REDS BLOW UP GIANTS.

But Victims Furnish Bombs in the Shape of Errors.

BIG CROWD AT MASSACRE

Local Men Find Gaspar's Curves, but Not at the Proper Time.

Merrily fumbling and stumbling their way through the game with a total of eight errors, New York presented the Cincinnati Reds with a victory by a score of 8 to 2 at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon. A crowd of twenty thousand persons watched the Giants led like lambs to the sacrifice and groaned at the halt in their victorious career. Gaspar, who once before this season succeeded in breaking a string of defeats for the Reds, officiated on the mound. The home nine pounded him for nine hard hits, which, however, he kept more or less scattered.

If the exhibition which the Giants gave has been lying dormant for two weeks, it is perhaps fortunate that they got it out of their systems and now have it over with. There are some crucial struggles in the near future when such playing will prove costly to pennant aspirants, and perhaps it was wise to antedate the evil day. As Macbeth remarked on an occasion of almost equal importance, "'Twere well it were done quickly."

The Giants did not show any disposition to expedite the ghastly work, but spread out the errors over nine long, grewsome frames. Devore, Murray and Raymond managed to escape, but every one of the other players had a misplay chalked up against him. It must be said that "Big Chief" Meyers had one of his worst days. He made only one good throw to second base, when he managed to nip Paskert stealing in the third. The visitors ran wild on the bases, coaxing him to throw, and invariably the ball went too high or too low, going so far over Bridwell's head in the ninth that Hoblitzell scored from second.

Merkle appeared at first after a temporary rest, which did not seem to have done him any good. Two men got on the bags in the first inning through his crude work. It must be admitted, however, that his path wasn't strewn with roses when the throws that Devlin and Bridwell sent his way are considered. He gave a touching exhibition in the fifth, commonly known as a "barry." With two out and Paskert on third, Hoblitzell rapped a grounder to Merkle which the latter fielded in good form, but for some unaccountable reason stood still in a position of nonchalant repose while Hoblitzell went to first and Paskert scored.

There was one redeeming feature, however; that was his hitting. He made two singles and a double. His second single tallied the only two runs which the Giants scored. Devore, too, had a little batting bee with his two singles, one of which he tried to stretch into a double, but was put out by Bescher's fast work. Bridwell connected for a double and a single.

Drucke, who pitched the first six innings for the Giants, deserved a better fate. While the visitors found him for seven hits, he kept them well scattered, and they would not have counted except for the fiendish suport which he received. The Reds earned only one of the five runs which they tallied while he was in the box. "Bugs" Raymond succeeded him and worked under difficulties. He pulled out of a bad hole in the eighth when, with one out and two men on bases, he struck out Gaspar and Bescher, but numerous errors sprinkled about effectively in the other two innings helped the Reds considerably in tallying three more runs.

The visitors played well, making only one error. The playing of the outfield of the Reds was the bright feature of the game. Bescher and Paskert played in wonderful form, the former making some thrilling catches, which robbed the Giants of almost certain hits, and he was credited with five put outs. In the third inning Bescher made a circus catch of Murray's drive after a run nearly to the left field bleachers.

Several hundred friends of Tom Clarke, the Cincinnati catcher, whose home is in Corona, Queens Borough, contributed toward a watch fob with a diamond studded gold charm, with the emblem of the Knights of Columbus, which he received from a delegation just before the game. Some friends of Clark Griffith sent him a bouquet of roses, wishing him luck on the Eastern trip. The Reds gathered around the plate at the presentation with heads uncovered in reverent attitude, while a photographer took their picture.

The visitors scored in the first inning when Bridwell made a bad throw of Hoblitzell's grounder, giving the runner a life. He stole second and tallied on Mitchell's single. Another run was scored in the fourth, when Doyle's error let Hoblitzell get to second. Mitchell sacrificed, but Drucke threw wild and hit the runner at first, the ball rolling toward the stands, and Hoblitzell crossed the plate. Two singles and two errors added two more runs in the fifth, while in the sixth the Reds really earned a run. Egan singled and stole second, going to third on Jim Doyle's sacrifice. He came home on Clarke's sacrifice fly.

The seventh inning saw Raymond in the box. Devlin's error gave Bescher a life. He stole second, advanced to third on a sacrifice, and tallied on Mitchell's sacrifice fly. Raymond hit Paskert, the first man up in the ninth. Hoblitzell's single sent him to third. Egan grounded to Doyle, who was slow in throwing to first, and Egan was safe, Paskert scoring. Egan started to steal second immediately. Meyers made a heave over Bridwell's head, and Hoblitzell tallied.

The Giants scored two runs in the fourth inning. Seymour's terrific smash went for a single when it took Gaspar in the shins and bounded to left field. Bridwell singled over third, while Devlin sacrificed and advanced both a base. Merkle's single through short brought both home. In the fifth inning Devore and Doyle opened with singles, but the brilliant work of Paskert and Mitchell in the field shut off all scoring, Paskert taking flies from Murray and Bridwell, while Mitchell speared a hot one from Seymour's bat. Gaspar then tightened up and allowed only one hit for the rest of the game.

BROOKLYN RUBS IT IN

Superbas Defeat Pittsburg Once More—Bat Like Fiends.

One of the biggest crowds which ever packed the stands at Washington Park saw the Brooklyn Superbas wallop the world's champions for the third time yesterday afternoon by a score of 9 to 4. It was the seventh consecutive victory for Brooklyn. Adams, of championship series fame, started in the box for the visitors, but he only lasted two innings after the heavy hitting home nine got after him. Maddox had indifferent success for the rest of the game. Brooklyn piled up a total of twelve hits and played errorless ball withal. Although the visitors found the three Brooklyn pitchers—Wilhelm, Knetzer and Barger—for thirteen hits, they were unable to bring in the winning runs.

Byrne was the hitting star of the game, getting four safe drives, a double and three singles, out of four times at bat. Daubert, Wheat and Hummel, batting in succession, however, was a hard combination to beat when it came to hitting, and Erwin himself got three hits out of three times at bat.

Brooklyn scored in the first inning, only to have Pittsburg take the lead in the second. Here the home nine came back and tied the score and even took a lead of two runs in the fifth. Pittsburg tied things up again in the sixth. Then the Superbas decided that they would settle things once for all.

At the beginning of the lucky seventh Smith drew a pass and Erwin was safe on Maddox's error. Dahlen took a hand in the game at this point, batting for Wilhelm and advancing both runners with a sacrifice. Wagner took care of Burch's pop fly. Daubert singled, however, and scored Smith, Erwin taking second on the throw-in. Wheat unbuckled a double, which brought Erwin and Daubert home. Ground rules alone prevented the hit from being a home run. Hummel then singled, scoring Wheat with the fourth run of the inning and putting the game on ice.

Storm Citadel of White Sox

Hughes's Gatling Delivery and Yankees Howitzer Batting Too Much for Chicago.

Chicago, June 4.—The New York Americans defeated the Chicago White Sox by a bit of heavy hitting this afternoon. The final score was 3 to 2. The home nine played an errorless game, but Hughes, who pitched for the visitors, held his opponents down to six scattered hits, and they were helpless. He had a weak spell in the ninth, when Blackburne followed Gandil's triple with a single, and which brought in a run, but Hughes tightened up in time.

The Yankees played a fast game in the field and pounded out victory, having a total of eleven hits. Every one in the line-up figured in the batting, with the exception of Hughes. Foster, on account of the earnest solicitation of his friends in Chicago, played short in place of Roach, and made two singles. Chase and Cree connected for timely doubles, while Wolter recovered his batting eye to the extent of singling twice in five times at bat.

Chicago scored in the second inning, Dougherty leading off with a double, going to third on a sacrifice and scoring when Austin threw Blackburne's grounder to the bleachers. Gandil's triple and Blackburne's single tallied the other run in the ninth.

The Yankees scored two runs in the sixth inning. Hemphill flied out, but Wolter lined a pretty hit to left field and took third on Chase's double. Laporte dropped a single to left field, sending Wolter home, Chase going to second. He was out at the plate on Cree's grounder, but the latter got a life at first, Laporte moving to third on the play. Foster made good with a single, scoring Laporte. Cree opened the ninth with a double and tallied on Austin's single.

Sweeney's Drive Wins Game for Boston in Twelfth Inning.

Boston, June 4.—An exciting contest between the Chicago Cubs and Boston was decided in the latter's favor to-day when Sweeney hit the first ball pitched by Brown in the twelfth inning over the left field fence for a home run, the only tally of the game.

Both pitchers got sensational support, Herzog's playing being especially brilliant. Each team had many chances to score, but hits were not forthcoming with men on the bases.

EASY ONE FOR HARVARD

Crimson Hits Abound and Cornell Is Soundly Trounced.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]

Cambridge, Mass., June 4.—Harvard scored runs galore in the first three innings of to-day's game against Cornell and the Ithacans were beaten by a score of 8 to 1. Goodwille lasted only one inning in the box for Cornell, when five runs on as many hits and two errors were made. Carvajal, who followed, was hit safely ten times, but Harvard got runs only in the second and third innings, losing other chances to score by careless base running.

McLaughlin, Harvard's regular first baseman, was in the box for the Crimson, being hit for seven singles. Cornell failed to score until after two men were out in the ninth inning. McLaughlin used the spit ball effectively, although he fanned only two men, the Crimson infield doing some remarkably fast fielding behind him.

Every Harvard batter, except Hicks, connected safely at least once against the Cornell pitchers, Rogers, Potter and Captain Lanigan getting three hits each and Minot contributing a double and a triple.

In the first inning seventeen Harvard players were at bat, the bases being filled when the last man was thrown out. Potter, Lanigan and Marshall hit safely in this inning and Rogers got two singles. Passes to McLaugh
