

COLLEGE GOLFERS READY

Ready for Individual and Team Titles Next Week.

CONTEST TO BEGIN TUESDAY

Several Institutions Hope to West Laurels from Yale—History of Fixture.

Programme are out for the annual intercollegiate golf championship tournament to begin at Baltimore on Tuesday, September 26.

Because of the fact that Monday is Labor Day it was found necessary to make a change in the original plans, which had provided for five days of continuous play.

On Tuesday morning the programme calls for the first round of the team championship, the opposing forces meeting in four-day matches. Singles will be in order in the afternoon.

The second round will be in order on Wednesday, with the final round for the championship to be played on Friday morning with an afternoon testing round, sixteen to twenty for the title.

The first round of the team championship will be run on the afternoon of Saturday, August 27.

At present the Intercollegiate Association has named Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Dartmouth, Williams, Columbia and Cornell.

It is not known how many of these universities will try for team honors in the tournament a year ago when the Essex County Club, Manchester, Mass., the individual title was won by Robert Hunter, of Yale, and the first forces won the team championship.

It was back in 1887 that the college boys first met in tournament play over the links of the Ardley Club.

This organization presented a fine cup for a team match, to become the property of the university that would win three times, conditions stipulating that the first three contests should be held over the course of the Ardley Club.

Yale won two games, once after the play-off of a tie with Harvard and the latter won the matches held at Ardley, one in 1887 and two in 1888.

The tie that was caused by a draw of one hole in the team match was the only one in the history of the game.

The system of the year of its adoption, the system, with the passing of the conditions to bring it into existence, became too cumbersome, and three years ago the preliminary matches were counted by one point, and in the final on the Nassau three-point plan.

The one-point plan a match has since been voted the official manner of scoring.

At the Atlantic City Country Club in the spring of 1901, Harvard's third team match was the last of the present system.

The Intercollegiate Golf Association was voted to ship in $100 apiece, with which to buy a new team prize, which was to be a perpetual trophy.

The cost was $200 more than had been anticipated—and it put the league into debt. This is now off the books and there is a cash surplus in the treasury.

The college golf associations have no revenues from a gate or from any of the college sports that make money each year, and it has consequently become necessary to get the main league on a "pay-as-you-go" basis.

In 1906 the executive committee of the United States Golf Association voted a handsome piece of plate to the Intercollegiate Golf Association as a perpetual trophy.

In accepting the trophy for which they are now out of debt, a three-win-and-out prize. The success of Yale at Hove Brun in 1908 was the third in succession, and gained the permanent possession of the trophy.

After the first individual championship won by Louis Hayward, there has been a change in the hands of the trophy eight times.

It is interesting to note that in the fall of 1908, when Charles Hitchcock, of the University of Virginia, won the national championship, H. B. McFarland, generally regarded as the best player ever in the Pennsylvania cohorts, was runner-up to Hitchcock, Jr., and H. Chandler Egan. Both when he met them were at the top of their game and in other years McFarland would no doubt have broken the tie for Pennsylvania.

The victory of Clow, Jr., was the first coronation of the student, the modernized garden City course. The many hazards along the sides of the course and the elimination of the cop bunkers across the fairway, with the rolling putting greens and the deep sand traps—although the course was not by any means as puzzling in these respects as when ready for the amateur championship, in 1908—quite forced the college boys. Not rising to the occasion, they foretook the wood from the tee and the second shot.

Thus proving their inability as all-around golfers, was the comment of Walter J. Travis when told what the boys were doing.

The list of former winners follows:

Yale, 1887; Harvard, 1888; Yale, 1889; Harvard, 1890; Yale, 1891; Harvard, 1892; Yale, 1893; Harvard, 1894; Yale, 1895; Harvard, 1896; Yale, 1897; Harvard, 1898; Yale, 1899; Harvard, 1900; Yale, 1901; Harvard, 1902; Yale, 1903; Harvard, 1904; Yale, 1905; Harvard, 1906; Yale, 1907; Harvard, 1908; Yale, 1909; Harvard, 1910.

SCOTT'S FAST TWO MILES

Heavy Track Prevents Him from Nearing Berna's Record.

A heavy track and an exceptionally large field of runners were retarding factors in the attempt of Louis Scott, the brilliant runner of the South Paterson Athletic Club, in his effort to break the two-mile American record.

The games of the Long Island Chapter, Knights of Columbus, at Celtic Park, yesterday, Scott won the event by fifty yards, in 9:36, which was ten and three-fifths seconds behind the record held by Tel Berna, of Cornell, Eddie C. Jordan, of the Xavier Athletic Association, finished second, and Sam Rosenbaum, of the Morris Athletic Association, was third.

M. Heller and Rosenbaum assumed the pacing positions at the outset, carrying the field along at a cracking pace, with Scott well up.

The wide detours around the field, but notwithstanding this, he made such good progress that he occupied sixth place at the one-mile mark, passing it in 4:37. He was third at the one-and-a-half-mile post, in 7:07.

Heller, who had been showing the way, retired from the exhausting race a lap and a half from home, Scott assuming the lead. He plainly showed the effects of his efforts, but saved himself for the remainder of the distance, and finished with a good sprint.

Matt J. McGrath, despite the uncertain footing, succeeded in hurrying the sixteen-pound hammer a distance of 177 feet 4 inches, barely two feet behind the world's best performance, made by John J. Flanagan.

Democrats Take Steps to Oust Leader in Queens. Forty-seven prominent Democrats, representing nearly every Democratic ward, met in a conference yesterday to discuss a combination to eliminate Joseph Cassidy from politics in that borough.

The appointment a few weeks ago by County Judge Humphrey of James Cassidy to be county detective, makes four brothers of Cassidy who are now holding fatherly and drawing good salaries, while Cassidy workers who lost their places through their allegiance have been ignored.

It is said since the appointment of James Cassidy it is said that Cassidy district captains have been deserting by the wholesale.

ADMITTS TRIPLE MURDER

Richard Lee Wanted Money to Start Housekeeping.

PARENTS OPPOSED MARRIAGE

Young Man Says He Was Not in Right Mind When He Slew Father, Mother, Brother.

Evansville, Ind., Aug. 26.—William Lee, twenty-two years old, confessed late today that he murdered his father, Richard Lee; his mother and younger brother, Clarence, and then set fire to the house in the hope of concealing the crime at Booneville, early Thursday morning.

In a written statement, Sheriff Davis said Lee said that his motive was anger because his parents would not consent to his marriage with Mina Taylor, of Newburg, which he had planned for Thursday evening, and would not give him money with which to set up housekeeping.

When the confession was made public officers started with Lee in an automobile to prevent possible violence here.

Lee made a statement that he had killed his father in self-defense with an axe after his father had murdered his wife and younger son, but Sheriff Davis all of today pressed the restless prisoner for "the true story," and this afternoon Lee, asking for pen and ink, wrote a haltingly worded confession and afterward pleaded together, in answer to questions, a description of the horrible butchery in the three-room cottage at Booneville.

Lee said that he went on Wednesday night to Newburg, where he called on his fiancee and they talked of the arrangements for their wedding. He had had $100 in the bank, but had spent it, and he knew his parents had $50 in the house. He returned home late at night and his mother reprimanded him, he said. He told her he was determined to be married the following day, and she answered that he should not, that she must stay home, as he had killed his father in self-defense with an axe.

Suddenly he rushed into the room where his father, mother and brother slept, "I grabbed an axe by the door," he said, "and struck my father, but hit my mother. My brother raised up and I struck him. Then my father, who had been outside, ran in and started to grab me by the throat. I hit him and he fell. I was scared so bad that I did not know what I was doing. What scared me was that my father had threatened my life, and I was angry at what my mother had said."

Lee said he lighted a match to see what he had done, and overcame at the sight, dropped the flaming stick on the bed where his mother's body lay.

"The flames flashed up and blinded me," he went on, "and I jumped into my room, got into my own room. Lee said he hid on my trousers and ran to alarm the neighbors. I would not have done this thing for anything if I had any sense at all."

The fire in the Lee home was put out before the bodies, the skull of each crushed, had been more than scorched, and William Lee stolidly helped carry them out to the lawn, insisting that he did not know who they came to their death.

Lee is almost illiterate and has been an idler since boyhood, according to testimony at the coroner's inquest, which closed today at Booneville. His father, a plasterer, appeared to fear him and supplied him with money, even giving him a fourth share of the proceeds of the sale of some property recently.

Evidence produced to-day refuted Lee's statement that he went from the house immediately after he had started the fire. A basin, stained with blood, in which he had washed his hands, was found. Long grass hairs, supposedly his mother's, clung to the sides of it.

Hidden behind a door was a basket filled with dishes, knives and forks and kitchen utensils, which it is believed he had packed with the idea that he would escape the consequences of the murders and soon leave his own home. The lives of his father and brother were insured for $50 and this would have come to him on their death and that of his mother.

CAUGHT BY JERSEY POSSE. Alleged Slayer Guarded at Jail to Prevent Lynching. Sheriff Worrell and County Detective Parker, at the head of a posse, scoured the country about Mount Holly yesterday, in a hunt for Salvatore Argona, an Italian laborer employed on the farm of James M. Stokes, near Centerton. Argona was wanted for the murder of another Italian, Giuseppe Materl, who was also a laborer on the Stokes place. The two men had a quarrel, it is alleged, and Argona shot Materl, killing him instantly. Argona was captured late in the afternoon, and was lodged in the Mount Holly under a strong guard.

Feeling run high among the farmers, and a posse was quickly formed. After a careful search of the countryside, Argona was found hiding in a clump of woods and taken to the jail in the Sheriff's automobile.

Threats of lynching became so strong that Worrell decided to place an extra guard about the jail, lest a mob should attempt to storm the wall structure. According to a man, the Sheriff's posse confessed that he had killed Materl.

STEAMER RAMMED IN RIVER. Passengers of the North Star Put Ashore After Accident. While backing out from her pier in the East River, just below the Manhattan Bridge, last night, the steamer North Star, of the Metropolitan Steamship Company, was rammed and badly damaged by a New York Central carboat being towed down the river. There was a strong ebb tide running, and although Captain Lewis of the North Star and the tugboat captain signalled each other, it was impossible to avoid the collision.

The North Star was starting for Portland, Me., with two hundred Chicagoan passengers, and was loaded in the pier back to her pier. Captain Lewis found that the plates amidships had been badly bent and that water was pouring into the hold. The passengers were told that she would not make the trip, and at the company's ticket offices transportation on another vessel of the line, which will sail tomorrow, was given them. The carboat was not damaged, and proceeded.

HALF-MILLION-DOLLAR BABE. Birth of a Child Brings Fortune to Scranton, Penn., Couple. [By Telegraph to The Tribune.] Scranton, Penn., Aug. 26.—The stark last night called at the home of Charles R. Connell, nephew of former Congressman William Connell, and now Scranton is boasting a half-million-dollar babe.

The will of the baby's grandfather provided that if his father died without issue the $500,000 estate was to go to the children of the former Congressman, and inasmuch as Mr. and Mrs. Connell had been married eight years without having children, it began to look very much as if the provision would be fulfilled.

The arrival of the baby, however, nullifies this provision.

WRECKS BROADWAY SHOPS. Theatre Crowds See Effect of Explosion—Big Hat Saves Head. French corsets, diamond and pearl brooches, bon-bons and chocolates, large bunches of plate glass and bits of stone and wood were scattered all over the street last night at Broadway and 35th street, when something, the nature of which was not discovered, exploded in the third floor office of the building on the northwest corner. Crowds coming out of the theatres about that time were greeted by the novel sight of a stuff-boned French corset twining itself around an electric light pole, while bits of jewelry festooned themselves on telephone wires.

One woman, resident in sliken hobble and enormous picture hat, was in the center of the disturbance. A large piece of plate glass landed in her hat, and she was only saved from serious injury by the protecting spread of her headgear.

The force of the detonation blew out two windows in the building, which was occupied by a corsetier, a jeweller and an advertising office. The interior caught fire, but firemen extinguished the blaze.

ALARMS THE "ASTOR BLOCK" Negro Invasion Spreads South to Quiet Harlem District. Residents of the so-called Astor block, in 130th street, between Fifth and Lenox avenues, which has been considered one of Harlem's quietest and most desirable residential districts, were alarmed yesterday by the certainty that the negro invasion spreading southward from 135th street and Lenox avenue had almost reached the block.

In the course of the summer negro tenants have moved into the block between 132d and 134th streets on Fifth avenue, and now a sign has been placed on the house on the southeast corner of 134th street and Fifth avenue, advertising the premises for rent to respectable negro tenants.
