blackguards. It looked for a time as if the meeting might break up in a fight.

The original request was for $9,000. After it had been defeated twice by the board Mr. Greaser consented to cut it down to $2,500, and it was reported out by the Finance Committee yesterday. Alderman Johnson, minority leader, immediately moved to amend by making the amount $10,000.

Alderman Walsh said Mr. Johnson was grinding the face of the poor scrubwoman who got only $2 a day, and that that sort of work caused socialism. "I want to say right now," he declared, "that unless President Greaser gets the money he wants I shall not vote for any appropriation for a Republican." Alderman Johnson said that he would follow the lead of Walsh. "I shall vote against every Republican request," he said, "no matter how ridiculous it makes me. If they want to play petty larceny politics I shall give them fair warning of what to expect."

As Alderman Downing started on one of his long speeches Alderman Levine began to rap on the desk. "Blackguard!" cried Downing, in a rage. As other Democrats laughed, he added: "Dirty loafers! Jackasses! You are ruffians from the East Side!"

President Mitchell was banging with his gavel, and aldermen were jumping up from all over the room. "Does the Alderman refer to me?" asked Alderman White. "I am from the East Side."

"No, I did not mean you!" "Ha, ha! He's afraid of you!" called Levine, recalling that White used to be well known in the prize fight.

"There he goes again," Blackguard! Miserable ruffian!" shouted Downing. "I call upon the chair to insist upon the withdrawal of this scurrilous and unparliamentary language," said Alderman Walsh.

"I withdrew it," said Alderman Downing, "but it is true. Blackguard! Miserable ruffian!" shouted Downing.

BRAVE ACT STIRS PRINCE

Chinese Visitor Sends Praise to Mounted Policeman.

BUSY DAY FOR TSAI TAO

Visits Grant's Tomb After Luncheon at Mr. Schwab's Home—Hippodrome at Night.

There was no relaxation for Prince Tsai Tao, of China, yesterday. In the morning, with the officers of his party, the royal visitor, who is an uncle of the Emperor of China, motored to the Meadows in Central Park and watched a drill by 150 men of various mounted police squads. Every button shone, and harness and puttees were burnished to brightness. Inspector Titus was in charge of the programme, and Lieutenant Matthew Corbett led the men in the drill.

An accident during the manoeuvres, a horse falling with his rider when the flying wedge was being executed, showed the prince to be both alert and capable of active sympathy. As quick as a flash, he turned to his doctor, Surgeon General Wu, and bade him go to the aid of the injured man. He was William Helms, of Traffic Squad C.

"It is nothing," said the policeman to the Chinese physician. "I will be all right soon."

"The prince wished me to tell you," said Dr. Wu, who spoke English, "that he thinks you are a brave man."

"The prince noticed that the man did not let me go of the reins, even when on the ground," Lord Li told Major Reginald Foster afterward.

The automobiles took the visitors from the police exhibition to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, where Joseph H. Choate and Edward Robinson, acting director of the museum, showed them the treasures of the institution. The prince was interested in the collection of J. P. Morgan and that of Heber R. Bishop, and he spent a long time also over a copy of the Natatorium stone which was found in China in the fifth century, and bears an inscription showing that the Chinese government at that time was conversant with Christian missionary work. The Japanese armor collection also interested the party.

Mayor Gaynor Calls.

The prince received a call from Mayor Gaynor at the Hotel Plaza at noon, by which time he had changed his silks, but they still were as quiet and modest as ever, the only piece of color being the jeweled insignia of the Imperial Order of the Dragon, which he wore over his heart.

Luncheon at the home of Charles M. Schwab, Riverside Drive, followed. Large financial interests were represented by the guests, many of whom were men who are prominently connected with the steel industry. The list included Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., John D. Rockefeller, Jr., George Westinghouse, Elbert H. Gary, Cornelius Vanderbilt, William E. Corey, George W. Perkins, Admiral Garcia of the Argentine navy; James A. Blair, Jacob H. Schiff, Charles R. Flint, Henry Phipps, Melville E. Stone, William G. McAdoo, Paul Morton, Charles A. Scribner, Frank A. Munsey, Chang Yin Tang, the Chinese Minister at Washington, and his son, Henry Chang.

There were more than forty guests in all. The house was decorated with Chinese and American flags and festooned with yellow and blue and red, white and blue. The royal standard, the dragon flag, proclaimed that a prince of the blood was within.

Mr. Carnegie made a short speech, in which he spoke of Chinese prowess, and alluded to the invention of the art of printing and of the manufacture of gunpowder. When Mr. Carnegie, who is president of the Peace Society, said that the latter achievement was not as praiseworthy as the former the sentiment was translated to the prince, who smiled broadly.

Visit to Grant's Tomb.

After the luncheon Prince Tsai went to the tomb of General Grant, and with Lord Li, whose father was a personal friend of the great soldier, and the Chinese Minister placed three wreaths on the monument. The party also saw the tree which was planted by Li Hung Chang.

Prince Tsai will have another whirlwind round of sightseeing and entertainments today. This morning he is to be whisked through the subway into Brooklyn, and later will be the guest of the Chinese Reform Association and the Chinese Merchants' Association at a dinner in the Chinese Tuxedo, No. 2 Doyers street. In the afternoon he will see the American Indian and comanche as displayed by the "Buffalo Bill" Pawnee Bill show, in Madison Square Garden, and the evening will be occupied by a dinner in his honor by Mayor Gaynor at Sherry's.

PRIZE BULL'S FATAL MEAL.

Ithaca, N. Y., May 3.—Picked fish killed one of Cornell's prize bulls to-day. He was a valued Guernsey attached to the College of Agriculture. Wandering into a department where students had been experimenting with fish preserved in formaldehyde, the bull partook freely and was found dead to-day.

MORE INTEREST IN CHINA

So Says Prince Tsai Tao at Dinner of Asiatic Association.

MEN BEING TRAINED HERE

His Country Depends Much on These to Bring About New Order of Things.

In his first public address in America, His Imperial Highness Prince Tsai Tao told the members of the American Asiatic Association at Delmonico's last night that the old order of things in China was passing, and he needed men able to do the work of reorganizing the nation. China, he said, depended largely on the men now being trained in the United States to carry out this work.

The gathering, which was the twelfth annual dinner of the American Asiatic Association, was a brilliant affair. The walls were decorated with the American flag and the Chinese dragon, while the uniforms of the prince's retinue and those of the officers of the United States army, together with the flowered and broadened silks of the prince and the civilians in his suite, added a touch of picturesqueness to the scene.

General Thomas H. Hubbard presided, in the absence of Seth Low, president of the association. At his right was the guest of the evening and on his left was Chang Yin Tang, the Chinese Minister. At the guest table were also Lord Li-Ching Mai, Dr. F. W. Williams, of Yale University; Consul General Yang, the Rev. Dr. John Handley, K. Midumo, Consul General of Japan; Henry Chang, secretary of the Chinese Legation; Sias D. Webb, Secretary Yung Kwei, Lowell Lincoln, Brigadier General Walter Howe, Brigadier General Ha Han Chang, Adjutant General Nelson H. Henry, Colonel Hugh L. Scott, Colonel W. S. Schuyler and the Rev. W. C. E. Wrigley.

Among other present were Rear Admiral Bronson, Brigadier General Stephen P. Jocelyn, Charles M. Schwab, John Ford, Vice-Consul Yamashiki, James Speyer, Edwin Hawley, Charles A. Conant, Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, Colonel Hsu-Chih Shan, Colonel Yao-Pao-Lai, Colonel Liu-Eu-Yan, Lieutenant Colonel Chang-Shao-Yuan, Major M. G. Zainiski, Colonel Tien-Sien-Chang, Captain H. R. Lemley, Major Tung Chang, Surgeon Major Wu-Wol-Yu and Captain Pang-Pang-Chang.

Messages of regret at their inability to attend were read from President Taft, Secretary of State Knox, Secretary of War Dickinson, Governor Hughes and the ambassadors of Japan, Germany, Russia, England and Mexico.

General Hubbard in welcoming the imperial guest said that further knowledge of each other was all that was needed to strengthen the bonds between the United States and China.

His Imperial Highness delivered a short address in Chinese, and a translation in English was read by Yung Kwei. "The work of this association," he said, "has rendered China better understood by Americans and America better understood by Chinese. One of the chief objects of my mission is to promote this good understanding. It is an encouraging sign that Americans are taking a greater interest in what is going on in China. Our officials and merchants are beginning to travel more to foreign countries. This thirst for information is having its effect upon the whole country. China is passing through a great crisis. The old order of things is fast giving place to the new. What we need most now is men able to do the work that has to be done."

Minister Chang-Yin Tang said a few words of appreciation of the work of the American Asiatic Association, and Brigadier General Ha Han Chang responded for the national Chinese army, sketching the progress made in recent years toward reorganization. Dr. F. W. Williams and Brigadier General Walter Howe voiced their tributes to the Chinese character and their hopes for continued friendship between China and the United States.

CALLS TRUSTEES DISHONEST

Surrogate Scores Women Who Tried to Get Nephew's Estate.

Surrogate Thomas removed Mrs. Maria P. Sterling and Mrs. Hannah E. Brown yesterday as trustees of the estate of their nephew, J. Edward Cramsey, of Dover, N. J., on the round of their dishonest acts.

Cramsey's mother, Mrs. Harriet Cramsey, died in 1887, leaving her property to her husband and four children in equal shares for life. By the will the plaintiff became one of the collateral heirs, but it was found in settling up the mother's estate that he had sold his interest, worth more than $15,000, to Charles A. Sterling, a cousin, for $200.

When Cramsey brought suit to have the deed set aside, Sterling said he had acted as the agent of his mother and Mrs. Brown, his aunt, and had immediately conveyed the property to them.

Cramsey also brought an action in the Surrogate's Court to have his aunt removed as trustee. They said that any adverse action taken by them to their nephew's interests was for the reason that they believed him to be illegitimate. But Surrogate Thomas set aside their contentions and declared the deed of assignment was fraudulent and that the aunt was not fit persons to act as trustees.

To deal with him as legitimate, secretly planning to justify their evil treatment of him by asserting his illegitimacy, was not honest," said the court. "I am unable to see how I can impose innocence or lack of intention to them."

DR. VAUGHN'S TESTIMONY

Cyanide and Strychnine Found in Swope Bodies.

Kansas City, Mo., May 3.—Dr. Victor C. Vaughn, a toxicologist, of Ann Arbor, Mich., regarded by the state as its most important witness in the trial of Dr. B. C. Hyde for the alleged murder of Colonel Thomas H. Swope, began his testimony late to-day.

Searched for poison made by him alone and also with the aid of Dr. Walter S. Haines, of Chicago, said Dr. Vaughn, had resulted in the discovery of the following: "Twenty-six thirty-thirds of a grain of strychnine in the entire liver of Colonel Swope. A trace of cyanide in a kidney. A suggestion, but no positive proof, of cyanide in the stomach of Chrisman Swope. Strychnine in the contents of the stomach of Miss Margaret Swope. Cyanide in capsules said to have been thrown into a street by Dr. B. C. Hyde the night he was expelled from the Swope home, last December 18, after the death of Colonel Swope."

In reply to hypothetical questions regarding the convulsions suffered by Colonel Swope, Chrisman and Margaret Swope, Dr. Vaughn said that in his opinion they had been caused by the administration of some convulsive poison. Cyanide or strychnine would produce such symptoms, said the witness.

COULDN'T SHUT OUT RIVAL

Supreme Court Decides Against Tammany District Leader in Bronx.

Justice Greenbaum decided yesterday that the fact that Edward V. Handy
