row, and hope to get permission for early morning flights, despite their known objections.

One thousand feet up in the air isn't much of a height for the bird men these days.

Time was, though, since heavier than air machines began business when such "recklessness" was undreamed of.

The first real record for height was made by Wilbur Wright in 1908, and seems ridiculous now.

The contest failed to stir the blood of spectators to fever heat till Wright made his 1,000-foot flight.

On November 19, 1909, at Chalons, France, Paulhan beat the previous altitude record of Orville Wright by flying at 1,200 feet.

On November 29, in a magnificent cross-country flight from Chalons, around the Rheims Cathedral, Paulhan rose to the dizzy altitude of 1,900 feet.

On January 7, 1910, then Paulhan made 4,136 feet five days later.

At these heights an aeroplane almost fades from the sight of the spectators below.

DISTANCE RECORD

BROKEN AT RHEIMS

Labouchere Flies 211.14 Miles in 4 Hours 37 Minutes and 45 Seconds.

MORANE AT GREAT SPEED

Covers 3.1 Miles in 2 Minutes and 56 Seconds—100 Kilometres Record Smashed—Daring Flights.

YESTERDAY'S RECORDS AT RHEIMS.

World's record for distance—M. Labouchere, 340 kilometres (211.14 miles), 4 hours 37 minutes and 45 seconds.

Speed record—Leon Morane, 5 kilometres (3.1 miles), 2 minutes and 56 seconds; 10 kilometres, 5 minutes and 47 seconds.

Bethany Plain, Rheims, July 9.—Many records have been broken at the aviation meeting here during the week, but the most sensational flights have been made by Leon Morane, the French aviator, who to-day in a new 100-horsepower Blériot monoplane covered five kilometres (3.1 miles) in 2 minutes 56 seconds, and ten kilometres in 5 minutes 47 seconds.

The most remarkable achievement of a remarkable day was that of Morane, who made his flight of more than a mile a minute while ten other machines were in the air.

The day closed with additional time and distance records. Ollivier's record of the 100-kilometre record (62.2 miles) in 1 hour and 8 minutes.

Legagneux, in a biplane, with a single passenger, made a daring flight. He circled the towers of the Rheims Cathedral, flew over the city for half an hour and returned to the field.

FRENCH AERONAUT'S RECORD

M. Tabuteau Flies 231 Kilometres in a Biplane. Buc, France, July 9.—M. Tabuteau flew 231 kilometres (143.68 miles) in two hours and forty-five minutes, beating the world's record for biplanes.

FAST HEMPSTEAD FLIGHTS

Harmon Up with Pontoons Before Soaring Over Sound. Garden City, Long Island, July 9 (Special).—Flying first high, then low, and with two pontoons attached to his biplane, Clifford B. Harmon gave a splendid exhibition with his Farnam biplane on the Hempstead Plains here this afternoon, and was cheered by five thousand persons and the tooting of many automobile horns.

As soon as Harmon came out and rose one hundred feet, the spectators began to cheer and shout applause to him, and they never let up until he had come down at the end of fifteen minutes, during which time he had circled the course several times and had kept his biplane under perfect control.

Harmon was trying out his biplane with the pontoons in anticipation of a flight over the Sound on Monday afternoon.

terday all such estimates were given up early in the day. Every trolley and train, steamboat and sailing craft was loaded to the guards, and if there was an inch of space to be had on any contrivance that was leaving the city it must have kept carefully hidden.

If any enterprising man could have secured the concessions to rent out the public fountains and park lakes within the city limits as bathing resorts he would have reaped a harvest. The police were either too weary themselves or too sympathetic to interfere with the swarm of boys who doused themselves in the fountains' depths.

The shady spots in all the parks were peopled by a motley army of the sufferers. They arrived in the morning and ate their meals to the accompaniment of the music of rustling leaves and cooling winds.

Suburbs as Bad as City. If Manhattan writhed in the grip of the heat Nemesis, Brooklyn and neighboring suburbs experienced equal or worse conditions.

Brooklyn fairly sizzled in the ovenlike conditions, and many of her citizens camped out on the big bridges, there to catch a stray salt breeze now and then.

Humans were not the only individuals who panted in the heat. The animals in the Central Park and Bronx zoological gardens lolled their tongues out and tried to crawl into any bit of shade they could find.

Stonybrook Chautauque Hears Mayor on Enforcement. LAXITY IN SMALL VILLAGES Declares New York and Other Big Cities Are Stricter than Small Country Places.

[By Telegraph to the Tribune.] Stonybrook, Long Island, July 9.—Ten thousand policemen in New York, and people think you should have ten thousand honest ones, when the truth is it is pretty hard to get an honest police commissioner.

The Mayor was talking on the enforcement of the law in cities, and he declared that the first and hardest step was to put our laws in such shape that they would not be a temptation to petty grafters.

Passion for Arrest of Others. "When I meet a man whose chief passion is the arrest of others I know immediately that I face a man of a criminal life," said the Mayor.
